NEW-YORK CITY.

The Young Men's Christian Union as Theatres.

This Association met numerously on Tuesday night, at Clinton Hall. The President, Mr. WARREN, read a portion of the Scriptures, after which a letter from a sick member was read, in accordance with a suggestion in which a Committee of three was appointed to visit the sick of the Society.

The President, in introducing the subject of discussion for the evening, said (to the Society and at the Reporters) he wished it to be understood that what individuals said in debate was not to be considered the sentiment of the Society.

The question, "Can the Drama be made entirely worthy of the Christian's support?" was opened by Mr. WEDNMAN. He said it might be equally well asked could churches be made worthy of support The preacher was an actor. BEECHER and CHAPIN were accomplished actors.

Mr. LEACH, who had been connected with the stage (in a musical capacity,) felt called upon to speak. The same objections might be urged against entering mercantile life as against the theatre. Now-a-days it was almost impossible for a young man to become a salesman without becoming a liar. What then? Shall we do away with the counting-house? He has been behind the scenes of a theatre, and never saw more indecencies there than he had seen in some churches.

Mr. DUNN had never been inside a theatre. Those who argued that he therefore knew nothing of the subject, might as well say one could not judge a thief without witnessing his actions. The stage originated with BACCHUS, and, prima facie, it is wicked. The services of the Episcopal and Catholic Churches consisted of mere acting. He believed their churches synagogues of the Devil. Take men as they are, imperfect, and dramatic representations must be held of evil tendency.

Mr. NEWMAN thought because the drama had hitherto been abused it should not be given up. Make it better.

Mr. CUSHING, on the other side, denied that a merchant must be a bad Christian. He had been to the theatre, and spoke knowingly against it.

Mr. DWIGHT OLMSTEAD said the love of amusement was inherent in all men. We see it among Christians and among Feejees equally. We see it here in fondness for display at church and at the theatre. He saw "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the National, and was pleased to observe how the presence of rows of white cravats in the boxes restrained the boys from throwing peanuts in the pit. Some Peter Cooper might do much good by establishing moral plays and spectacles for the people on the old Roman plan.

After some further discussion (no vote is taken generally) the meeting adjourned.

PINEAPPLES, COCOANUTS, AND BANANAS.—This is the season for pineapples Some half-dozen schooners are lying abreast of each other in Burling slip, passing out their cargoes of this fine fruit, of cocoanuts, and bananas, which are piled up in immense heaps along the dock, whilst the dealers and their agents are busy in assorting and selling them. They come principally from Cuba, Nassau, N. P., St. Bartholomew, (St. Barts. for short,) and this neighboring Islands. The cultivation of the pine has become an important business within a few years, and yields to the Islands engaged in it no inconsiderable revenue. The crop this year is said to be unusually large, and we are likely to have a good supply.

Fruit-dealers, in this City, who have large contracts for supplying other cities, and the interior towns, have monopolies of nearly the entire crop in some of the Islands, which are managed by agents residing there. Messrs. GILMARTIN & PEABSALL, for instance have a contract with the producers in St. Bartholo' mew's to take their whole crop coming forward within a given time, amounting to about 70,000 dozens.

During the season proper, which continues from about the 1st of May to the 1st of July, nobody can purchase a cargo of Pines at this Island; but when the season is over, however, others can come in and get what may be left, at such prices as they can agree for.

They contract for the season to pay from 27 to 28 cents per dozen; they are all required to be of not less than a given size; the person who receives and counts them as they are put on board also inspects them; and, such as do not pass muster, have their heads and stems cut off, to mark them as useless, and are thrown overboard.

The schooner Golden West, Capt. DIXON, which was chartered by the parties named above, was detained at St. Barts for about 20 days after her arrival, to allow the pines to attain the necessary size to cut. She brought 4,500 dozen pines, and also some bananas. Large quantities of these pines are put up in this city in the shape of preserves. The pines from St. Barts are mostly gathered in the natural state, and are of a more acid flavor than the cultivated kinds of Cuba.

The schooner Eliza Jane comes from Baracoa, Cuba, and brings 50,000 cocoanuts, 1,925 bundles of bananas and 1,500 pines. These are considered the best that come to this market, being the largest, of a richer flavor and requiring less sugar in preparing them for the table. They cost 40 to 50 cents per dozen in Baracoa, according to quality, and the quantity purchased, and bring in this City about $17 per hundred. But they are more difficult to bring to market in a good condition, as they easily rot when exposed to bad weather, and a long passage is almost sure to spoil the whole cargo.

Cocoanuts cost about $15 per 1,000 and they bring here from $23 to $25 per 1,000. Bananas cost about 45 cents per bunch; they are cut from 10 to 15 days before they are fully ripe, that time being allowed for the voyage, and the stalk contains substance enough to fill out and ripen them, so that they arrive in good condition; but when cut too green, which is sometimes done, they wilt, turn black and rot.

Cocoanuts, if gathered before they are ripe, become sour and are then worthless.

TREAT FOR THE CHILDREN.—The little folks at Randall's Island had a grand treat yesterday. The Buckley Minstrels had the goodness to invite the Board of Governors to bring the children to witness the grand spectacle, "Aladdin." Accordingly, the President, Warden, and some of the Governors, brought them thither, in number about 600. No doubt the juveniles will talk about it, and remember the kindness of their friends, for a good while to come.

MORE DISEASED CATTLE.—Yesterday a large number of cattle arrived on board the Western World from Albany, designed for City consumption. Many of them were in a feeble and diseased condition. The street leading to the drove yard corner of Forty-fifth-street and Fifth avenue, was blockaded with disabled and dying oxen. Six of these died during the morning, and were immediately sent without the City limits by the City Inspector's officers. The balance, during the afternoon and night, were removed, and it is said, by butchers who do a respectable business in the City. It is reported that they had been fed on whisky slops or swill, and that their disease was not unlike that which afflicted so many hogs in Cincinnati several months since. Those that escaped the Inspector are doubtless now on sale in the markets and stalls.

PARADE OF THE SECOND BRIGADE.—The 4th, 5th, 6th and 75th Regiments, composing the Second Brigade N. Y. State Militia, (Gen. YATES commanding,) paraded on Tuesday in Hamilton-square. Gov. KING and staff were expected in town to review the forces, but on Monday night word was received that they could not be present. Of course, the review did not take place, much to the disappointment of all hands. The parade occupied nearly the whole day, and appeared highly creditable to the troops.

☞ St. Luke's Home for Indigent Christian Females was opened on Monday. The "Home" is at No. 487 Hudson-street, and with the ground attached, cost over $13,000. The ground is 150 feet by 200, and is now laid out as a garden, but will be covered by an addition to the present building as soon as the necessary funds can be raised. The house has eleven rooms, all neatly and comfortably furnished, and capable of holding three persons each. There are now eighteen inmates of the Home, of ages varying from 38 to 80 years. The premises and furniture are entirely paid for.

NIGHT-WALKERS ARRESTED.—Lieut. BENNETT and squad Tuesday night arrested, in the vicinity of the Park, fifteen night-walkers. They were brought before Justice CONNOLLY, who sentenced them to the Penitentiary for four months.

☞ A gentleman was seriously injured about 7½ o'clock this afternoon, by a brick which fell from a pile of refuse building materials in Beekman-street, opposite our office. He was taken into the office of Messrs. WHITLOCK, adjoining, where the wound upon his head was dressed.

OBSTRUCTIONS IN WEST AND SOUTH STREETS.—People who complain of bales of goods and other incumbrances on the sidewalk in Broadway, should take a walk in West and South streets, if they desire to see the art of obstructing the passage-way carried to its highest perfection. As much business apparently is done there ont of doors as in the stores. The numerous junk shops to be met with occupying the cellar of every other building, appropriate a very considerable space in front of their premises; old ropes and rigging and fish-nets that have seen their best days are arranged in monumental elegance on the sidewalk and are often the stumbling-blocks which effect the downfall of absent-minded gentlemen. The ship smiths do a great deal of their work out of doors, and their implements and raw material encumber not only the sidewalk but frequently a large portion of the roadway. Boiler-makers and repairers, too, with their eternal hammering may be seen at work almost in the middle of the street, while the resounding din from the buildings which they occupy show that men are equally busy inside. The wholesale grocers and hardware men have carts backed up against their doors continually, so that one is frequently compelled to resort to considerable ingenuity to get past. But the greatest nuisances are the out door eating counters for the convenience of those who do not care what they eat, where they eat, or at whose inconvenience they eat. Passers-by must not grumble if they are spattered with soup or bedsubed with grease, for those who board at these places are generally border ruffians, and no better could be expected of them. Second-hand hats and caps, knives, clothing and other commodities are exposed for sale along the sidewalks in these streets, and for a man who is in a hurry, whether on foot or on wheels, it would be better altogether to seek some other less-obstructed route.

WORMS IN SHEEP'S LUNGS.—At a late meeting of the Pathological Society in this City, Prof. ALONZO CLARKE exhibited a portion of the lung of a sheep, which he said was furnished him by Dr. A. K. GARDNER, with the request that he should give its history.

Passing through one of our markets, Dr. G. had observed a peculiar appearance upon the lung of a sheep's harslet, exposed for sale, and ignorant what it might be, had cut off a portion and left it with Prof. C. for microscopic examination.

Dr. C. stated that it had puzzled both himself and several other medical men who had seen it. It looked much like fibrinous effusion. It was white, opaque, slightly elevating the surface and extending in about a 1 16 of an inch, and in its entity occupied a noticeable portion of the organ. Examination showed it to be a mass of worms—the ascarides infecta. Dr. C. said that these parasites, it is well known, troubled dogs very much, who were often fed upon these valueless portions of animals. Whether it is owing to their being thus conveyed into the intestines of these animals he did not know, but thought it not unlikely.

☞ There were in this port, yesterday, 807 vessels, including 29 steamers, 174 ships, 140 barks, 133 brigs, and 331 schooners.

I. O. OF O. F.—Last evening, a lecture on "Odd Fellowship" was delivered by Mr. DEVOY, in the Lodge Room, No. 598 Broadway. It was prefaced and followed by appropriate selections of music, and a more lengthy selection followed. The attendance was crowded.

Filthy Streets.

I read a great deal in the newspapers about dirty streets, but as I seldom extend my walk beyond Broadway, have not perhaps appreciated the necessity of so much being written on the subject. I am now convinced that not half enough is said. I had occasion a day or two since to go from Fourteenth-street down Sixth-avenue, across to the river at Christopher-street. There was a complete stench all the way. It was perfectly sickening, though the day was cool, and I could not but wonder how people could live in such dirty, filthy streets, and keep well at all. Twenty four hours' residence in some of the streets I passed through, I should think sufficient to unsettle the most healthy stomach. The odor seemed to stick to my clothes for hours after I got home. If the streets are so offensive when the weather is cool, what must they be in hot weather, which is close at hand? We have for the last two or three seasons been threatened with the Yellow Fever. The City now seems ripe for it; sickness and death are inevitable. After some hundreds or thousands have died, perhaps there will be an effort made to get rid of some of the dirt; but would it not be better for those whose duty it is to see to this matter, to bear in mind the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." If there was less talk and a little more action on the part of our public authorities, the City may yet be saved from a great public calamity. It is a matter that seems to call for the interposition of the people themselves to remedy in some way. B. C.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—A regular Conventional Meeting of the Institute was held last evening at the rooms opposite the Cooper Institute, Prof. MAPES, President, in the Chair. There was an unusually full attendance of members, young mechanics, and ladies. The subject was "Steel, and its capacity for receiving and holding temper for practical purposes." It was stated that the Chinese make fine razors and cutting tools for all purposes, of brass of the same kind as is in use with us, composed of copper and tin in the same proportions, and that we have never been able to discover the method of manipulation by which this singular result is obtained. Many other interesting facts were called out showing the peculiarities of iron and steel. The subject for next Wednesday evening is the "Working of metal tubes, and the working of sheet metals."

MILITARY ITEMS.—On Tuesday, 26th inst., Gen. YATES' Brigade, consisting of the Fourth Regiment, Col. ED. HINCKEN; Fifth, Col. F. SCHWARZWALDER; Sixth, Col. JAMES C. PINCKNEY; Seventh, Lt. Col. HAGGERTY, will concentrate on Hamilton-square, for the practice of the volunteers of the line, commencing at 9½ A. M. A respite will be given for dinner. The command will be reviewed at 2 P. M. by his Excellency the Commander-in Chief, as is expected, when the practice will be resumed for his observation. Major ZOOK, of the Sixth Regiment, was on Tuesday evening last unanimously elected Lt. Colonel, and Adjt. RATHBUN (also unanimously) elected Major of said Regiment.

The officers of the Fourth Brigade will be drilled by its Chief, Gen. EWEN, on Tompkins-square, 25th, at 2½ P. M.

The Brigade will parade for field practice, on Hamilton-square, June 3, at 10½ o'clock A. M.

ARRESTED FOR VIOLATING ORDINANCES.—A man named OPHELIA was arrested for violating the City ordinances, by carting a large load of offal to some other point than that allowed by the City ordinances. He was taken on the corner of Fifty ninth-street and Broadway, by Lieut. BENNETT, of the Dismissed Force. Justice CONNOLLY, before whom he was tried, imposed a fine of $5, and required him to order the load of offal to Forty-fifth-street dock. He was sent up for two days.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—MARGARET MOONAY, of No. 293 Tenth-avenue, was brought by a Policeman to the Twentieth Ward Station house about 9¾ o'clock suffering from the effects of laudanum, which she had taken a short time before, with a view to suicide. A physician was called to attend her. At 11½ o'clock she was sufficiently restored to be taken home by her friends.

ACCIDENT.—GEORGE DIEBLY, a German 52 years of age, residing in Williamsburg, had both of his legs crushed about 11 o'clock last night, between the Ferry-boat and the bridge at the Grand street ferry. He was conveyed to the Eleventh-Ward Station-House, where he remained all night under the care of two physicians. Next morning he was sent to his home.

SHANTY BURNED.—A shanty situated in Lexington-avenue, between Forty-first and Forty-second streets, was totally destroyed by fire about 6½ o'clock Tuesday evening. It was owned and occupied by THOMAS HOGAN and THOMAS CUNNINGHAM. The damage done did not exceed $100.

SUN STRUCK.—A man named GROLEGLESKI was sun-struck yesterday, at the corner of the Bowery and Canal streets He was conveyed to the Tenth Ward Station-house, where he soon revived.

☞ Lieut. JOHN DALTON, of the First Ward, reports, on his return made to Chief MATSELL this morning, that "the majority of the streets in his district are in a deplorable condition for the want of cleaning, especially Washington, Greenwich, and all the intermediate cross streets on the north side. The stench engendered is very disagreeable."

☞ A dead infant was found last night in the sink of house No. 113 Twenty fifth-street. It was taken to the Eighteenth Ward Station house.

LONG ISLAND.

Celebration of the Twenty-seventh Anniversary of the Brooklyn Sabbath School Union—20,000 Children in the field.

The Twenty-seventh Anniversary of the Brooklyn Sabbath Schools was celebrated on Tuesday. The day was pleasant and not an accident occurred to mar the enjoyment.

At 3 o'clock P. M., the different schools of the City assembled in the churches, in accordance with the published programme.

The exercises in each church consisted of singing by the children, and short, sharp, interesting addresses by one or two speakers.

The schools, for the sake of convenience, were divided into two Districts, and immediately after the exercises in the churches, those belonging to the Western Division formed in procession and to music countermarched on Henry-street between Orange and Atlantic.

The Eastern Division formed in Clinton-avenue, and after countermarching, returned to their several churches to pineapples, cake, oranges, and lemonade. J. E. HAWFORD, Esq., acted as Grand Marshal. The children were all clad in their best and presented one of the finest spectacles ever seen.

As near as can be ascertained there were of teachers and pupils in both processions at out 20,000. Each school carried its banner, upon which was some emblematical painting, with a motto, the name of the school and church to which it was attached.

At 8 o'clock in the evening a meeting of Teachers and friends of the cause was held in the Pierrepont street Baptist Church.

The exercises were reading of the 35th chapter Isaiah, prayer by Rev. Dr. WISE, singing, reading of the annual report and addresses from Rev. Mr. QUACKENBOSH, Rev. Dr. KENNEDAY, Rev. Mr. STUDDY and others. The annual report was read by ANDREW SMITH, Esq., from which we gather the following particulars:

During this year the monthly concert has been sustained with unabated interest. For eight months of this year an agent was employed by the Union, who, besides obtaining contributions for the work, acted as a missionary in some of the heretofore unexplored regions of the city, and succeeded in aiding materially in sustaining several Mission schools in important localities of the city.

A few of the prominent churches have established and are wholly sustaining one or more schools in localities which have heretofore been distinguished for their destitution of the means of moral and religious culture.

The statistical portion of the report is not complete owing to the neglect of proper returns being made by the different schools—a deficiency which, it is promised, shall not occur another year.

It is estimated that, in all, not less than 20,000 different scholars are taught in the 93 schools in the Union.

Several large schools have not reported; but supplying this deficiency by the reports of last year, the whole number of scholars would be 16,041—a gain of 600.

Whole number of teachers, 2,010—a gain of 44.

Average attendance of scholars, 8,294, being 727 less than the previous year. The largest attendance of any Sabbath, in April, 10,000. Average attendance of teachers, 1,426—99 less than last year.

The Missionary Committee have established no new schools during the year, but have been laboring to sustain those already established, all of which are in a vigorous condition.

During a portion of the year a systematic visitation of certain portions of the City was kept up, with considerable success, and resulted in an increased attendance upon public worship and Sabbath Schools. In 11 schools there has been an aggregate increase of 645 scholars—a gain about equal to the loss in the schools alluded to.

Out of 250 families in one street it was found that only about one-half had any regular place of worship.

The spiritual welfare of the schools is in a promising condition; 301 scholars and 25 teachers made publi profession of religion during the year.

The scholars in several of the Methodist schools during the year have been erecting a house of worship designed for the use of a German Mission Church in the City. One school contributes the brick, another the timber, &c. On the whole the report represents the Sabbath Schools of Brooklyn in a flourishing condition.

SPIRITUAL PHRENOLOGY.—Last evening at the Brooklyn Institute a lecture was delivered by Mrs. CORA L. V. HATCH, the Spiritual Medium who lately attracted some attention in this City by speaking in the trance state. Her subject was Phrenology. She began by stating that she—using the pronoun we, to indicate that it was not herself, but a plurality of intelligences speaking—should consider the subject from an internal and then from an external point of view Man was not a progressed mineral, vegetable or animal, but an entity separate and distinct in his essence from any other substance in nature. The sons of the Adam and Eve of history were identical in essence with those of the most highly developed of the present day, but were different in their manifestation, owing to the conditions surrounding the two classes, for there were more than one Adam and Eve in the history according to the spirits. Man was the highest and most perfect, the purest, in the archway of creation, and his soul existed before the universe of worlds sprung into existence; and though many attempts had been made to define it, yet all scientific tests had failed in demonstrating even its existence Man was but a manifestation in the finite of what God was in the infinite, varied in form, but perfect in principle, varied as an identity, but as regards the whole a miniature, an image of God. Pare nology, as a science, made man dependent as an organized entity, upon that which was beneath him, which was strenuously denied; man was not dependent upon that which he can analyze and classify, but upon that which was superior to himself. Passing from this part of the subject, the lecturer defined phrenology as simply the means of reading the soul through the external form. In the periods of time covered by history man had improved in his form, both in beauty, strength and size. Similar changes had also been taking place in the animal kingdom; was no longer saw those huge forms; the megatherium, and the megalosaurian are no longer visible, but more beautiful and useful animals inhabited the earth. The science of phrenology, properly speaking, applied as well to the human form as to the human brain, and phrenologists had made a mistake in confining it simply to the head. The skillful physician could ascertain by the palpation of the heart the characteristics of the individual, and that might be as properly termed phrenology as simply an examination of the brain. A comparison of the physical and mental characteristics of the different races, ancient and modern, was made, and the palm awarded to the Anglo-Saxon inhabiting America, inasmuch as the influences surrounding him were of a higher order than to be found elsewhere. Pare nology, as a science, was in its infancy, and was destined in the future to absorb geology and astronomy by extending its sphere over the whole domain of nature.

AT THE NAVY YARD.—Commander JOHN DE CAMP has been detached, on account of his alleged ill health, having been confined to his house of late by severe attacks of inflammatory rheumatism, and Commander THOMAS R. ROOTES has been ordered to the command of the Yard.

Commodore LAWRENCE CARNEY has been appointed to the post lately filled by Commodore BIGELOW, resigned.

The steamship Mississippi is now ready to receive her crew and to sail on her voyage to China, but, owing in part, to the scarcity of men, none but the officers have received preparatory orders to join her. This ship, which has been the most serviceable steamer in the Navy, has been thoroughly overhauled—hull, spars, engine and boilers; her guards have been raised 28 inches, and by the officers at the Yard is now considered better than she was the day she was launched. There are now 12,000 feet of heating surface to the boilers, against 6,000 in the old ones, and she is expected to make an average speed of 9 knots in all weathers, and to be capable of going 10 in smooth weather.

The store bark Release, which has been undergoing repairs, has her cargo all in, and will be ready for sea in a few days. She is bound to Aspinwall. There are 1,800 men employed in the yard.

The clipper-ship Swordfish, which has been chartered for the purpose, is at the Navy-Yard, and will receive from 3,000 to 4,000 barrels of stores for the Squadron in China.

The steamer Dispatch is having new boilers put in, her engine overhauled, &c., and she will soon be ready for service.

The foundations for the new house, 600 by 60 feet, and to be of three stories, have been commenced.

The work of filling in for the location of the new barracks, the quay wall, and the extension of the sewer to tide water, are progressing. The Artesian Well, with pipes of five feet bore, has also been commenced.

FERRY COLLISION.—Yesterday morning, about ten o'clock, as the Peck-slip ferry boat Minnesota was going into her slip on the New York side, she came in violent contact with the Elm City, of the New-Haven line, which lay in the adjoining slip. The Elm City received no perceptible injury, even to her copper, from the collision, but some of the Minnesota's frame work was damaged.

HORSE CARS ON ATLANTIC-STREET.—The much disputed question as to the practicability of furnishing additional facilities for travel by means of horse-cars on Atlantic street, while locomotives are in use, has recently been practically tested by ex-Alderman WILLIAMS. A horse-car was placed on the track and a locomotive passed and repassed without trouble with the horses, and the difficulty as to the grade can easily be surmounted.

The rumor has again been revived that the Long Island Railroad Company are considering the expediency of changing the present termination of the road from the foot of Atlantic-street, to connect with the Flushing Railroad at Hunter's Point. The opposition to steam on Atlantic street has caused so much trouble that the Company have heretofore had this change under consideration, and it is more than likely that it will be made before long.

☞ Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER has rented a place at Fishkill, N. Y., (opposite Newburg,) for his Summer residence. His vacation of six weeks commences July 1. If the Sunday cars running had been postponed to the 1st of July, it is a question whether they would have proved profitable for the first six weeks.

A MAY QUEEN EXHIBITION.—The pupils and teachers of Public School No. 17 in Brooklyn, E. D., held a grand May Festival at the Odeon last evening. The house was crowded with the friends of the school, and everything was appropriate, tasteful and pleasant.

SHOCKING.—Two night scavengers, while cleaning a vault at No. 26 Pearl street, Brooklyn, Tuesday night, fell in. One was taken out dead, and the other was but a little better off.

BAILED OUT.—Sergeant JEREMIAH BUTLER, of the United States Marine Corps, who was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree, for beating his wife to death, in Brooklyn, last year, and who has recently been granted a new trial, was yesterday admitted to bail by Judge MORRIS. His bondsmen are Messrs. DOWNEY and HUELBY.

ON HIS MUSCLE.—A gentleman from Ohio, stopping at the Astor House, was induced on Tuesday by a professional patent-safe practitioner named HENRY GRIFFIN, to visit Greenwood Cemetery, where he, with the assistance of another notorious character, named BILL LEE, succeeded in swindling $30 and a gold watch out of the Ohio gentleman. Before the parties abandoned him, the fact began to dawn upon his brain that he had been imposed upon, and seizing the one having his watch and money, he said: "Stranger, here you, I may not be acquainted with city life as practiced here, but I came from a place where they know how to fight, so if you do not return my property I shall twist your neck." The argument was so forcible as not to be resisted, and LEE & GRIFFIN, after obeying orders, sneaked off.

MORTALITY IN BROOKLYN.—The Health Officer reports 60 deaths for the week ending Saturday last. Males, 45; females, 35; men, 20; women, 10; boys, 25; girls, 25. There were 10 deaths by consumption, 8 inflammation of the lungs, 5 disease of the brain, and 8 fevers.

NEW-JERSEY.

CONSTABLES.—Owing to the neglect of the Jersey City Common Council, in not providing for the election of Constables at the last Charter election, there have been none since the 1st of May, and civil business has been at a halt. The Common Council, at its meeting on Tuesday evening, however, fortified by an opinion from the Corporation Counsel, proceeded to appoint four—one for each Ward—as follows: First Ward, JOHN CANNON; Second Ward, JOHN AYERS; Third Ward, BERNARD MCANALLY; Fourth Ward, SAMUEL BOYCE.

SENTENCES.—In the Hudson County Court of Oyer and Terminer, yesterday, sentences were pronounced upon the prisoners convicted at the present term of the Court. The following are the more important cases:

THE CENTRAL AMERICAN NEWS.

Last Days of General Walker in Nicaragua.

Conditions of the Surrender and How it was Effected.

OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE AND DOCUMENTS,

LETTERS FROM GEN. WALKER.

By the arrival of the Illinois from Aspinwall, we receive full particulars of the capitulation of Gen. WALKER and the close of the Nicaraguan war.

As already announced, Gen. WALKER had left Aspinwall for New-Orleans, where he arrived on Wednesday. Among the passengers by the Illinois to this port were Gen. HENNINGSEN and Col. TITUS.

Our correspondent, whose letters will be found below, gives highly interesting details of the last scenes in Rivas, and of the negotiations between Capt. DAVIS and WALKER, which finally led to the latter's surrender.

On the 7th of May, 101 guns announced to the people of San José, Costa Rica, the occupation of Rivas by the Allies.

Gen. MORA, with his division of the army was expected at San José on the 13th. Great preparations were being made to give him an enthusiastic reception.

The Cronica, gives all due credit to Capt. DAVIS for his humane interference to save the lives of WALKER and his followers, and also speaks in the highest credit of his noble conduct.

OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PANAMA, Tuesday, May 19, 1857.

"WALKER has plenty of food and supplies, and is now in a better position than ever." This stereotyped lie of WALKER'S friends, and of the newspapers in his interest, is true for once. For, to day, he is comfortably cabined on the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's, in the harbor of Panama, where he has as much as he can eat, and "is perfectly secure from any attacks," except those of his own conscience.

In my letter of April 20, in some speculations as to the fate of WALKER in the closing scenes at Rivas, which I wrote you I should probably give you by the following steamer, I said that the only possibility of his escape, was that Commander DAVIS, at the last moment, might intercede with the Allies for his life, and the lives of his few followers. This speculation has become fact. WALKER having been reduced to only 250 men and officers on the 30th of April, surrendered with all his force on the 1st day of May, to Commander DAVIS, hy and with the consent of General MORA, Commander in-Chief of the Allies. He embarked the same day, with 16 of his officers, on board the St. Mary's, sailed on the 5th, and on the 17th, arrived in the port of Panama.

You will recollect that your last advices from WALKER were np to 13th April, in the shape of a rumor that he was confined to only two houses with all his force, and that he could hold out but a few days longer. This was not fully correct.

On the 4th of April, WALKER burned all the buildings except those composing the heart of the city, which he could defend.

On the 11th of April, the Allies attacked WALKER'S fortifications, and after great loss, fell back to their lines. They threw an immense number of ball into the city, and undertook to get possession of it by assault. WALKER claims that they lost 500 killed, and 70 prisoners, who fell into his hands, while his own loss was only two killed. The Cronica de Costa Rica speaks of this battle as an unfortunate one for the Allies, and adds: "The loss was grave on both sides."

From this time up to the 27th April, there does not appear to have been much fighting, bot deserters were constantly going over to the Allies. On the 27th, 70 of WALKER'S men and 17 officers deserted to the Allies, just as the firing recommenced npon the city. On the 28th, the firing against the city was continued. On the 29th, it was augmented.

On the 30th, Commander DAVIS, of the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's, appeared in the allied camp, and commenced negotiations with Gen. MORA for the surrender of WALKER and the remnant of his force. At this time the force of MORA besieging the city amounted to over 2,500 men. I have been favored with copies of the official papers of the negotiatione which resulted in the capitulation of WALKER, and will give yon the substance of them in regular order:

No. 1—Dated April 30, in the camp of the allies, from Commander DAVIS to Gen. WALKER—Informs him that he is perfectly aware of his position, and offers, by authority from Gen. MORA, to guarantee his personal safety, and the lives and safety of all under his command, if he and they will quit the couotry. Commander DAVIS also offers to take Gen. WALKER to Panama in the St. Mary's, and notifies him that Gen. MORA consents to suspend hostilities.

No. 2—Dated at RIVAS, April 30.—Gen. WALKER writes to Commander DAVIS that his propositions are too vague, and asks for a personal interview.

No. 3—Dated April 30, Commander DAVIS is surprised that Gen. WALKER fiode his propositions to be vague. He now asks him to abandon his enterprise, and leave the country, pledging himself for the safety of all persons in RIVAS, without exception, hut declined the personal interview.

No. 4—Dated April 30, Gen. WALKER writes to Commodore DAVIS that he agrees to suspend hostilities until notified by Commander DAVIS that they are to recommence. He wishes Commander DAVIS to inform Gen. MORA that he considere invitations to his men to desert, as acts of hostility. He proposes to send two officers to Commander DAVIS to treat, if they can have safe conduct.

No. 5—Dated April 30, Commander DAVIS sends safe conduct for the two officers.

No. 6—Dated April 30, Gen. WALKER to Commander DAVIS, names Brigadier-General HENNINGSEN and Col. JOHN P. WATERS, as the persons who are authorized to negotiate.

No. 7 is an agreement entered into between Gen. WALKER and Commander DAVIS, in accordance with the soggestions of the latter, as follows:

RIVAS, Friday, May 1, 1857.

An agreement is hereby entered into between Gen. WM. WALKER on the one part, and Commander CHAS. H. DAVIS, of the United States Navy, on the other part, and of which the stipulations are as follows:

First—Gen. WALKER, with 16 officers of his staff, shall march ont of Rivas with their side arms, pistols, horses, and personal baggage, under the guarantee of said Commander DAVIS, of the United States Navy, that they shall not be molested by the enemy, and shall be allowed to embark on board the United States vessel-of-war St. Mary's, in the harbor of San Juan del Sur, the said Commander DAVIS undertaking to transport them safely on the St. Mary's to Panama.

Second—The officers of Gen. WALKER'S army shall march out of Rivas, with their side-arms, under the guarantee and protectiou of Commander DAVIS, who undertakes to see them safely transported to Panama in charge of a United States officer.

Third—The private and non-commissioned officers, citizens, and employes of departments, wounded or unwounded, shall be surrendered, with their arms, to Com. DAVIS, or one of his officers, and placed under his protection and control, he pledging himself to have them safely transported to Panama, in charge of a United States officer, in separate vessels from the deserters from the ranks, and without being brought into contact with them.

Fourth—Com. DAVIS undertakes to obtain guarantees, and hereby does guarantee, that all natives of Nicarsgua or Central America now in Rivas, and surrendered to the protection of Com. DAVIS, shall be allowed to reside in Nicaragua and be protected in life and property.

Fifth—It is agreed that such officers as have wives and families in San Juan del Sur, shall be allowed to remain there under protection of the United States Consul till an opportunity offers of embarking for Panama or San Francisco.

General WALKER and Commander DAVIS mutually pledge themselves to each other that this agreement shall be executed in good faith,

WM. WALKER,
CHAS. HENRY DAVIS,
Commander United States Navy.

Present and acting—C. F. Henningsen, John T. Waters, J. Winthrop Taylor.

No. 8—Dated at Four Corners, suburbs of Rivas, May 1, is a letter from Gen. MORA to Commander DAVIS, thanking him for his successful efforts in ending the war.

No. 9—Dated May 1, Four Corners, camp of the allies, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to General CANAS, informing him that Rivas and all General WALKER'S munitions of war at his disposal.

No. 10—Dated at San Juan del Sur, May 2, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to Lieut. MAURY, of the St. Mary's, ordering him to take the Granada, WALKER'S war-schooner, by force, if necessary, after informing Captain FAESOUX of the loss of national character his schooner has sustained.

No. 11 is as follows:

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, May 2, 1857.

CAPTAIN FASSOUX: Deliver the Granada to the United States. WM WALKER.

No. 12—Dated San Juan del Sur, May 2, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to Gen. MORA, telling him he is satisfied the claim of Nicaragua to the war-schooner Granada is just, and that he is ready to deliver her over. Commander DAVIS asks Gen. MORA to make arrangements for the transportation of the officers and crew to the United States.

No. 14—Dated San Juan del Sur, May 3, is an order to Lient. MAURY to transfer the Granada to Gen ESTRADA, Commander of the division of the allies at San Juan del Sur.

No. 14—Dated San Juan del Sur, May 3, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to Lient. MCCORKLE, of the St. Marys ordering him to proceed to Virgin Bay, take Gen. WALKER'S men in charge, and proceed to Panama by such route as Gen. MORA shall direct, advising him that no deserters are to accompany the party.

No. 15—Dated Rivas, May 2, is a letter from Gen. MORA to Commander DAVIS, informing him that he has received orders to march and fortify points on the San Joan River—that he leaves Gen. CANAS in charge, with directions to continue the friendly relations with all parties, and notifying Com. D. that Gen. WALKER had not complied with the terms of the capitulation, he and HENNINGSEN having mutilated the guns, and thrown the powder into wells.

No. 16—Dated San Juan del Snr, May 4, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to General CANAS, thanking him for his courtesy in all the negotiations, for his humanity to prisoners, and to the sick and wounded, sud notifying him that he will leave Dr. ROYSTON in charge of the hospitals.

No. 17—Dated on board the sloop-of-war St. Mary's, May 14, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to Commodore MERVINE, of the flag ehip Independence at this port, expressing the great gratification he experienced in witnessing General CANAS' humane conduct, in having immediately after the capitulation sent provisions and all necessaries to the sick and wounded; and informing Commodore MERVINE that he left sixty sick and wounded in the hospitals, and twenty in private houses.

The following is the General Order issued hy Gen. WALKER to his troops after the capitulation. You will observe the phrase, "In parting for the present," etc., in the document.

General Order, No. 59.—The Commander in-Chief, in communicating to the Army the following agreement, thinks it proper to state that he entered into it on the solemn assurance from Captain DAVIS, that Col. LOCKRIDGE, with his whole command, had left the San Juan River for the United States.

In parting, for the present, with the brave comrades who have adhered to our course through evil as well as good report, the Commander-in-Chief desires to return his deep and heartfelt thanks to the officers and soldiers under his command.

Reduced to our present condition hy the cowardice of some, the incapacity of others, and the treachery of many, the army has yet written a page of American history, which it is impossible to forget or erase. From the future, if not from the present, we may expect just judgment. WM. WALKER.

Gen. Wm. Walker, Gen. C. F. Henningsen, Col. Bruno Natzmer, Col. John P. Waters, Lieut.-Col. Henry, Lient.-Col. Rogers, Lient.-Col. Tucker, Brevet Lieut.-Col. Swiogle, Major Hoof, Captains West, Williamson, McEachen, Fassoux, (schooner Granada,) Hawkins; Lientenants Bacon, McMichael, Brady; Drs. Kellum, McAlemy; Orderly Frederick Romer.

When Gen. WALKER surrendered he had what he calculated as four days' provisions, viz.: two hulls, two horses and three mules.

The fact that only 80 of WALKER'S men remained sick at Rivas at the capitulation shows that, at least, 100 must have died within a few days from neglect and starvation, as the number, when WALKER commenced to eat dogs and mule meat, amounted to 170. When Gen. CANAS entered the hospital he was perfectly borror struck with the destitutioo and misery of the sufferers. He immediately ordered ventilation, clean linen, medicines, and even luxuries to the patients.

The number of men who surrendered with arms in their hands was 240. These men, under charge of Lient. MCCORKLE, of the St. Mary's, it was understood, were to be marched to Liberia, taken across the Gulf of Nicoya to Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, and from thence transported in the Panama to Panama. The Panama, however, arrived this morning without any of this force, and Capt. Dow brings no reliable news of their whereabouts. I questioned a gentleman of my acquaintance from Salvador, who was on the Panama, as to whether they would be forwarded on her next trip. His reply was: "No, the Government of Costa Rica has no money to waste in any such expense." Some say that they have gone by way of the lake and river to Greytown, but I think there can be no doubt they were on their way to Costa Rica. Whether they will be forwarded is a case of quien sabe.

Those who have any sympathy for Gen. WALKER in his fall, unless they are lost to even the common sentiments of humanity, will have their sympathy somewhat modified on becoming acquainted with the following facts, which I have from a high official source, a gentleman who cannot be mistaken in what he relates: On the 30th day of May, while General WALKER, without the knowledge of his men, was negotiating his capitulation, knowing that he was to surrender the next day, one of his soldiers, contrary to a general order, went ootside of his lines. He shortly after returned, he having only gone out to get a bottle of aguadiente. WALKER called him np, when he acknowledged his fault, and prayed for forgiveness. "If yon have any message to send to your friends," said WALKER, in his mild, but sarcastic way, "you had better prepare it, for at sundown you die." Punctually at sunset a platoon of soldiere was drawn up for the execntion, and just as the order was given to fire, the soldier appealed to his comradee: "Boys, you wouldn't shoot a fellow-soldier for such a thing as that, would yon?" They raised their rifles and fired over his head. The poor fellow broke and ran, when he was brought to his knees by Lieut. Col. ROGERS, an Irishman, who figuree in the llet I send you, by a pistol shot. Stepping up to the man while in this position, ROGERS placed his revolver at his forehead and blew out his brains! May be there isn't a hell. There ought to be, if there is not.

Gen. WALKER and some of his officers have conducted themselves in the most insolent manner towards Com. DAVIS and Com. MERVINE, notwithstanding the former saved their lives, and has treated them in the kindest way on board the St. Mary's. WALKER even charges Com. DAVIS with having induced his men to desert him, and with unjustly turning over his schooner to the allies. Indeed, his insolence is so great that Com. DAVIS does not enter his own cohin, to which he kindly invited WALKER on his coming on board at San Juan del Sur. High officers of the fleet give me this information.

Yesterday, Sunday, Com. MERVINE, feeling bound to see these officers shipped to the United States, sent a very polite message to Gen. WALKER, asking him how many of his staff were able and willing to pay their own passage to the States? "When I need an agent I will appoint one," replied WALKER. Com. MERVINE then sent for Gen. HENNINGSEN, whom he found to be a well bred gentleman in his manners, and put the same question to him. Gen. H. could not say, as it was rather a delicate question for him to broach to his fellow-officers. "Well," replied Com. MERVINE, "as many as are of Gen. WALKER'S way of thinking will remain on board my ship, until I get ready to go to San Francisco, when I shall take him and them to that port." On Gen. H. communicating this threat to Gen. WALKER, he got down from his high horse, and said that himself and Gen. H. would pay their own passage, but as to the others he could say nothing.

Com. MERVINE informs me that he shall send the whole across the road to-morrow, under charge of a file of Marines, who will not quit them until the wheels are moving the steamer out of the harbor.

There are some three or four hundred of WALKER'S men in Costa Rica, besides the 240 who surrendered last at Rivas. Many of them were enlisting in the Costa Rican army. Others were being gathered at San Jose de Costa Rica, to be sent to Greytown, by way of the Serapiqui river. Some say that they go to take np lands hy permission of Costa Rica, on the Serapiqui. In fact, I can get out little relishk in relation to the deserters.

Col. MCDONALD, formerly Agent of the steamers at San Juan del Sur, and more or less in WALKER'S service, sought the protection of the St. Marys, and after living on board of her six weeks at San Juan, was brought to Panama, on the same terms as the others. Having broken his parole not to go on shore, Com. DAVIS sent a Lieutenant (with some Marines into town to arrest him and bring him on board. He, however, claimed to be a British subject, upon which Com. MERVINE allowed him to escape.

Col. CAYCE, WALKER'S Q. M. General, who was reported by the Costa Rican papers sometime since to have deserted, remained with WALKER up to the last, and then joined the allied army.

"Col. TITUS, the Kansas Bully, who ran away from Castille at the head of 250 men when his enemy had only 22, joined WALKER at Rivas, but deserted some five or six days before the final break up. He has gained a noble reputation as a warrior truly.

Col. CANTY held Greytown, according to information by the British steamer Dee, at last dates, with 200 men.

The allies' objection to the escape of WALKER was the only difficulty that Com. DAVIS had in his negotiations. His persistency and their own humanity finally got the best of the argument, and his life was saved.

This evening the Governor of Panama having verbally expressed a fear that there might be some disturbance at the railroad station on the departure of WALKER, Com. MERVINE addressed the former a note, offering to send on shore a strong guard of Marines, if deemed necessary. Of course the Governor will not coosent.

The Railroad Company's steamer Panama, Capt. J. H. Dow, arrived here this morning, having left Punta Arenas de Costa Rica on the 14th instant. She bringe 5,000 hides, 2,300 bags of coffee, some indigo, cochineal, sugar, cigars, &c., and 25 passengers.

Departure of General Walker for the United States.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ASPINWALL, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.

Gen. WALKER and officers left on the Granada at 5 o'clock for New-Orleans, Com. MERVINE sent him on shore under a guard of a file of marines, who came over with him on the same car. There was no appearance of restraint however. The people gathered in large numbers at the Panama dépôt to get a sight of the lion, but all was orderly and quiet.

In Costa Rica the people were celebrating their triumph by firing cannon, rockets, illuminations, and every other demonstration of joy.

Henningsen's Account of the War.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ASPINWALL, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.

I inclose you "Statistics of WALKER'S Campaign," furnished me by Brigadier-General HENNINGSEN, of WALKER'S army, thrangh the United States Coosul at Panama. It is not valuable to those who are in search of the real facts, as everything is much exaggerated in favor of WALKER, and against the Allies. To say, for instance, that WALKER had to contend against 3,000 Costa Ricans, in the first nine months after the 29th June, 1855, is an unpardonable misstatement, because everybody knows better. That WALKER has received, including those on the River, at least, 5,000 men is beyond question. That the Allies have neither had more than half the men in arms the HENNINGSEN states, or lost half the number he estimates they have, is equally beyond cavil. But due allowance must be made for the anxiety General HENNINGSEN has to make a good stay under defeat, and also for the errors natural to one who was so much interested they should be truths as he is. If you deduct one-half all through for General H.'s glorification of WALKER and himself, and also one half from the number and losses of the Allies all through, the thing will be as nearly correct as can be arrived at. I submit the statement to yon without farther comment, as every one conversant with the facts of the fillibuster war will be able to point out its exaggerations.

STATISTICS OF WALKER'S CAMPAIGN.

BY C. F. HENNINGSEN.

The first period may be reckoned from the 29th of June, 1855, comprising nine months, during which time he fought against 4,600 men, namely: 1,600 servile, and 3,000 Costa Ricans. The result leaving him (after a loss in round numbers of 200 men in killed and wounded, and 1,000 of theirs) master of the soil of Nicaragua.

SECOND PERIOD.

The Second Period may be reckoned from 1st September, 1856, to Dec. 12, of that year, terminating with the evacuation of Granada. During this time, he had to contend against about 7,000 men of the native and allied army—the result being that with a loss of 511 killed and wounded on his part, and of 2,700 killed and wounded on the part of the allies. At the end of December this force was reduced to 1,600 men, thinned every day by desertion. In fact, but for the capture of the lake and river steamers, the war might have been considered virtually decided.

Force of WALKER from the time of his landing to the 1st of May, 1857, nearly two years, exclusive of LOCKRIDGE'S force, 2,518. Total force of the Allies, exclusive of 1,200 Costa Ricans, if, as alleged, on the river, 18,000. Total killed and wounded of WALKER'S force, 850. Total Allies killed and wounded, 5,560.

To this force of 2,518 men, the total force WALKER had under arms during two years, since his landing in the country, it is hardly necessary to add the armed citizens who fought at Granada and Rivas, because they are, with a score of exceptions, discharged soldiers, and it must be borne in mind that if many wounded died, a large proportion of the wounded recovered. It is estimated that during two years, of 2,500 men enlisted or holding commissions, about 1,000 were killed or died of their wounds or sickness, about 700 deserted, 250 were discharged, 425 were at Rivas on the 1st of May, and 80 surrendered or escaped down the river. Total 2,465, leaving 53 unaccounted for.

It will be perceived from these tables, which are substantially correct, whatever errors they contain being in favor of the Allies, that this has been no ordinary contest, either as regards the obstinacy with which WALKER'S men fought, or the odds against which they were pitted. And to enable your readers to discern that this has been no holiday work, it will suffice to point out that in proportion to the number engaged, the loss of the Americans averages more than double the number lost in the battles of Mexico by TAYLOR and SCOTT, and that WALKER'S men engaged against an average of double the disparity of force which the United States armies had to struggle against in Mexico. Those readers who will take the trouble to figure out the matter, will discover that the loss was, for instance, at Rivas, 11th April, 24 per cent.; at Massaya, Nov. 13, 25 per cent.; at Granada, 37 per cent.; at St. George, in the first battle, 23 per cent.; in the last, 18 per cent. Whereas, the first day's battle in Monterey, in Mexico, gives under 9 per cent.

They will further discern that the average fighting in Nicaragua has been, all through, rather more bloody than the memorable contest of Lundy's Lane. When it is considered that about 1,000 men of WALKER'S army have done the real fighting, it may be admitted that they have redeemed the weakness or the shame of those who could not face prolonged endurance or continued danger.

At Jocoté, March 4, by the incapacity of Gen. SANDERS, 125 men, whom he commanded, gave way before 200 of the enemy. The wounded which he abandoned were slaughtered. His total loss was 37 men. This was called "Jocoté races."

On the 16th March, Gen. WALKER marched to San Jorge with 400 men, 2 six-pounders, 1 howitzer, and 4 mortars, and approached within 400 yards and fired on the place for near two hours, expending about 220 shot and shell.

By this fire the enemy were driven ont of San Jorge, except the church, where they left a small guard for the wonnded. One portion of their force retired back of the town—the remainder, favored by the broken ground, brush and plantain patches, and numbering over 2,000 men, made a fierce attack, which lasted about four hours, on Gen. WALKER'S position, which, half the time, was attacked on three sides at once. Finally, all these attempts having been repulsed, Gen. WALKER fired forty shots more on the place, with the view to show that he had maintained his ground, as there was nobody in it. It was now discovered that the enemy had got between Gen. WALKER and RIVAS, where, in the hollow roads and behind cactoe hedges, they hoped to impede his return, or at least to stop his heavy guns, mortars, wagons and wounded. They were, however, dispersed without trouble or loss, till close to Rivas, where, on one road they had strongly barricaded a house at the Cuatro Esquinas.

On this road, one gun, a wagon and some wounded were wedged in on a hollow road, and almost as much loss was experienced in rash attempts to pass this house (which Gen. WALKER twice rode by) as during the whole fight at San Jo ge.

Meanwhile Gen. HENNINGSEN, who had brought up the rear guard in excellent order, dispatched part of this force with the two guns (which had been easily cleared) into Rivas. Finally, as night was coming on, the other guns and wagons were driven through a plantain patch and brought into Rivas about daybreak. The total loss of WALKER'S force was 75 killed and wounded. The loss of the enemy is ascertained to have been 400 killed and wounded, probably much more, as nearly 600 rounds were fired from WALKER'S guns.

On the 23d of March 2,500 men attacked Rivas. They nearly surprised, and had half cut through the doors of the hospital, when discovered. They attacked from three sides with great fierceness for about three hours. On three points they succeeded in occupying houses outside the barricades. On one point they brought np a five-pound gun, which was captured, together with an Italian Lieutenant-Colonel commanding it, the same who was on board of the Costa Rica brig blown up by FAYSSEUX. The enemy were finally driven ont of all these houses, leaving about 30 prisoners, one gun, and 6,000 cartridgee in the hands of WALKER.

Though the enemy had been all the morning removing their dead, seventy bodies were buried that afternoon by the garrison; and two wells, one full and the other half filled with dead, were discovered two days after.

The enemy at one time occupied half the house in which Major TUCKER'S men were quartered, and 20 were here taken prisoners by him. The total loss of the enemy was ascertained to be over 400 men; that of WALKER 12 killed and wounded.

The next attack was on the 4th of April. An hour before daylight, 150 Costa Ricans, on the information of deserters, gained the lower plaza and occupied nearly a whole row of houses. They again attacked three sides of the town, and succeeded in occupying some huts, being within a thin partition of Captain MCEACHIN'S quartere on the main street.

General HENNINGSEN brought three guns to bear, one in front, one on the side, and one in the rear of the said house of the Plaza, and Captain BUCHANAN'S company charging on them, 73 including three officers surrendered, the rest having stampeded. One of the guns was then sent to the relief of Captain MCEACHIN, and the enemy were then rapidly driven back. These and St. Ursula were the serious points of attack, on all others they had been repulsed, and by 9 o'clock A. M., had abandoned the field, leaving 150 bodies for WALKER'S men to bury, and 73 prisoners, and 25 wounded in his hands. One hundred more dead were seen laid out at the Cuatro Esquinas, and 225 wounded were counted. This, however, was only part of their loss, which, besides prisoners, cannot be computed at less than 600 men. The total force of the enemy was 2,600 men. WALKER'S loss was 16 killed and wounded, and 55 from the 23d of March, when the enemy first opened fire with a 24-pound gun, to the 1st of May.

The enemy attempted to batter Rivas with two 24-pounders, one howitzer and four 8-pound guns, one of which was taken on the 23d of March.

Their 24-pound shot, of which they fired near 500 into Rivas, strange to say, only killed one man, (Lieut. MOORE,) and wounded another by a falling beam, (Col. HENRY) Capt. MANN was killed by a 5 poond shot, and the roofs of the houses suffered considerably.

Some of these 24 pound shot, together with all the church bells and another gun, taken when WALKER entered Rivas in December last, were cast into 6-pound balls and fired back.

When Rivas was surrendered to Capt. DAVIS, the trunnions of all the guns had been broken off and all the ammunition destroyed.

Letters from Gen. Walker—Interesting Accounts of Recent Engagements.

From the San Francisco Herald.

By the permission of Mr. EDMUND RANDOLPH we are enabled to lay before our readers, this morning, the following narrative of recent events in Nicaragua, from the pen of Gen. WALKER himself. From this letter, devoid as it is of any attempt either at exaggeration or concealment, an accurate idea of the present condition of things in Nicaragua can be formed. It will be read with interest:

RIVAS, March 22, 1857,

MY DEAR RANDOLPH: CRITTENDEN wrote to me that * * * had been a very useful man in California; therefore I sent him back with instructions to report faithfully and accurately. I did not know his propensity to lie, or I should have sent some one else. This time I shall write, and not trust to any one. * * * * * * * * *

Since the enemy came into this Department, we have never had more than 500 men for marching. On the first of January, the aggregate of the army was towards of 1,000, including sick, wounded, and officers on furlough. Now it amounts (Ordinance, Commissary's, Quartermester's etc. Departments,) to something over 700—for marching, 400. The diminution is due almost entirely to desertion and the balls of the enemy—very little to fever or any form of disease.

Besides the fight at Ohraje—which, as the Costa Rica papers show, did more damage to the enemy than I thought for—we have four times attacked them at San Jorge, and have had one action on the plains near Jocote. During that time, the enemy had several times received reinforcements. Just before we attacked them last, they had from five to six hundred men from Punta Arenas through Guanacaste. They have never attempted to land any men at San Juan del Sur since the ill-fated expedition of the "Once de Abril."

Concerning the action at Obraje, and the first and second attacks on San Jorge, you are already informed. I supposed that * * * would inform you that before he left we gave them a cannonade of about one hundred rounds, but he does not appear to have done so, and I see nothing of this in the papers. This cannonade depressed the enemy, who did not venture to come out to attack us; but our supply of round shot (6 lb.) was limited, and we retired. Since then, we have been casting 6 lb shot, and our cupola for smelting is now in operation. This, with the 500 shot CRITTENDEN sent, assists us materially.

After our first cannonade of San Jorge, I mounted fifty or sixty men, and thus raised the Ranger force to 110 or 120. For some days they scoured the neighborhood and kept the enemy close to San Jorge. But they began to desert; one whole company—FARRELL'S—going off in two detachments. This company was made up of Stockton gamblers, who did pretty well in action, but had not moral courage to bear up against the terrible reports put in circulation by the natives.

About the time the Sierra Nevada was expected, I sent forty Rangers to San Juan del Sur, under the orders of Col. CAYCE. The day they were to return, I got news that the enemy—about 300 strong—were at or near Jocote. I accordingly sent General SANDERS, with about 120 rifles, to occupy Jocote and communicate with Col. CAYCE. On the road, some four miles this side of Jocote, he met the enemy, from 150 to 200 strong. Soon after the fire opened, Captains HIGLEY and CONWAY, whose companies were deployed in advance, were killed; a panic seized their men and spread rapidly to the rest of the command, and it was, according to all accounts, impossible to rally the men. Eighteen were left on the field—most of these wounded were left in the flight, and some eight or ten wounded were brought in. What makes the matter worse, CAYCE had met the enemy on the Transit and got the better of them, so that they were probably in retreat to San Jorge when SANDERS met them. This happened on or about the 4th of March.

Of course this affair had no tendency to check desertion, which was already rapid, and fomented by the proclamations and addresses the enemy found means to scatter in our camp. On the 7th, however, Captain STEWART arrived with 70 men, and on the next day I addressed the whole force in the Plaza. The desertion was stopped, and the army returned to a healthy state.

The affair at Jocote had depressed the courage of the men, and impaired their confidence in each other; but on the 15th—this day a week ago—I thought their spirits good enough to hazard another attack. Accordingly, on Monday morning, I marched with two sixes and a 12 pound howitzer, 4 mortars, about 400 rounds of 6 poond shot, and 80 shells, supported by men. We opened fire about 7 A. M., at a distance of about 400 yards; and after giving them 120 or 130 rounds of balls, opened with the shells. This soon forced them to come out of the town and attack us. They came ont, I think, some 1,500 or 1,800 strong, attacking us vigorously on all sides. Our men met them well—let them come up close—and drove them back with great slaughter. We kept up our cannonade on the town, so that they did not venture to return. About 3 P. M. I ascertained that nearly their whole force was scattered along the road to Rivas, in order to prevent us, as they said, from returning. Forming, then, the column with our wounded and ammunition in the centre, I took the head of the column and kept the advance companies at a charge all the way to Rivas, driving the enemy from all the points they occupied on the road, and scattering them in all directions.

Our loss in this action was 14 killed and 50 wounded, most of the latter slightly. By the enemy's own account they have lost from 400 to 600. The reports make these killed; so I think their loss may very safely be put at from 500 to 600 killed and wounded. Besides these the roads have been covered with deserters, north and south. On the night of the 19th, 83 Costa Rican deserters passed through Virgin on their way home.

Altogether, I think this last blow is as severe as any we have given them since we have been in the country. It has raised the courage of our own men; I never saw them fight better than they did last Monday. In addition to this, while we were at San Jorge, and this place was in the keeping of the departments, citizens and hospital patients, a number of the poor natives of the neighborhood came in and asked for arms. A number of the natives, too, have been voluntarily bringing in to us hogs and cattle during the week. These facts are significant, for they show how the natives think the war is going.

Considering the numbers which have been brought against us in this war, it is remarkable that so many of the poorer class of people have adhered to us in all reverees of fortune. Ignorant as they are of the resources and the feelings and sympathies on which we rely for support from the United States, their confidence in our power is due to the constancy with which we have borne up against famine, pestilence and the thousands the Allies have sent against us. Their hatred, too, to forced military service and their desire for quiet, tranquil labor makes them sympathize with us. I believe we can say with truth and just pride that, in spite of the calumnies our enemies have spread—in spite of the stories about civil and religious slavery—that we have a large majority of the working people in our favor. Especially is it true in this department, where the transit has increased their little trade and made them familiar with the advantages to be derived from the Americans.

Concerning matters on the river, you will receive by the Sierra Nevada all the news I have up to the present time. The Orizaba will bring later advices, although not later than the 20th, as the Tennessee does not, I understand, touch at San Juan del Norte. My impression is, that LOCKRIDGE will be here in a few days, either by way of Chontales or along the southern shore of the lake; that is, if he is not able to get a steamer. My side, Major BALDWIN, left here for San Juan del Norte with such instructions as lead me to expect LOCKRIDGE soon. Before the Orizaba returns I may have news direct from the river; if so, I will send it to you.

You will see that our ports are made free. This will, I think, facilitate the settlement of the Mosquito question in a manner more honorable to Nicaragua than was proposed by the Clarendon-Dallas treaty.

I shall write again before the steamer returns.

This letter is written merely to give you some idea of events up to this date. Yours, truly,

MR. EDMUND RANDOLPH. WM. WALKER.

MONDAY, March 23d.

P. S.—While writing the foregoing the enemy were keeping up a cannonade—very slow—with a 24 pounder, from a hill 1,200 or 1,400 yards distant. Their camp was situated on the Hacienda of Cuatro Esquinas, in the direction of San Jorge, while at the same time they barricaded on the Obraje road, on the brow of a hill about 200 yards from our pickets.

Yesterday afternoon and evening, the women who have been friendly to the enemy packed up and left. This was suspicious and foreboded a general attack. The officers on duty for the day were ordered to be vigilant during the night, and two general and two field-officers were ordered to be up in turn. About daylight, an aide called me, saying that the hospital—the Maleano house on the hill—was attacked in the rear. A company was ordered to the hospital, and the enemy was repulsed with the loss of an officer and 6 or 8 killed, and a number wounded. The fire had hardly ceased on the side of the hospital, when the whole front and right flank, as well as a portion of the rear of our camp, were assaulted by the enemy. They got into some of the houses, and commenced very industriously to throw np barricades; but they were finally driven from all their positions, and repulsed with a loss—as far as I can judge from the dead and wounded left behind—of between 300 and 400. They also lost a four pound piece taken by us, as well as 60 or 70 English Minie muskets, and some 5,000 cartridges—excellent British powder in the last.

One of the wounded taken prisoner is an Italian, who came out under the auspices of the Accessory Transit Company, in July, 1855, for the defence of Castillo and the river frontier. He deserted after the treaty of the 23d of October, 1855, and went to Costa Rica; was blown np on the Once de Abril, and picked up by Captain FAYSOUX. After several months service in the chain gang here, he knocked a careless sentry on the head and escaped. He was, therefore, an officer of confidence with the Costa Ricaus, and had charge of two four-pound pieces in the action. From him I gather some interesting details. He says we were attacked this morning by upwards of 2,000 men, under JOSE JOAQUIN MORA. It appears that the 500 or 600 men who left San José on the 2d instant, did not arrive at San Jorge until last Wednesday, two days after our cannonade. Since then, J. MORA came from San Carlos with 300 more, leaving TRINIDAD SALAZAR, (the greatest coward in Nicaragua,) in charge of that post. From all accounts SALAZAR could not have with him more than 100 men; and MORA brought with him the 24 pound gun from San Carlos. I, therefore, conjecture that by this time Italico estimates that at least one half of the Costa Rican force engaged this morning was put hors du combat. Considerable numbers have doubtless deserted, as our picket on the Jocote road saw them running away in squads of 2, 3 and 4, without arms. The action, then, has been pretty decisive to the Costa Ricans; and the Hondurenos we have captured say there were not many more than 100 left of the contingent which JATRUCH brought. The Nicaraguans engaged to-day have doubtless fled in all directions; for the most of them were pressed and glad of an opportunity to escape. ZARALA'S Guatemalans are by all accounts few—not for believing that there can never be a question so difficult or complicated that it may not meet with a prompt, a peaceful and honorable solution." Nor did the speaker less represent the feelings of his countrymen when he declared that no class of Englishmen looked with jealousy on the expansion of the Union and the increase of its inhabitants. Some such feeling may have had an existence in the last generation, when the memory of our feuds was fresh, and when it was the plan of even well informed statesmen to raise up in the Spanish race a barrier against the predominance of our supposed rivals. But in English society at the present day we can trace no remains of this feeling. In the first place, we have learnt that no Spaniards or other Continental people are capable of holding their own against the energy and enterprise of a nation of Anglo Saxon blood, and to suppose that the Americans can be arrested by a set of Spaniards and half-castes is to suppose that the laws of nature can be set aside at the bidding of the politicians. Hence, if even any jealousy still existed, common sense would teach us its uselessness and absurdity. But, as Lord NAPIER justly observed, the feeling of Englishmen is rather one of pride and gratification that in so signal a manner and by a course of even a which our fathers judged calamitous, our language, laws, history, and institutions should be made the heritage of a new world which is growing up to such high destinies. We may trust, then, that with a more complete appreciation of each other's parts in the world former animosities will die away, and that, while we look with satisfaction on the legitimate extension of the Republic's power in the New World, the Americans will see with equal good will the development and increasing greatness of the British Empire. There is certainly room enough for both when each has a hemisphere. Long may it be, then, before the friendship of the two nations receives an interruption. If any one were to ask why it is that of late days there has sprung up in this country so favorable a feeling towards the United States, we should be inclined to answer that one of the chief reasons is the utter failure of liberal institutions and what we may call English ideas on the Continent of Europe. In despair or in disgust we have turned from the contemplation of those countries where our political usages have been copied only to be made ludicrous or revolting. The events of the last ten years have taught us how little comparatively these nations have in common with us, and have drawn closer the bonds which unite us to a kindred people, without whom we should be alone in the world.

The United States and New-Granada.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Tuesday May 12.

Mr. WYLD asked whether the Government, in consequence of the expedition now fitting in the ports of the United States, the destination of which was said to be the coast of Central America and the territories of New-Granada, had any intention of stationing a naval force upon those shores for the protection of British interests?

Lord PALMERSTON—In reply to the question of my Hon. friend I have to state that the Government have stationed, or are about to station, on the coasts of America, on both sides, naval forces which they think sufficient for the protection of British interests; but, considering the interest—I may say the anxiety—which has been excited in the public mind by the rumors to which the hon. gentleman has referred, it would be more agreeable probably to the House that I should give a short explanation of this question, and of its present position. [Hear, hear.] The House is aware that some months ago there occurred a very deplorable scene of violence and outrage at the Isthmus of Panama; that a quarrel began—nobody well knows how—some people say that it was a dispute between a passenger and a native about a water-melon; but, at all events, it acted like a spark thrown upon a smouldering fire, which burst out into a flame, and the reciprocal dislike which had long been growing up led to acts of great violence and scenes of bloodshed, which every body must deplore. The United States Government applied for redress for the past and security for the future, but I am sorry to say that the Government of New Granada, which is not particularly celebrated for exalted recollections of duties, or performance of obligations, refused compliance with these demands. These gross negotiations and communications between the United States and New Granada Governments, which have not yet led to any satisfactory termination. It is quite clear, I think, that that which is true in regard to private property is true also in regard to a Government—that it has its duties as well as its rights; and that the Government of New-Granada is bound to provide for the security of persons and property passing along the railway through its dominions. The excuse which it gave for refusing compensation to those who suffered by these excesses was, I think, to a certain degree, its own condemnation, because it alleged that the high-handed proceedings of the passengers for a long time hefore had created great exasperation, and it therefore was not wonderful that a slight cause should produce very considerable results. Now, I must think that if they knew that this great exasperation existed it was their duty to take measures to prevent the commission of outrages either by foreigners upon their own subjects, or by their own subjects upon foreigners. We have been in communication with the United States' Government upon this matter—a matter which evidently concerns not merely the interests of the citizens of the United States, but also those of all other nations whose people are in the habit of traversing this Isthmus. I am happy to say that the United States' Government profess the most just and honorable intentions. They disclaim any desire to occupy or take possession of any portion of the Territory of New-Granada, or of the railway. That which they are naturally entitled to expect is security for their citizens in passing and repassing the Isthmus by railway; and they naturally also require some redress for the injuries which were sustained upon the occasion to which I have referred. I am happy to say that their requirements are such as would be made by any Government in a similar position, and that they entirely disclaim any intention of taking advantage of this quarrel for the purpose of put ing forward any unjust or aggressive demands against the Government of the State of New-Granada. [Hear, hear.]

From the London Times' City Article, May 13.

There can be little doubt that the Spanish race in New-Granada have had much to bear from the conduct of the Californian emigrants, and that, whatever the United States' Commissioners may think upon the point, allowance is to be made for the effect produced upon a weak and sensitive people by the fact of shiploads of Filibusters, well supplied with ammunition and money, being regularly and openly dispatched month by month from the principal ports of the Union. Nothing of this sort, however, can exempt New-Granada from the due discharge of her own duties, and, as in her treaty with the railway company she pledged herself to an efficient protection of the transit, she is bound to pay for any default that may be proved to have occurred in that respect, and also to give guarantees against its recurrence. Whether those guarantees must necessarily involve a cession of territory which would place the entire republic under the power of the United States, and whether the acceptance of such cession would be in harmony with the clauses of the Clayton Bulwer treaty, are questions which have probably been reconsidered at Washington by the new Cabinet, and which are therefore, it may be assumed, not likely to lead to embarrassment. It is desirable to remark, however, on the evidences which each year presents of the consequences that have arisen for the conduct of those who in 1852 defeated the efforts for the united action of the commercial classes of England and the United States for promoting a joint interest in opening up the communication between the oceans. But the two countries gone hand in hand, each route might have been developed according to its capabilities, and the general growth of the prosperity of Central America might by this time have been one of the happiest countries of the age. The results of neglecting the opportunity were plainly predicted, and we now see Nicaragua devastated, New-Granada about to be attacked, and Mexico, while involved in complication concerning the Tehuantepec grant, in constant apprehension of further dismemberment.

From the London Post (Ministerial) May 16.

The short but important statement which Lord PALMERSTON made on Tuesday night, respecting the unfortunate difference which prevails between the United States and the Republic of New-Granada, will, we believe, be received with equal satisfaction on both sides of the Atlantic. It shows, first, that the Government of the Noble Lord is fully alive to the necessity of protecting British interests in Central America; and, secondly, that the policy of Mr. BUCHANAN and of General CASS is not of the aggressive character which has been so generally imputed to both by certain of the American newspapers. Instead of hostility to England, the recent re establishment of diplomatic relations between the two nations appears to have obliterated the recollection of former disagreements, and to have restored those cordial feelings of friendship, the interruption of which was always a matter of deep regret to the people of this country. The Government and citizens of the United States have given a generous response to the sentiments of amity which were so well expressed by Lord NAPIER on a recent occasion; and Lord PALMERSTON has now adopted and confirmed the views of the British Minister at Washington, by assuring the House of Commons that, in reference to the New-Granada difficulty, the United States Government profess the most just and honorable intentions; and that they disclaim any desire to occupy or take possession of any portion of the Territory of New-Granada, or even of the Panama Railway. The history of this dispute, whether arising from some insignificant cause, or from some gross and long-continued provocation, is a matter which it is now useless to discuss. It is quite clear that the outrage which was perpetrated in April, 1856, on the line of the railway, ended in the murder of several American citizens, and that the evidence being conflicting as to the real authors of the quarrel, the Government of New-Granada have not only failed to show that their subjects were in the right, ont they have also refused to give to the United States that redress for the past, and security for the future, which, in this case, they have claimed, first by negotiation, and now are about to demand by a perfectly justifiable exhibition of naval force. Another important inference may be drawn from the proceedings connected with this dispute. The Panama Railway is the great means of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans—the readiest and cheapest route by which the journey to and from California can be accomplished. Every country in the world has an interest in this important line, not only with regard to its neutrality, but with regard to the safety of those who avail themselves of its accommodation. The State of New-Granada, with a weak and disorganized Government, and with a population partly of Spanish and Indian origin, not only practically, nor very orderly, has not the power, even if it had the inclination, to establish those safeguards of police along the railway which the necessities of this vast passenger traffic require. In saying this, we do not for a moment doubt that Californian adventurers and American filibusters, with revolvers and bowie-knives in their pockets, would be rather disagreeable customers even in a country where the law is enforced with a stern and vigorous hand. But it is unfortunate that the weakness of New Granada should be brought in direct contact with the lawless propensities and practices of a horde of men who carry with them wherever they go disrespect and contempt for constituted authority. The United States Government has, therefore, acted with moderation and justice in having sought first, by the peaceful means of negotiation and remonstrance, to secure that system of high police which in New-Granada is an absolute necessity; and secondly, upon the failure of diplomacy, in using force to compel the attainment of the same object. The public in this country will readily agree with Lord PALMERSTON, that the United States Government is entitled to expect security for their citizens in passing and repassing the Isthmus by railway, and also to require redress for grievous injuries. The presence of a British fleet at the scene of possible hostilities will not be unattended with salutary effects. Lord PALMERSTON states that the British Government have stationed, or are about to station, on both sides of the Isthmus, naval forces which they think will be sufficient for the protection of British interests. It, therefore, is not probable that the Commander of the United States squadron will be instructed at once, and without further parley and negotiation, to imitate the proceeding of Captain HOLLEST, of the Cyane—a proceeding which not only ended in the destruction of Greytown, but in the destruction of much property belonging to English and French subject, for which, we may add, no compensation has yet been given. The English fleet will be on the spot to watch the proceedings of the United States squadron, and to exercise that moral influence which is to be the duty of the United States Commissioner and naval force now about to be dispatched to the Chinese seas. It is in every sense deeply to be regretted that the Isthmus of Panama, perhaps the most important geographical and commercial position in the world, should be the seat of a number of weak and disorganized Governments, which contain within themselves no germ of future permanency or power. The United States Government, by adopting a moderate and temperate course, have in the present instance placed themselves entirely in the right: and should the exhibition of force be attended with the desired result, namely, security to life and property along this great interoceanic communication, the commercial nations of the world will have no reason to complain of a policy in the success of which they have a common interest, and in the results of which they must participate.

From the London Times, May 14.

No reflections are more obvious than those in which the greatness of effects is contrasted with the smallness of the causes leading to them, but it seems as if an extraordinary illustration even of this familiar doctrine would be exhibited in the Chinese waters during the present twelvemonth. Last October Mr. Commissioner YEH thought fit to apprehend on board the Arrow a wretched Chinaman whose son or father was alleged to be a pirate, and to refuse the redress which this offence required. It is not improbable that next October may witness, as the consequence of this trespass on the deck of a lorcha, an assemblage of the fleets of half Europe off the coasts of China. A British squadron is already there, and a second on its way. An American squadron is to be despatched forthwith; and a French squadron is on the point of departure for the same destination. All this, perhaps, is natural, but this is not all. Spain is about to revindicate its interests in "the Indies," and the ancient flag of Castile and Leon will again be conspicuous in the Far East. Austria is to send ships to China, Sardinia is to do the same, and it is not impossible that other Italian ports may despatch their mails on this all-attractive expedition. Such a gathering of European keels will hardly have been seen since the days when the galleys of Genoa and Venice carried the chivalry of Christendom to the liberation of Palestine.

However, the object is not a holy war this time. The war, if fighting must needs ensue, will be just and will be unavoidable, but for that matter we alone are the actual belligerents, and we could certainly manage the contest by ourselves. Why, then, are the eagles gathered together? Upon the scent which usually collects them, no doubt. The attracting carcass is a huge over-populated empire—not, perhaps, effete, not decaying, not tumbling to pieces, not exposed in the ordinary helplessness of a prey, but still presenting irresistible allurements to the keen-eyed Cabinets of the Old and New World. The simple matter is, that a country large enough to constitute a considerable section of the whole globe is not unlikely to be brought into the community of Christian nations for the first time. As it happens, the country in question possesses also the monopoly of a produce so sought after as to be all but a necessary of life, and it is rich besides in those treasures of silk indispensable to the markets of the West. It is not, however, in this mere productiveness that the attraction resides. The laws of supply and demand may always be relied upon to insure cargoes of Chinese commodities; nor is it to be anticipated that we shall get tea in much greater quantities, or at a much cheaper price, after this business is settled than we did before. Neither can we assume that the expectations of reciprocity in commerce are exerting any very powerful influence. We ourselves, of course, being such very large consumers of Chinese produce, and such very large manufacturers on our own behalf, may naturally wish that Chinemen would deal with us as we deal with them, and not balance the transaction so interminably in silver alone; but Spain and Sardinia can have no eager anxieties in this way; and, even if they had, it is doubtful whether the pasture is very promising for any of us. The Chinese Empire is so large, its productions are so various, and habits of self-sufficiency in these respects have been inculcated upon Chinamen for so many generations, that it would be unsafe to reckon upon any immediate diffusion of European goods through the interior of the country, even after all the facilities which we may obtain.

Where, then, must we look for the attraction which appears to be so universally felt? Probably in the simple fact that an enormous empire is about to be introduced to the world. Hitherto China has avoided the intercommunion of society—has received nobody, and has visited nobody. The barriers are now likely to be removed, and one State would like admission to the mysterious region as well as another. Such an event as this gives the only chance now remaining of entirely new dealings, alliances or connections. There are no fresh worlds to be discovered; we have been round and round the globe, and have even found the northwest passage. If anything new is to be done it must be in some country long known but hitherto inaccessible, and such a country is China. Japan is a sealed land, certainly; but Japan is a mere speck on the map compared with the mighty empire of the Chinese. Here we believe is the true secret of the gathering. Governments do not, perhaps, expect much; we do not expect much ourselves, but none like to lose an introduction by which may convey nobody knows what, and which is all the more enticing from its very mystery. Every State wishes to be on a footing with the most favored State in its reception at a perfectly new place. Very likely there won't be much divisible, but nobody desires to miss a dividend for want of registering a claim. Commercial profit, political "influences," colonial position—fifty things besides, are floating about as possibly contingent on a good connection with China, and even where none of these are regarded there is the stimulus of fashion and example. Where half the world is going nobody likes to be behind.

And who, then, is to be the master of the ceremonies at this strange specimen of a Congress? In old days the Pope would have partitioned China, as he did the globe, and assigned the imaginary benefits of its provinces by equitable distribution among the Crowns of Christendom. As there is no longer such an arbiter we must each deal for ourselves, and we can do so, we trust, without any conflict of interests whatever. Our own interests are certainly not such as to clash with those of any other Government. On the contrary, they coincide, in the first instance, with the chief interests of all. We demand security for Europeans, freedom from insult, freedom from abasement, freedom from danger. We desire to terminate once and for all the expression, if not the existence, of that feeling by which a semi-barbarous people, whose lives by their own valuation are as cheap as those of dogs, presume upon a superiority in the scale of creation over the most civilized communities in the world. As our trade with the Chinese is enormous, and as we cannot dispense with some establishments in those parts, we ask for such reasonable freedom of settlement and range as health requires, and for the power of taking a few hours' exercise without being stoned. As we know perfectly well that Chinamen, as a nation, are not troubled with any actual sentiments of intolerance or unsociability, but are ready to take service and lodgings at any place between Singapore and St. Mary axe, we require that they shall give as well as take, and behave as freely at home as they do abroad. Here ends the principle of our demands. As to the immediate conditions of commerce, they must take their chance, nor is a word necessary on this score, although such a trade as the Chinese have lately driven with us is almost without a parallel under the sun. If the "balance of trade" is to be computed by the amount passing in money from one side to the other after the industrial productions of each have been interchanged, what is to be thought of the bargain of John Chinaman, who takes the whole value out in silver, and, after selling millions upon millions' worth, will buy nothing at all? This, however, is at his own discretion; we only ask him to do what he is profoundly anxious to do, viz., supply us with tea, and not visit us with degradation and injury while we are making our purchases. If other nations wish for like facilities, the course is open to them. We can have no possible jealousy in this respect. We want to light our own taper at the Chinese candle, but others can do the same without putting us in a bit worse position, or the Chinese either. We trust, indeed, that the results may be as much for their advantage as for ours. There is very little room left for supposing that the Chinese have any great step now to take in entering upon more liberal communications with the world. We have good grounds for believing that their character is in a phase of transition. Their enterprise, as shown in the goldfields and the Straits of Malacca, their ambition, as evinced at Sarawak, and the fermentation of the whole national mind, as exemplified in the tenacity and scope of their rebellion, also conclusive proofs against anything like a cherished system of isolation or seclusion. They have grown too big for their own country, like young birds for their nest; they are fain to come out into the world for their advancement, and they have turned things upside down at home. Their policy, in fact, is at an end. It has endured a long while, but it has failed at last. China must come out of its shell, for its own sake; and when so many millions of human beings throw their lot in with the rest of mankind it is hard if the result should not be for the benefit of all.

Spain and Mexico.

THE TROOPS FOR MEXICO NOT YET DEPARTED—HOPES OF A SETTLEMENT—GEN. CONCHA TO BE REMOVED ON ACCOUNT OF THE SLAVE-TRADE.

Advices from Madrid state that the troops destined for Cuba and eventually for Mexico, had embarked at Cadiz on board the vessels prepared for them, and the Generals who command the expedition, MENDIZUETA, GADRIDO, and SANTIAGO, had gone on board the Francisco de Asis. The actual sailing of the expedition had, however, not taken place.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 16th of May, says:

A telegraphic dispatch from Madrid announces that Mr. LAFRAGUA, the Mexican Envoy, arrived there yesterday. He had this morning an audience of the Minister for Foreign Affairs. I have already mentioned the probability of a pacific arrangement of the quarrel between the two Governments. The latest dispatches received by M. LAFRAGUA from Mexico were of a satisfactory kind, and I have little doubt that, as a favorable disposition exists on both sides, zealously encouraged by the English and French Ambassadors at Madrid, the affair will be terminated amicably. In that case the greater part of the troops sent out to the Gulf will be kept at Cuba to strengthen the garrisons of that island.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Times writes, under date of May 8:

There have been reports this last day or two of the intended removal of General JOSE CONCHA from the command of Cuba, but they obtained little credit, as his term of service expires in October, until when it was thought he would be allowed to remain. Information, however, has just reached me, from a highly trustworthy source, that his recall has been decided on in a Council of Ministers, and that he is to be replaced by General LERSUNDI, at present Minister of Marine. The name of the person who is to replace LERSUNDI is matter of conjecture, but the post will very probably be offered to Don LUIS GONZALES BRAVO. It would not be surprising if there were one or two other changes in the Cabinet; at least, it is generally thought that General FIGUERAS will not long remain in the War Department—a post he fills but very poorly. I am not yet acquainted with all the reasons for CONCHA's recall, but the recent scandalous extension of the Slave Trade in Cuba is believed to be one of them. On this subject, as I before informed you, Lord HOWDEN has lately had occasion to address frequent complaints to the Spanish Government. General CONCHA has, of course, following the example of most of his predecessors, taken a percentage on the profits of this illegal and infamous traffic. He is said to have made the moderate sum of $1,000,000, on which, even if he receive no other appointment, he will be able to exist tolerably on his return to Europe.

The India and China Mails.

INDIA.

TRIESTE, May 14.—The steamer Bombay arrived here to-day, at 2½ P. M., in 116 hours from Alexandria, which port she left on the 9th instant.

The India mails left Alexandria on that day, with advices from Bombay to the 17th of April; Calcutta, April 9; Ceylon, April 18, and Hong Kong, March 29.

At Bombay the banks have again reduced their rate of discount 1 per cent.

At Calcutta there was little or no change in either the produce or export markets. Freights have advanced. The money market was getting easier. Exchange 2s. 1⅞d.@2s. 2¼d.

CHINA.

TRIESTE, May 14.—Accounts from Hong Kong of the 30th March, state that three English ships, with troops, had arrived there. Admiral SEYMOUR had not undertaken any new operations.

The Viceroy YEH had imposed very heavy contributions on the towns and villages under his jurisdiction.

Exchange at Hong Kong, 4s. 11d.

Advices from Shanghae of the 20th March, state that a large business had been done in silk. The total amount of arrivals was 80,000 bales, of which 77,000 had been settled.

Exchange 6s. 11d. to 7s.

News from California.

ADJOURNMENT OF THE STATE LEGISLATURE—PASSAGE OF IMPORTANT ACTS—THE STATE INDEBTEDNESS — MINING AND AGRICULTURAL INTELLIGENCE—WAGON-ROADS ACROSS THE SIERRA NEVADA.

Our advices from San Francisco are to the 5th of May inclusive.

The Eighth Legislature adjourned sine die at meridian of the 30th ultimo, after a session of four months. Although two hundred and eighty bills were passed, but very few of them were of a general character, and fewer still will prove of ultimate benefit to the State. The most important measures are those submitting to the people the question of voting for or against a Convention to revise the Constitution, and the Revenue Act; the election of two United States Senators; the impeachment and conviction of HENRY BATES, late State Treasurer; the impeachment and acquittal of G. W. WHITMAN, Comptroller of the State, sum up pretty much all of other than ordinary legislative business. It is generally conceded that the Legislature was composed of a better class of men than have too frequently heretofore represented the people. The Alta California of the 5th, speaking of some of the more important measures that have passed the Legislature, says:

"The mail which leaves for the Atlantic to-day will convey the gratifying intelligence that the Legislature has at last passed a bill—which has received the signature of the Governor—submitting directly to the people, at the next general election, the question of repudiation, or settlement of the State indebtedness, declared by the Supreme Court to have been unconstitutionally created. In the early stages of the session we urged upon the members of the Legislature the immediate adoption of such a measure, as it would necessarily have had the effect to preserve, at least to a certain extent, our credit in the East, and might have saved many of the bondholders the pecuniary sacrifices they have been required to make, in the sale of the bonds at the low figure to which they have been reduced on account of the Supreme Court's decision, and the continued neglect of the Legislature to provide for taking the sense of the people upon the question of their adoption or repudiation. As it is, we think we can assure our friends at the East, as we have already said, that California will not repudiate. The question will not come to a vote until the general election in September, and, although it is possible and probable, that individual demagogues, seeking an ephemeral popularity among our floating population, may attempt to make an advocacy of the principle of repudiation the means of obtaining office, we have no idea that any degree of success will be attained by them; and we know that no political party, with any hope of success, would dare to make an issue before the people in favor of repudiation. We again say, that we think we can safely assure the absent holders of our securities, that they need have no fear but that they will receive the indorsement of the people. A Revenue bill has been passed, by the terms of which ample provision is made for the current expenses of government, and when the present indebtedness is provided for, we do not believe there will be any occasion in the future for us to exceed the amount of $800,000, to which we are limited by the Constitution."

The accounts received from the mining section of the State continue to be as favorable as ever, and vast quantities of gold are shipped to the seaboard. The supply of water is generally more abundant this Spring than usual, owing to the extraordinary amount of snow lying on the mountains. The quartz mills in the central counties are doing better than ever. The cumbersome machinery in use at first is rapidly being supplanted by that of a more suitable character, and there also appears to be much more system in the management of these quartz enterprises than formerly. Owing to the unprecedented height of the streams, the season will be far advanced before mining in the drained channels can be profitably or successfully carried on.

Agricultural prospects are not so encouraging as mining. Grains and fruits are far advanced, but the former are suffering much from the drouth which prevails all over the State. In some portions of the Southern border counties the wheat and oat crops are already nearly ruined; and even in Yolo, and other adjacent counties, the farmers are bitterly complaining, and foreboding the entire destruction of their cereal products. There is no doubt that the injuries from this cause are overrated, but if no rain falls speedily, an incalculable amount of damage is inevitable. Much more attention than ever before has been paid during the last season to the growing of fruit trees, and the prospects are flattering for a large yield.

The people in the northern section of the State are holding meetings and conventions, and it is probable that several good wagon roads will be constructed to and across the Sierra Nevada, for the purpose of uniting with the termini of the roads provided for by Congress, and of thus bringing in the immigration to California. There is a great degree of enterprise and determination exhibited by the people of the different counties on this subject.

The schools of San Francisco have held their annual examinations during the week, and closed for the term. It is expected that, under the effect of the late amendments to the Consolidation bill, the schools will soon be in a flourishing condition, although they have labored under considerable embarrassment during the last few months.

News from Oregon.

APPREHENSIONS OF ANOTHER INDIAN OUTBREAK.

The news from Oregon indicates that the Indians are again becoming restless, and threaten hostilities.

Considerable anxiety is felt at the month of the Umpqua about the Indians upon the Coast Reserve. They are quite discontented, and threaten to return to their homes on the Klamath and Rogue River. Capt. STUART is prepared, as far as possible, to intercept their southard march, and prevent their crossing the river; but it is feared the small force of sixty men, under his command, will not be sufficient. The Indians number at least 500 warriors; and according to the best accounts, one third of them are well armed. They comprise the fiercest of the southern band. It has cost two bloody and expensive wars to get them under. It would be a dreadful calamity to Southern Oregon should they get back. The mountains along the coast are filled with detached parties of prospecters and miners, following on the gold discoveries of the SIX and Coquille Rivers completely at the mercy of these revengeful devils, should they return; and that they will return, or at least, make the attempt, is the settled opinion of those who are at present here.

BRIGHAM YOUNG BESIEGED IN HIS OWN HOUSE.

From the Calaveras Chronicle (Extra.)

Yesterday (Sunday) morning, 19th inst., Mr. THOMPSON, the daring and intrepid Carson Valley Expressman, arrived in Moquelumne Hill, via Murphy's and the Big Tree Road, from Carson Valley. He left Eagle Ranch on the morning of the 14th, and was four days in reaching Murphy's, having lost his way directly after striking the head waters of the Moquelumne. The reflection of light from the encrusted snow rendered him blind, and that was the cause of his losing his way.

He reports the snow on the mountains from four to six feet deep, from Hope Valley to the Big Meadows; and thinks this is three feet less than is now on the Johnson Cut-off. This is his first trip on the Big Tree Road, and he says it is by great odds the best natural road across the mountains.

By private letters, received from Salt Lake, Mr. THOMPSON learned that the schism in the Mormon Church has assumed a formidable character. The Gladdenites, or apostates from the Simon-pure faith, as enunciated by BRIGHAM and his adherents, have of late wonderfully increased their numbers, and grown so rebellious that the Prophet is forced to environ himself with a trusty guard of the faithful. The letters state that his house is guarded night and day by his friends, and that, so bitter are his enemies against him, he is afraid to show himself in public. He has deserted the Tabernacle. Mr. THOMPSON does not confirm the rumor of his flight.

The Mormons of Carson Valley, on account of difficulties apprehended with their Gentile neighbors, had been peremptorily ordered to Salt Lake, by the Prophet, but thinking it easier to negotiate a peace than to sacrifice their homes, they have shaken hands with the Amalekites, and buried the tomahawk.

Correspondence of the San Francisco Herald.

FORT YUMA, Cal., Wednesday, April 15, 1857.

EDITOR OF THE SAN FRANCISCO HERALD:

Our news with regard to CRABB's party is rather conflicting the first is only coming here to raise the price of beef and plantains, and not to frustrate the people, or to demand the punishment of our citizens, is evidenced by a proclamation he has just issued. Here it is:

GOVERNMENT CIRCULAR.

The following Circular was issued on Saturday evening, May 23:

REPUBLIC OF NEW-GRANADA. STATE OF PANAMA.}
PANAMA, MAY 16, 1857.

By Order of the Department of.....

The Government has reliable information that the Government of the United States does not, for the present, intend to commit any act of hostility against the Isthmus of Panama, exciting, without doubt, that in the re-opening of its negotiations with the new Administration of New-Granada, the disagreeable questions between the two nations shall be settled in a manner honorable to both.

You will please impress the importance of this information upon all the districts of your Department, in order that the irritation and alarm produced by the rumors in circulation of an approaching invasion of the North American may be abandoned.

You will also impress upon your agents and upon all the influential persons of your Department the necessity and duty of watching over the public order, that no disturbance of the peace which ought to reign between the natives and foreigners, in order that no new complications may arise to render it difficult or impossible to regulate matters in the pacific manner which we all desire.

The insult implied by such a fear, and by the presence of the naval force, should be responded to by the population of each canton by acts of benevolence, prudence and good conduct, which will practically contradict the distasteful impressions attempted to be fastened upon their good name. It is the desire of the Government that the future acts of this population should prove to the world that they were not Panamenos who committed the execrable crimes of the 15th of April, 1856; and that if these crimes could have been committed in an unguarded moment, a repetition of them is impossible, without raising to prevent or suppress them by every patriot of the land.

The Governor is confident that the authorities, as well as the inhabitants of the whole State, will act in consonance with the foregoing ideas; doing all they can by prudent and dignified conduct to smooth the way for reconciliation between the people of the two nations who are now so deplorably at variance.

JOAQUIN ASPRILLA.

In the late news from Bogota, there is not the least indication of the course President OSPINA will pursue towards the United States. The papers, also, are silent on the subject. In the Senate, Señores ARBOLEDA, MURILLO, ROJAS, and one or two others, have characterized the talk of war against the United States as fa fanfonada, and this is the only indication of returning reason I can see. OSPINA will no doubt pay, however, if he feels himself strong enough to wound the pride of his people.

Senator ARBOLEDA's bill making the Isthmus independent, during the present difficulties with New-Granada, Great Britain, France, the United States and Sardinia, was defeated in the Senate, it getting only three votes.

The British fleet at Carthagena has brought the Government of New-Granada to terms on the everlasting Mackintosh claim. Congress immediately passed a bill, giving the President power to settle it on terms that will be agreeable to Her Majesty's Minister, and the fleet has left. The first thing the British Admiral did, on his arrival at Carthagena, was to request of the authorities liberty to send two hundred of his men, sick with the yellow fever, on shore to the Hospital, which was acceded to.

Gen. POSADA, who has been some time resident in Aspinwall, has written a pamphlet at Carthagena, urging the rights of the United States to indemnity for the April massacre. He has always been a staunch friend of the Railroad interest.

The opposition to President OSPINA charge him with intending to make use of the proposed vote giving him unlimited power in case of invasion by the United States, to revive the army, by the odious forced enlistment law. A law has been introduced into the House of Representatives raising the national taxes 5 per cent.

J. M. SAMPER, a member of the House of Representatives, having published a scathing article on the vices of the priesthood in New-Granada, one of the Holy Fathers, undertook to whip him for it the other day in Bogota—in which, however, he did not succeed. The Pope had better be coming along this way soon, if he wishes to find any relics of the old priestly tyranny his predecessors planted in Spanish America.

There was an idle story afloat at Carthagena, that a young man from Panama had attempted to assassinate SANTA ANA. It is only bar room babble.

The Governor of the State of Panama has called an extra session of the Legislature to meet on the 1st of June. He does not vouchsafe, in his proclamation, any reasons for the call. Perhaps it is to define the position of the Isthmus in regard to the alienation of any of its territory to a foreign power.

A law has passed through the House of Representatives at Bogota, selling the right of reversion of the Government of New Granada to the Panama Railroad, and all the national property in the State of Panama; and also inviting advances on the revenue of the customs, provided the whole will pay off the public debt. The Senate passed the bill to a second reading, striking out the proviso. If this be a plan to get the Railroad into British hands, it may succeed.

It is also rumored that propositions have been made to transfer certain rights over the Island of Taboga, the main island in the Bay, to Great Britain, in the settlement of the Mackintosh claim. It would be a joke if England should get in ahead of us in her naval station here, though I do not credit the story.

IMPORTANT FROM SOUTH AMERICA.

Attack on Callao—Defeat of the Revolutionists—Assassination of the Secretary of the United States Consul—Movements of Vivanco—News from Chili and Bolivia, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PANAMA, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.

By the British Mail steamship Lima we have Valparaiso dates to April 16, Callao and Lima to the 26th, Paita 29th, and Guayaquil to the 30th.

PERU.

VIVANCO has gone overboard. He has met the enemy and he is theirs. Fate, which seemed to be in his favor for a short time, totally abandoned him at the critical period. The gods, or the gold condors of CASTILLA had the effect to bring Peruvian officers and Peruvian soldiers up to what nothing had ever brought them before: a good, square fight.

My last, you will recollect, left Castilla en route over the sandy desert from Lambeyegue to Paita, with 1,800 men, in pursuit of VIVANCO, who had reached the latter port ahead of him, and embarked on the Apurimac and Huaras with all his force in the North, consisting of some six or eight hundred men, to go to attack Callao and Lima, before CASTILLA could reach them. On the morning of the 21st, VIVANCO cast anchor in the Bay of Callao, and immediately began to make preparations for landing. The population of the city were much excited, of course, and many families left the city. The National Guard were called to arms, and several companies held themselves in readiness in their barracks. At 11 o'clock at night, VIVANCO's men commenced to take to their boats, and the disembarkation was carried on until 3 o'clock in the morning without discovery.

At 5 o'clock 543 men had reached the shore, near the mouth of the river Rimac, and took up their line of march for the suburb of the Pescadores. Here they encountered 100 men, whom they put to flight after a few shots. These shots served to notify the people of what was going on, and also CASTILLA's steamer Ucayali in the bay, which sent immediately 100 men to the Muelle to protect the batteries planted here.

In the Pescadore VIVANCO's force divided, one portion taking the route through the Calles de Lima and Figura for the Plaza, and the other portion marching straight from the Pescadores for the same point. In the Calle del Sosiego the divisions met, and marched to the Plaza of the Church. At this point it was decided that one division should march by the Calle de Lima to attack the Castle, while the other should attack the Arsenal and the batteries of the Muelle. The latter division had reached the "Hovel de la Marina," when the men from the Ucayali having reached that point, they were received by a heavy fire from both the marines and National Guard, which forced them to fall back. This they did, contesting every inch of ground. They finally occupied the Hotel de Aranibia and the Hovel del Union, from which they kept up a smart fire on the Government party as it advanced. The other division was encountered by three companies of the National Guard and some troops from the Castle, at the head of which was Gen. PLAZA, Commander of the Castle and Governor of Callao. Gen. PLAZA was killed at the first fire; when his force divided—one portion occupying the Calle del Muelle, another the Calle de Lurbrogan, and another the little street that runs into the Calle de Vivero. Here the fighting was brisk.

In the meantime the marines of the Ucayali and another portion of the National Guard kept up the attack on the two hotels, until a white flag was displayed, when both divisions of VIVANCO's force surrendered. The revolutionists lost General LOPERA and his son, and Colonel RODRIGUEZ, killed. The whole of the 543 men landed are thus accounted for: Killed, 70; badly wounded, 48; prisoners, 339; went over to the Government during the action, 25; one man only escaped by swimming off to a ship in the bay. The Government lost 40 killed and 56 badly wounded. The fighting lasted from 5 to 8 o'clock in the morning. Almost every street was filled with dead and wounded. The surgeons from the foreign war ships came on shore and rendered all the assistance in their power. The city was not injured, with the exception of the two hotels, and but few robberies were committed. It is said, but little mercy was shown on either side. The number of troops on the Government side is not menioned, but it probably amounted to 1,000. VIVANCO expected little or no resistance—but thought to march straight to Lima, where the Government had not more than 500 men. Generals VIVANCO and CAZAVEDO did not disembark. During the fight, the Apurimac and Huaras had steam up, and kept moving about the bay; but afterwards moved a little further out.

On the 23d, two of the principal citizens of Callao, learning that VIVANCO would bombard the city, by permission of General CANSECO, went on board the Apurimac to have a talk with the revolutionary chief. They were politely received in presence of some 20 officers. VIVANCO commenced by inquiring into the particulars of the morning's fight. After satisfying his curiosity, Señor BUSTAMENTE began to speak of the irritation of the people, but without allowing him to conclude his sentence, VIVANCO broke out in anathemas against Callao. "What have I done, that they should abominate me in this manner?" he inquired.

"General," replied Señor BUSTAMENTE, "the people are not what you believe them to be. You must know that the officers are the only ones who fight against them, while the people fight without officers. Your men are either prisoners, or the streets are running with their blood. The people resist you because you do not leave us this."

"What do you mean?" said the General.

"THE Apurimac," replied BUSTAMENTE, stamping upon the deck. He then referred to the object of his visit, and of the letter which he first thought of sending, but now brought with him. The contents of this letter was principally occupied in questions to the General as to why he came from Chili, at the instance of two hair-brained men, instead of waiting for the free election of the people—telling him that he had come without offering anything to the people, except his own arbitrary will, and that he had better retire to Chili and wait the result of the approaching elections, in order to avoid the further effusion of blood.

They spoke of the evils caused to the country by his lessening the price of the guano to a very low sum, when the contracts had been established for ten or twenty years, losing millions to the treasury.

They told him he must not give credit to the stories of movements in his favor in Lima; that it was impossible he should be benefited by any such; that if his friends made any movement, the armed montoneros would fall upon them, and when they had destroyed them, would sack the property of the citizens of the capital; and that he alone would be responsible for all these evils and the blood which would flow. BUSTAMENTE thought that after the events of the morning, VIVANCO had better submit to the Convention.

The General replied that he would never do so, and much less after having suffered a defeat; that he had yet 5,000 men, the guano islands, and the fleet to sustain him; that the whole nation was for him; that he had only been opposed by the troops of CASTILLA, which were sustained by the illegal acts of the Convention; that he came from Chili because, under the pretext of morality, a Government had been established in Peru, influenced by the counsels of UBETA and GALVEZ, to ruin, oppress and tyrannize over the country. Notwithstanding, if the Convention would dismiss General CASTILLA from the head of the Provisional Government, and offer to the people a reform of the Constitution, he would lay down his arms.

As to the guano, he spoke of the economy with which he applied the funds received from it, of the poverty of those by whom he was surrounded.

During the conversation Captain MONTERO of the frigate threatened to board and destroy the City. Señor BUSTAMENTE replied indignantly, when Gen. VIVANCO interposed, saying that this would not happen without his orders.

And thus ended the interview, which has given rise to a story that VIVANCO had made terms with the Convention.

On the 23d Callao remained quiet, although the Custom-House and all but the military offices were closed.

The 24th was the day appointed for the funeral ceremonies of General PLAZA and Captain MONTERO of the Ucayali. While the cortege was passing along the streets, an alarm was raised that VIVANCO was again landing troops. Thereupon the soldiers of the National Guard in attendance were ordered to discharge their blank cartridges and load with ball. The heavy firing attracted Mr. EATON, the Secretary of the United States Consul, to the balcony in front of the office, where the United States flag was displayed at half mast. No sooner had Mr. E. stepped out than he was shot through the heart by one of the National Guard. He lived only two or three hours. His deposition was taken, in which he stated that the Guard took deliberate aim at him in firing. Two other shots were fired at the same time, the marks of the balls being visible upon the House of the Consul. Mr. EATON's wound was in the right breast, sloping upwards, which corresponds with his declaration that the shots were fired from the short narrow street in front of the Consulate. On the same day, the United States sloop of war John Adams came into port from the Chinchas, and Gen. CANSECO sent his compliments to Commander FAIRFAX. Com. F. replied to Gen. CANSECO that he should be happy to return his salute when the sad event of the morning had been explained in a satisfactory manner. Gen. C. immediately went on board the John Adams, and the result was, that after his explanations he was saluted. He said he had no idea that the National Guard, as a body, was responsible for the death of young EATON, but that it was a simple assassination on the part of one of its members, and that every effort would be made to detect and bring to condign punishment the author of the cowardly murder.

Mr. CLAY was informed by the Council of Ministers of the sad event, as soon as news of it had reached Lima. They expressed their keen regret at the occurrence, and declared the determination of the Government to bring the author to justice. The Comercio, in an editorial on the funeral of Gen. PLAZA, casually speaks of the occurrence, characterizing it as an accident. Neither that paper nor the letter from which I gather the foregoing facts, give the Christian name of young EATON, or the State to which he belonged. His funeral took place on the 25th. It was attended by the Intendente of Callao and his Secretary, by the officers of the war steamer Ucayali, by some English officers, and by five of the officers of the John Adams. The body was deposited in the Pantheon at Bella Vista, on the road to Lima.

Gen. CASTILLA, on his arrival at Paita, the same day the British steamer touched in on the 21st of April, finding his bird had flown, left his 1,300 troops behind him, and took passage to Huacho, a couple of days' ride from Lima, where he debarked on the 24th. One of VIVANCO's steamers undertook to intercept his landing, but was prevented by Her British Majesty's corvette Satellite. He immediately took horse, with a few followers, for Lima. In a night ride he was thrown from his horse, and laid insensible for two hours, but finally reached Lima at 3 o'clock on the morning of the 25th. He was in high spirits—claims to hold the North with 4,000 men, and is confident he will soon terminate the revolution in the South.

The Iquichana, one of VIVANCO's fleet, arrived at the Chinchas on the 23d. Her commander reported that 1,500 were embarked, or were about to embark, on the Peyrona, at Arequipa, to attack Callao. On the 25th VIVANCO left Callao with his steamers, for the South, declaring his intention to return with troops. Previous to leaving port, his Admiral, VALLE-RIESTRA, deserted him, going on board the British ship Naiad, and from thence took passage on the Lima. These Peruvian officers are mostly a set of dirty dogs, who desert one master the moment there is any indication that the feed is going out. He goes to the United States to-day.

Commodore MERVINE having ordered the John Adams to Panama, a petition came up from the American shipmasters by the Lima, representing the danger to American commerce on the coast of Peru, in leaving such vast interests as are there represented without naval protection. They state that there are now at the Chinchee 61 American ships, of from 600 to 1,700 tons each, loading with guano, some under VIVANCO and some under CASTILLA contracts; and that the American capital invested in these ships and their cargoes at this critical period is not less than FIVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS. Commander FAIRFAX had left Lieut. COLLINS with a boat's crew at the Chinchas. Admiral BRUCE, of the British fleet, had assured Commander FAIRFAX that as soon as the Alarm had arrived, which was daily expected, that that vessel and the Cockatrice would be permanently stationed at the Islands to prevent any outrages. Under the circumstances, the John Adams will remain for the present at Callao and the Chinchas.

BOLIVIA.

The yellow fever continued its devastations in La Paz. In the month of March it carried off 273 persons, which is an excess of 30 to 40 over the previous month.

The Government had advertised for contracts to be handed in within six months, to survey the Rivers Amazon and Pilcomago. Here is a chance for some of our enterprising Yankee explorers.

CHILI.

The religious festivals intervening, had caused a partial suspension of business. It was suffering much more, however, from a lack of coin. The editor of the Mercurio attributes this great scarcity to the exportation of silver coin, favored by the actual system of coinage." He could just as easily have attributed it to the right cause, which in all probability is this: This year and the preceding one, on account of the scarcity of agricultural articles for export, and particularly in flour, and their consequent high price, cash has gone forward to pay for the increased imports of the country.

Government, it is thought, will contract a loan of $4,000,000 in London, with which to complete the Valparaiso and Santiago Railroad.

The trials for conspiracy against the Government have not been concluded. One or two new arrests have been made. The public do not believe in the guilt of the accused.

The Municipality of Santiago have obtained permission of the Government to contract a loan of $10,000 to complete the new theatre. It is to be leased this month. It is recommended that a good Opera Company might do well in Valparaiso and Santiago.

Flour brings for shipment, $9 50 to $9 75 for 200 lbs. The Chilians expect to supply the Peruvian market at this or even higher prices, freight added. In American dry goods, narrow gray shirtings were sold 6¾c. to 6¾c.; wide, 9c. to 9½c.; twilled, 10½c. to 10¾c.; flannels, 11¾c. to 12½c.; white cottons, 10½c. to 11½c.; blue cottons, 9¾c. to 11¼c. Sugars are duller. There were on the way two cargoes from the United States, three from Brazil, and two from Holland. Refined Dutch sold for $3 50 @ aroba; do. English, $3 87; American on private terms. Salt Beef $16; salt Pork, $24—market supplied. In Freights, ship Cypress, Guano, from Valparaiso to Cork for orders, £3 12s. 6d; ship Florence Nightingale, Ores from Caldera to United States, $22; Ores from Caldera to Liverpool, £3 15s.

BRAZIL.

By way of England we have dates from Rio to the 14th of April.

The yellow fever was gradually disappearing from the Brazilian ports.

A letter from Rio, of the 14th ult., says: "As to politics, the news of greatest importance is that the present Cabinet will be substituted as soon as the Chambers open, which will take place on the 3d of May next. The Government has just contracted for the importation of 50,000 emigrants, with an association lately organized for that purpose, and to the creation of which Dr. BERNARDO AGUIENUZA greatly contributed. The principal director is the Marquis DE MONTRALEGRE."

Exchange at Rio closed at 27¾@27⅝. The American advices had given an impulse to the Coffee market, and higher prices were demanded, but buyers withdrew in consequence. Sugar improved in value.

No Hides in stock at Pernambuco. Cotton in active demand. Purchases of Sugar limited throughout the month; about 45,000 bags on hand for sale. Sales of Hides at 345 reis. Exchange closed firm at 27¾@⅞. Although not quite free from yellow fever, Pernambuco is healthy.

BUENOS AYRES.

A correspondent from Buenos Ayres, writing on the 4th of April, says:

Contrary to all expectation we got through the grand electoral contest on Sunday last with little blood and no loss of life. The Government party carried the day by a large majority, as every official influence was brought to bear on the point, and a large number of the Opposition were not permitted to record their votes. The nomination of the future Governor still remains; and if the views of the extreme party are carried out, by the appointment of MITRE or ALSINA, we regard another revolution as by no means improbable. With the present party there is no hope whatever of any settlement of the national question; and, setting aside the ruinous differential duties, it will be well if we can steer clear of a war with the interior provinces.

The Indians to the Northwest have made another successful incursion, carrying off 300 or 400 captives, and from 40,000 to 60,000 head of cattle. It has been asserted that they are in connivance with President URQUIZA. We cannot say.

The report of a revolution in Santa Fé gains ground. To all appearances we are fast approaching new and serious troubles.

LOPEZ has been reelected President of the Republic of Paraguay, and accepted, but only for the modified term of three years.

The market at Buenos Ayres for articles of daily consumption had undergone no essential change during the month. Arrivals had been moderate, but quite equal to the demand, fully stocked as the market in general was. Hulders were firm, and prices tolerable steady, with rather a downward tendency. A fair quantity of exports had been despatched during the month.

News from the British West Indies.

ANTI-SLAVE-TRADE DEMONSTRATIONS — CHINESE IMMIGRATION—MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

We have received files of Kingston, Jamaica papers to the 22d of May. No news of special interest.

The presence of the small-pox on board the Troop ship Wm. Hammond, which vessel has been ordered into quarantine by the Health Officer, has caused some alarm to be felt in Kingston.

The weather at Barbadoe had turned favorable for crop operations, which were proceeding at a small pace. During the first half of the previous fortnight calms prevailed, and the heat was trying, but latterly the wind had sprung up, and sugar making had become brisker.

From Trinidad the planters are said to be working easily. The heat was oppressive, and on the 19th ult., a smart shock of earthquake was felt. Produce was daily arriving at the wharves for shipment.

The Governor had been spending a few days in the district through which the proposed tramway was to run for the purpose of examining the state of the country. The yearly report of the Agent-General of Immigrants was considered satisfactory. The aggregate number was 6,683 to the 31st December last, since increased by the arrivals in the Adelaide, Eos Nine and Sir George Seymour of 849 adults and 101 children. Of this number here, at the beginning of the year, 3,484 coolies were under the first indenture for five years, 334 having completed their first five years, had accepted the $50 bounty and indented for another like period; 896 had taken the $10 bounty and entered upon a year's indenture; 720 had taken out certificates of industrial residence; 657 were Chinese, and 892 children. The deaths of coolies during the year were 110, and the births 46. In 1856 the number who returned to India was 280, and the total of arrivals was 566 adults and 61 non adults. The Agent-General closes his report with the note, that upwards of 100 of the Chinese under indenture have applied to purchase the redemption of their remaining year of industrial residence—and that there is every reason to believe that on any future importation of these people more than two-thirds of the number would pay up their indentures at the expiration of the third year. So much for the success of John Chinaman in this field of labor.

Prison discipline was the order of the day in Antigua. The present system being considered faulty, the anxiety is to improve it. The education of the people was another prolific text. The Legislature was still in session.

In St. Lucia the want of medical men still continues to be as great a cause of lament, as the bad state of the roads is of complaint. The press deplores a grave misunderstanding between the authorities in England and those in the East Indies relative to the transport of emigrants; and before any addition to the laboring population can be expected, many alterations have to be made in the terms of the ordinance applying to their introduction.

The intelligence from the other Islands is of no interest.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship Arabia, from Liverpool on the 16th instant arrived at this port yesterday afternoon. She announces the arrival of the Vanderbilt at Cowes on the 15th, and of the United States frigate Niagara at Deal on the 18th inst. The news from Europe, which is one week later, is not important. Nothing of transatlantic interest had occurred in the British Parliament, if we except a few remarks made by Lord PALMERSTON on the existing difficulty between the United States and New-Granada. The Premier supported the course pursued by our Government, and justified its resort to extreme measures if indemnity was not given for past outrages and security for future travel across the Isthmus. An article in the London Post, which we have transferred to our columns, takes the same view of the subject. From Spain we learn that the troops destined to operate against Mexico had not left Cadiz. The Mexican Ambassador had arrived at Madrid. France and England were making every effort to prevent an outbreak of hostilities between Spain and Mexico, and there are strong expectations that the question will, after all, have a peaceful issue. The Spanish Government has announced its intention to dispatch two ships of war to the China Seas, with an agent specially charged to conclude a treaty of commerce with the Celestial Empire. Russia is also fitting out two ships of war at Cronstadt to carry out a Russian Envoy Extraordinary, charged with a special mission to the Emperor of China. A telegraphic dispatch from Trieste gives later news from China. Matters in Canton remain in statu quo.

The United States Mail Steamship Illinois, from Aspinwall on the 19th inst., arrived also at this port yesterday. She brings later news from California, Oregon, the Sandwich Islands, Nicaragua, New-Granada and the West Indies.

From Nicaragua we have full particulars of the brief announcement made in yesterday's issue that Gen. WALKER had abandoned Nicaragua and had surrendered to Capt. DAVIS, of the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's. The capitulation took place on the 18th of May, with the consent of the Costa Rican Commander, Gen. MORA, and on the next day, WALKER, with 16 of his officers, embarked for Panama. The negotiations for the surrender of WALKER were opened by Commander DAVIS, who entered the camp of the Allies for that purpose. Our Panama correspondent, whose letter is published elsewhere, gives the official correspondence in relation to the matter. It will be found of the greatest interest. Gen. HENNINGSEN was among the passengers by the Illinois to this port. From California we have no news of importance to report. The State Legislature adjourned sine die on the 30th of April. Among the bills passed by the session just closed were those submitting to the people the question of voting for or against a Convention to revise the Constitution and the Revenue act. The Governor had signed the bill submitting directly to the people, at the next general election, the question of repudiation or settlement of the State indebtedness declared by the Supreme Court to have been unconstitutionally created. Mining intelligence is favorable, but agricultural prospects, owing to the drouth, are not so encouraging.

From Oregon we learn that there are indications of another Indian outbreak. Considerable anxiety was felt at the mouth of the Umpqua about the Indians upon the Coast Reserve who were reported to be restless and threatening hostilities.

We have a report from Great Salt Lake that the schism in the Mormon Church has assumed a formidable character. BRIGHAM YOUNG is said to have deserted the Tabernacle and remains shut up in his own house, guarded night and day by his friends. He is afraid to show himself in public.

Our advices from the Sandwich Islands are to the 4th of April, but they are unimportant. The month of March had been very stormy, and the loss of the bark J. C. Fremont is reported. A very severe earthquake shock was felt on the Island of Hawaii on the 24th of March.

A correspondent of the San Francisco Herald, writing from Fort Yuma, Cal., gives some particulars concerning the Crabb expeditionists, but our intelligence, received viâ Mexico City, is of a later date.

The difficulty between the United States and New-Granada, according to the news by this mail, has undergone no change. There is not the least indication of the course which President OSPINA intends to pursue. The Mackintosh Claim is settled, it is rumored, by the transfer of certain rights over the Island of Taboga, in the Bay of Panama, to Great Britain. Our correspondent, however, doubts the truth of this report.

The intelligence from Peru is of special importance. VIVANCO, the leader of the revolutionists, had made his threatened demonstration against Callao. He seems to have labored under the impression that when he landed, the people would at once declare in his favor. On the contrary, however, they made a stubborn fight, and the revolutionists were utterly defeated. The whole number of men landed were either killed or taken prisoners. The revolution is considered at an end. On the 24th of April Mr. EATON, Secretary of the United States Consul at Callao, while leaning over the balcony in front of the office, was shot through the heart by one of the National Guard. He lived only two or three hours, and before expiring, deposed that the soldier took deliberate aim at him before firing.

We have received papers from Kingston, Jamaica, to the 22d of May, but we do not find in them any news worthy of special comment.

The steamship Prometheus arrived at this port yesterday, bringing advices from Havana to the 23d inst., and the Isabel arrived at Charleston, with news to the 25th. Quotations for Sugar were unchanged, but Molasses was higher. There is no political news.

The Report on Slavery presented in the New School Assembly at Cleveland, on Monday, states that 27 memorials on the subject of Slavery were handed to the Committee, of which number 11 came from Ohio and 3 from New-York. The report is signed by Rev. Drs. ALLEN, WALLACE, BURCHARD and CLELAND, and Messrs. GAISWOLD and HASTINGS. It declares that the Assembly can never consent to the idea that Slavery ought to be perpetual, and that the Apostles never thought that Slavery was on a level with the natural relations, but that they simply bore with it for the time. The report divides the question into two classes, and counsels moderation and charity, but in the main censures the practice of slaveholding. Its reading created a great excitement.

Officer BOWYER, who had given in his adhesion to the new Police Commissioners, believing the law under which they were appointed strictly constitutional, we regret to learn has since determined to resign his connection with the Department altogether. Officer BOWYER has been nearly a quarter of a century connected with the Police, and has been remarkable for his vigilance and efficient services.

Mayor WOOD has written a letter, rich in rugged abuse of the Republicans, in reply to an invitation to attend a meeting of "German citizens" opposed to the new Police law, to be held at a lager-bier saloon in the Bowery on Tuesday next.

The new Commissioners were asked yesterday by the Quarantine Commissioners, to detail a force of twenty-five men to protect the Quarantine property at Seguine's Point. It is understood that the force asked for will be sent to the Point to-day, in command of Capt. HART, late of the Seventeenth Police District. The old Commissioners have suspended operations for a time, but the Mayor continues busy in devising ways and means, and in consultations with his friends, to carry his points and maintain the "interests of the City."

The Councilmen failed to pass the ordinance creating a day and night watch last night, failing of a quorum.

PETER COOPER declines to be an Excise Commissioner.

The hotel proprietors couldn't get enough together last night to consider the proposed increase of price for hotel board. Probably the project will fall through.

The Board of Councilmen were employed last evening in discussing a resolution to award the street-cleaning contracts—which was finally referred to a Committee—and the new ordinance for the regulation of the night and day police. The adoption of the ordinance was lost by 34 to 14, for want of a constitutional vote—it was reconsidered and laid on the table to Friday.

The City Inspector yesterday declared null and void the contracts for cleaning thirteen Wards of the City, the contractors having failed to come up to their stipulations. Upon the remaining Wards an extension of time is granted. Mr. MORTON promises to enter upon the work of street-cleaning to-day beginning with the First Ward.

The Veterans of 1812 met their friends at Rutger's Institute last night to discuss the means of providing for the indigent among them at least a decent burial.

CHARLES STEPHENS, the second mate of the ship Mary E. Baulch, was tried on a charge of murdering a boy named Ross, about a year ago, while on the high seas. One of the crew testified to seeing STEPHENS strike him on the head with a marlin-spike, and another to seeing STEPHENS take him up and throw him overboard. These witnesses were contradicted by the carpenter, who testified to seeing the boy alive after the time when they swore he was killed, and proved that the second mate was at supper till afterwards, and the Jury, giving no credence to the testimony of the seamen, rendered a verdict of "Not Guilty" without leaving their seats.

Dr. R. OGDEN DOREMUS last evening attracted an immense audience of fully three thousand persons to the Academy of Music. He lectured on "Light," for the benefit of St. Ann's Church for Deaf-Mutes. For three hours and a half the Doctor kept his audience spell-bound. The most brilliant experiments were produced, on a gigantic scale, commensurate with the size of the building. The final experiment of the evening was the production of photographic pictures by electric light, a thing never before attempted with any considerable success. Mr. BRADY officiated, with a large camera. The light produced was perfectly dazzling, and very sunlike. The experiment proved eminently successful.

The Costa Rican Transit Grant and the Fillibusters.

The utter defeat of General WALKER in Nicaragua, and the return home of this eminent fillibuster, gives a new and interesting aspect to that complicated business in which the various transit rontes and grants across the Isthmus are involved. The contest for supremacy on the Nicaraguan ronte has now been transferred from Central America to this City, and the two contending forces are camped in the neighborhood of Bowling Green, on one side, and on the corner of Pine and William streets on the other. The Bowling Green Commodore has succeeded with his usual adroitness in managing his own affairs to create a breach between the parties representing the sale of the Transit for Costa Rica, Messrs. WEBSTER and ANDERSON. It is reported that the latter gentleman and SPENCER, both of them formerly the coadjutors of WEBSTER, are now on their way to Costa Rica as Agents of the Bowling Green Commodore, while Mr. WEBSTER himself, the representative of Costa Rica, remains in New-York, and is actually making terms with the fillibustering firm of MORGAN & Co., his former antagonists, and endeavoring to amalgamate all the opposing interests in favor of this grant.

Messrs. MORGAN, GARRISON & Co. still claim to be the legal proprietors of the Transit Route under the Rivas Grant, while WEBSTER holds the Costa Rican grant in his own name; and, as it is understood that our Government favors the claims of MORGAN, GARRISON & Co., unless the arrangement be consummated as proposed, the Nicaraguan Transit may be closed for some time to come to the traveling community. It may well be imagined that Mr. ANDERSON, the old Costa Rican, felt timid in placing the highway to Nicaragua under the control of the former supporters of General WALKER; but, on the other hand, by settling all differences and disputes, and securing the protection of our own Government and that of Great Britain for the new organization, the convenience of the public will be best served.

A new Company, we understand, is about to be formed, in which some of our leading merchants are taking an active interest; and the business of the transit route will no longer be in the hands of Messrs. MORGAN & Co., nor of any other private speculators. A meeting was held yesterday, we understand, at the office of Mr. DRAPER, at which the preliminaries for the formation of the new Company were arranged. Mr. WEBSTER having been an active opponent of WALKER in Nicaragua, is not likely to be influenced by any other than friendly motives towards Costa Rica. If the new arrangement for settling these Transit difficulties should be carried out, it will probably be recognized by both England and America.

OUR CLAIMS ON NEW-GRANADA.—Hon. ISAAC E. MORSE is at Washington to report the result of his mission to New-Granada. The task is an easy one, for he did nothing. That he would fail to accomplish anything was predicted quite freely, at the time of his appointment, by those acquainted with his rash impulsiveness and his habit of free conversation. He was not born for a diplomat; and among the wily statesmen of Spanish America, who realize the maxim that language is made to conceal ideas rather than express them—he never had a chance of success. Señor DE POMBO would baffle and repel him for the mere sport of the thing, to-day, even though he knew that, to-morrow, he must retrace his steps, and agree to the demands of the United States. The selection of Mr MORSE to treat with such a people was a capital error, and we are reaping the consequences. England, on the other hand, more fortunate in her diplomacy, upon the basis of a single claim of a British subject secures not only respectful attention to her demands, but the cession of a valuable island in liquidation of that claim.

By exertion of similar influences, MORSE's error may be retrieved. At all events, America honor is pledged to the trial, and we trust that it will be made. The responsibility of New-Granada for the outrages perpetrated on innocent women and children traversing her territory, under the protection of a solemn treaty cannot be evaded. Nor are her weakness and poverty to be admitted in bar of her duty to redress, especially when she takes advantage of her weakness to add insult to injury, and mock our complaints. Indemnity for the past, and security for the future, must be exacted sooner or later. If the demand for it shall be presented again through some competent diplomatic agent, we believe that the difficulty may be easily settled upon a basis satisfactory and profitable to both countries. Certainly, if it be true that the new Administration of New-Granada is desirous of reopening negotiations, it would be wise to make the trial.

A Patriot Wanted.

There seems to be a remarkable dearth of intelligent patriots just now. The phenomenon is so unusual that we hasten to record it, in the hope that when the good people of the Union see how badly it looks on paper, some means of abating the evil may be suggested. Among the thousand citizens generally supposed to look upon acquisition of office as the chief end of man, not one can be found capable of representing the Executive branch of the Federal Government at Salt Lake, who is willing to accept the Governorship of Utah. This, at least, is the reason offered us from Washington, for the unfortunate failure of the Administration to promptly meet and try the treasonable issue tendered by BRIGHAM YOUNG and his deluded followers. Mr. BUCHANAN, we are assured, is in great distress about the sufferings of men, women and children, consequent upon the repudiation of all law in that distant region, and the substitution of the tyrannical edicts of priestly despots. He is indignant at the manifold outrages perpetrated there under the influence of sectarian fanaticism; and if he could only scare up a Governor to carry the law there, backed by a military force should resistance be made against its majesty, he would speedily right the wronged, protect the weak and relieve the oppressed. But a Governor can't be had. It really looks as though Mr. BUCHANAN, in his despair, may be compelled to call upon Col. BENTON and his regiment of dragoons, to run down and lasso a Governor upon the plains somewhere, and force the Executive mantle upon him.

Seriously, we suspect there is a good deal of humbug about the difficulty in finding a Governor. We gravely doubt the sincerity of this plea in extenuation of most dangerous procrastination. Major MCCULLOCH, for whom the President has been waiting so long in the hope of his acceptance, possesses qualifications eminently fitting him for the post; but it is an insult to the intelligence of the country to suppose there are not a hundred other men equally capable, and more likely to accept the position. An average amount of practical common sense, with a little knowledge of human nature, and a dash of humanity and bravery—always found in company—are the requisite qualifications, and it will not be pretended that these are scarce in the President's circle of friends.

If Mr. BUCHANAN is prepared to act in the premises now, if there are no ulterior purposes to be served by further delay, there certainly can be no actual difficulty in finding a suitable Governor. We could name a dozen men within the immediate circle of the President's acquaintance of admitted competence for the place;—and there are half the number at least within pistol-shot of his mansion. Let us hope that the selection and appointment of some one will soon give us practical evidence that the Colonel Steptoe farce is not to be re-enacted. The social ulcer of Utah has assumed so malignant a form that longer forbearance of the knife is not to be tolerated. As an organ of that public sentiment which calls so loud for the application of a corrective, we should be false to duty did we fail to rebuke the procrastination which marks Administrative action in these premises. President PIERCE renewed his promise to check the Mormon theocracy day by day during his entire term, yet never took an honest step towards its redemption; and, in view of that experience and its heart-sickening results, the people will be pardoned for apprehending its emulation by the new Administration, until they are afforded some evidence to the contrary in the shape of a demonstration against the gigantic evil which "masterly inactivity" has reared in the Western plains.

A Standing Topic.

We are not sure but that it is a good thing for the public to have a permanent subject of complaint, when it is not of a too serious nature; it serves as a safety-valve for the escape of a good deal of ill-humor which might cause trouble if it were permitted to remain unventilated, or lead to disturbances by being sent in a wrong direction. In Great Britain the unfailing subject about which John Bull incessantly grumbles, is the taxes. Pay he must, but grumble he will; and while he is grumbling about that sore subject, he is quiet on others. In this City we do not heed the taxes, heavy as they are, because they are levied in a way not to make them inconveniently felt by the multitude, who, if they feel evil, do not clearly comprehend its nature. But we have our permanent sore spot, which causes us constantly to wince. The condition of the streets is the stereotyped growl of New-Yorkers. They are always in a state to be found fault with. In dry weather they are dusty, and in wet weather they are muddy. They never are, but always to be cleaned. We are in the constant receipt of letters on this subject, some of them urging us to blow up the City Officials who neglect their duty, and others suggesting measures of reform. There is nothing more remarkable than the fact that every man in the City (and every woman too, for that matter) feels the evil of our dirty streets, and knows exactly how to remedy it, excepting the individual elected to attend to them. It is no less remarkable that on the day of Election the condition of the streets is never thought on, and nobody hints that anything is the matter with them. A gentleman sends us an earnest letter innocently requesting us to "permit him through the columns of our widely read and valuable journal," &c., to call the attention of the public to the condition of the streets, &c. As though there were any necessity of the attention of the public being directed to so palpable a fact, or as though we had not been in the habit of doing it. We might as well call the attention of the public to the fact that the sun rises in the East. The public have had it in their power to order affairs differently once a year at least for the past twenty years, but they have chosen to let things go on in the old way, and they will probably continue to do so, just as John Bull continues to grumble at his taxes while he continues to pay them.

AN ACCOMMODATING ATTORNEY.—The telegraph from Washington apprises us of a curious fact. The United States Attorney for the District of Columbia has informed the Circuit Court that the Government does not desire to detain Mr. JENKINS in custody on the charge of piracy preferred against him by Dr. VAN CAMP, "as the warrant for his arrest was obtained from a Justice of the Peace, without consultation or advice from any officer of the Government or United States Courts!" This strikes us as rather a singular announcement. We take it for granted that if the Justice of the Peace had any right to issue a warrant at all, the power is derived from the same law precisely which gives efficiency to a warrant issued by an officer of the Courts. The idea that the advice of an officer of the Government or of the Courts, is necessary to give vitality to the charge, is an absurdity;—and the "desire" of the Government in the premises is of no more importance than the "desire" of Dr. VAN CAMP, or any other citizen. The simple question to be decided, is as to whether reasonable evidence is presented, showing probable infraction of the law against Piracy. If it is, then it becomes the duty of the United States Attorney to prosecute, whether he "desires" to do so or not; and if no probable ground of complaint against JENKINS exists, it is his right to be discharged from custody for a better reason than that offered by the District-Attorney. The statement, as telegraphed, is unfair towards the accused if innocent, because it would seem to imply that he is permitted to escape through the leniency of the Government, rather than by the demands of justice. It was evident that Attorney KEY did not "desire" to prosecute PRESTON S. BROOKS for his assault upon Senator SUMNER,—nevertheless, he was constrained by the obligations of decency to go through the forms. Whence comes his new light?

TEXAN SENATORSHIP.—The redoubtable Gen. SAM HOUSTON is out as candidate for the Governorship of Texas, with what prospect of success we are unable at this distance to decide. That he will retire from the United States Senate in any event, seems quite certain. For two years past he has been contemplating a resignation, and at the close of the last session of Congress was most decided in the declaration that he would not return to Washington. Who will be his successor, is an interesting question just now to quite a number of aspirants, some of them the bitter enemies of the "hero of San Jacinto."

Strange to say some of the most popular politicians of Texas have hitherto been unable to secure Senatorial position. Gen. HOUSTON owes his elevation, not to superior personal popularity, but to the fact that the strife between the personal friends of other and rival candidates led to the abandonment of them all and a sort of negative concentration upon the General. The same state of things is likely to ensue upon the attempt to elect his successor. It is this fact, we are told, which prevents Major MCCULLOCH from going to Utah. Though not prominent as an aspiring politician, the Major is personally very popular, and his friends, in anticipation of the war of factions in the Senatorial contest, desire to keep him in training as a compromise candidate, confident of their ability to secure his election. The hundreds who saw him in California, a few years ago, clothed in long cowhide boots, red flannel shirt, and brigandish-looking slouch-hat, with a brace of pistols in his belt, collecting taxes by force, will find it difficult to realize his elevation, should it be effected. Nevertheless the Major is a good fellow, and possessed of a larger share of common sense and honesty than have fallen to the lot of some of those with whom Senatorial relations would bring him in contact.

A FACT WELL PUT.—The Charleston Mercury thus closes an article upon the political prospects of Kansas:

"Mr. PIERCE courageously and faithfully endeavored to enforce the true policy of the Union and the policy of the Democratic Party, and was beaten down by the Democratic Party itself. If Kansas is not surrendered to the North before Mr. BUCHANAN'S four years of service shall transpire, he will be as powerless as Mr. PIERCE."

This is a distinct recognition of the fact, which we have often stated, that the principle of self-preservation will require that the Democratic Administration make Kansas a Free State. The belief that it was intended to carry Slavery there lost that Party the whole North except three States, and in those three it was saved from similar defeat only by the pledges of its supporters that Kansas should be free. If Kansas should now be brought into the Union as a Slave State, the Administration would lose every Northern State. It is the conviction of this fact which will make it free.

Recent Legislative Acts no Novelty.

The revolutionary discussions in certain quarters upon the City Hall and Central Park acts, and the assertion that it is an innovation in the Legislature to prescribe Commissioners for county purposes, are not only mischievous but founded upon gross error of fact. From a careful search through the Statute Books for twenty years past we have found that every county wherein a jail or a court-house were to be builded, or a park or highway laid out, or a bridge constructed, Commissioners to superintend the works were named by the Legislature!

As long ago as 1807 the Legislature appointed GOUVERNEUR MORRIS, SIMEON DE WITT and JOHN RUTHERFORD Commissioners to lay out in this City streets and public squares "of such width, extent and direction as to them shall seem most conducive to the public good." These Commissioners made an elaborate report, which ought to figure in the next "Valentine Manual" as a lesson to be read by future Mayors before they assert that such action as was taken by the Legislature touching Central Park is unprecedented and the power given of a despotic nature. In 1834, five Commissioners were appointed by the Governor under an act "to provide for supplying the City of New-York with pure and wholesome water," —known now as the Croton Water act, although at its passage the Commissioners possessed power to locate the head of water as they pleased. In 1816, Fulton Market was laid out by Commissioners appointed by a State Court. In 1845, Commissioners were appointed by the Governor to grant ferry licenses between the City of New-York and Long Island. In 1849, the Tea Governors were first named in Legislative act. Many of the Legislatures in these years were Democratic. In those of which both editors of the Express have been members such kinds of acts for the various counties have been passed, and for which they each voted.

Respecting other counties than New-York, instances might be multiplied to a great extent. Thus, whether the principle of State interference in matters of far less local concern than police be right or wrong, the precedent has been followed by Legislatures of all party grades. And it would be well for those who have suddenly awoke to the "enormities" of 1857 to study the State history.

CLERUS.

The Escape of the Fillibusters.

SIR: When a few men, banded together, with arms and wealth, labor to overthrow the Constitution of a Free State, and reduce a nation to abject Slavery, the mass of mankind look on wondering, and pleased with the magnitude of the attempt. Even the people of free cities and republics—regarding all as the spectacle of a drama in which the catastrophe, however terrible, calls more for their applause as the representation is more real—are not at first affected with those sentiments of horror and indignation which are proper, and should follow the events. They view the struggles of an oppressed and exasperated nation as the Roman people, sitting at ease in the amphitheatre, beheld the contests of bands of gladiators. The nations of Central America struggling in life and liberty against the ragged hordes of WALKER and GARRISON, have been a spectacle to amuse our leisure. We have but lately acquired the taste for blood, and the deaths by famine, pestilence and wounds of our miserable countrymen, who have descended only to fall heaps on heaps in this bloody arena, have not been altogether applauded. Our favorite gladiators disappointed us. They were too brutal, too stupid; ill-trained, ill-supported, their bottle-holders, the Garrisons and Morgans, did not show themselves the good judges and sporting men we had supposed them to be. All at once the thought strikes that what we have been so long beholding at our ease is not a game, but a reality, and that the issues of the contest are principles of right and liberty, in which we, as citizens of the Republic, have individually an interest.

The escape of WILLIAM WALKER from Nicaragua with two hundred and sixty men, the remains of an armed immigration of more than five thousand in all, is an event which, if not properly understood and appreciated by the people and government of the United States, may be only one link in a continued chain of calamities. That a large proportion of the filibusters were comparatively innocent and suffering persons, is not for a moment to be doubted. Many of them, by far the greater number, were decoyed by false representations to take part in a hopeless and wholly unjustifiable enterprise. Not so the leaders and abettors of the undertaking, who for motives of mere avarice, or personal gratification, have destroyed a portion of Central America, sacked and burned its cities, desolated its fields, and converted a place of gardens into a howling wilderness. In the ordinary course of this gigantic piracy, crimes have been committed of every color and magnitude. Under cover of assisting the democratic against the aristocratic faction, in Nicaragua, a body of men were enlisted in California and sent down under the patronage and management, as it afterwards appeared, of an agent of the Accessory Transit Company. Soon after, a favorable crisis occurring, two coups d'etat were effected by the leaders of the Nicaragua invasion, namely, the seizure of the American property in Nicaragua, belonging to the Accessory Transit Company, and the seizure of the supreme power in Nicaragua. It would be an idle and unnecessary waste of time and labor to disclose under what pretexts, and under cover of what forms and proclamations of irresponsible power, the rights of American citizens were formally violated through the advice and instigation of their agents, and the liberties of an entire nation abrogated, their laws, magistrates and customs ignored, and themselves attempted to be enslaved by an absolute military despotism, springing fully armed out of a pretended alliance with the democracy.

The property of the Accessory Transit Company, seized by the Walker-Rivas Government, was immediately transferred to one of the Agents of that Company, who then entered upon the business of transporting an armed immigration. This sudden throwing off the mask by the business managers of the enterprise, was followed in due time by the seizure of the supreme power of Nicaragua by her mercenary ally, and the great crime of the age stood forth undisguised, in all its hideous proportions.

The people of Central America, now fully awake to the danger which impended over their liberties, completed without loss of time a military alliance powerful enough to have destroyed or expelled an enemy much stronger than the one with which they had to contend. The troops of Guatemala, marching five hundred miles over many ranges of mountains, united with the mountaineers of Costa Rica on the common battle-ground of Nicaragua. The inhabitants of Nicaragua, flying from their homes into the wilderness, issued forth armed from their secret hiding places, and hung in revengeful bands upon the skirts of the invaders.

The issue is before the world. It was foreseen by the judicious as a necessary conclusion; but the criminality of the acts which led to it, the full extent and enormity of that long series of tyrannies, military murders, usurpations, massacres, robberies, burnings, kidnappings and detention of American men and women, inoffensive and deceived the systematic frauds upon the public, by false information, coloring defeats as victories, and giving unparalleled stupidities and crimes the hue of successful generalship. The true account of these is still to be written, and the historian who will give them to the world as they are, without favor or prejudice, will render inestimable service to the present age and to posterity. Fillibusterism will then appear not only as a crime, but as the fruitful parent of all possible evils.

Let us not deceive ourselves, however, by supposing that the causes which gave rise to the invasion and partial destruction of Nicaragua are now less active and efficient. WILLIAM WALKER escaped from danger, leaving behind him the corpses of so many thousands of our countrymen—brings with him the seeds and pretexts of new enterprises; and among the myriads of simple and ignorant persons who can be deceived by glowing descriptions, or lying tales of military prowess, there will always be found those who will leave an evil condition here to find dishonored graves in a foreign and uncongenial soil. Even now secret preparations are being made for the invasion of Costa Rica by fresh bands of ignorant victims, dull tools of ambition and avarice. The month of hell is still open, and thousands stand ready to plunge into the abyss. If there is a central and regulative power in the United States—if there is a Government at Washington sagacious and firm enough to foresee and prevent the destruction which impends over entire masses of our countrymen and over Central America, and which is sure to come unless prevented by the strong arm of the National Executive—if the liberties and property of American citizens in foreign lands are ever to receive protection, hitherto withheld, from that Executive, the moment of action has arrived.

For what purpose are the preparations in the Brooklyn Navy Yard? Are the two ships which it is rumored will be soon in readiness for Central America to be stationed at San Juan del Norte, to prevent the invasion of that coast, or are they to be placed there to enforce the claims of the fillibusters chiefs? Will Mr. C. K. GARRISON continue his negotiations with the Costa Rican grantees for the grant which lies in the safe of Messrs GRINNELL, and thereby endeavor to patch up a peace,—for himself and Mr. MORGAN,—with Nicaragua and Costa Rica; or will he hold his faith with WALKER, and the French gentleman who is helping him, and carry out a new invasion? Is the new steamer destined to convey a cargo of fillibusters, to be thrown upon the Costa Rican coasts? If so, will she take with her the Costa Rican grantees leaving behind them their new Charter, locked up in the safe of Mr. GRINNELL? The policy of the ex-Agent of the Accessory Transit Company is far too subtle for our comprehension. With all the subtlety and management of which he is so great a master, he is making preparations merely to pull down ruin upon his own head. For him—the grand patron, and perhaps the parent of fillibusterism in Central America—there is no double course to be pursued. He must make his election. If he still respects the generalship and believes in the humanity and ability of WALKER, let him give WALKER his support. If he thinks that Mr. BUCHANAN will allow Mr. PIERRE SOULE's horde of twelve hundred fillibusters to leave New-Orleans or a port in Texas, and that their landing in Central America will not be prevented by American ships-of-war; if he deems that twelve hundred men can effect what five thousand have failed to accomplish, and that the fens of the Costa Rican Coast are less deadly than the mortiferous shores of Lake Nicaragua; that the ninety days average duration of a soldier's life in the latter region will be sufficiently lengthened in the former,—then let him abandon his present negotiations with the grantees of Nicaragua, and not strive to drag the Transit Charter from the safe of MOSES GRINNELL. Will he, who has spent or made others spend a million in destroying—will he, by complying with that charter, lend a million to Central America? Will he, who looked on quietly while men who were in his confidence wrested the Transit steamers from the accessory Transit Company, and when that was done received them for his own use;—will he pay money to Costa Rica by the terms of a grant, for the ill-gotten property which he and his, it is said, have spent a million in defrauding? Out upon such dealing!

The wily banker of Panama, notwithstanding the grey hairs that sprinkle his massive forehead, has still much to learn. Skilled in the calculations of a profit, infallible in the estimates of a voyage, piercing with intellect like a beam of sunlight the intricacies of a year's account, he is now handling tools too heavy for his hand. There are terms and conditions more imperative than that of the money market, which the would-be Colbert of a Central American despotism must study to understand. The four heroes whose dismal physiognomies, drawn by some bitter enemy of fillibusters, do not "illuminate" the pages of Harper's Weekly, are not the stuff to make conquests. Garrison-Colbert must find other generals more intelligent, more successful. Ignorant courage, sullen ferocity, apathetic disregard of the sufferings of others, artistic talent for coloring ignominious defeats as brilliant victories, the abilities of a recruiting sergeant, a drummer, and a prize-fighter, these are not the qualities which will secure for Colbert-Garrison the golden empire of the Transit, or raise a Walker to the throne of Central America.

Fair readers will be glad to know that at the Philadelphia Opera House, unlike the practice in ours the ladies as well as gentlemen are entitled to the privilege of a promenade between-acts. The custom and its consequences are pleasantly set forth by a lady correspondent of WILLIS' Musical World, as follows:

"The easy and negligent style of manners at the opera there, will do much towards sustaining it. If a lady takes the trouble to dress, she likes to have a chance of being seen, and of course has no objection to take a promenade between the acts, in the corridors and fine saloon, for that purpose—at least you would have thought so if you had seen the display of satins, silks, tissues and laces, not to mention bare shoulders and arms. The promenade room was a perfect ballroom scene, sans the dancing. The Philadelphians recognize equal rights, supposing that if it is agreeable to gentlemen to get up and walk about, it must be equally so to the ladies. I confess rather to like the Philadelphia style, and it did not appear to me that the gentlemen were losers by their gallantry. The beaming faces of the ladies as they chatted and flirted with their companions, were quite a contrast to the serious countenances seen in our Academy, between acts, when the gentlemen go out in throngs and stay till the curtain rises."

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 28.

Mr. KEY, United States Attorney for this District, informed the Circuit Coart this mernlng that the Government does not desire to detain Mr. JENKINS, Consul to Navigators' Islands, in custody on the charge of piracy preferred against him by Dr. VAN CAMP, as the warrant for his arrest was obtained from a Justice of the Peace without consultation or advice from any officer of the Government or United States Courts, and besides, the evidence filed in the State Department by Dr. VAN CAMP did not sustain the charge of perjury. Mr. MAREY, counsel for Mr. JENKINS, asked for his immediate discharge but Mr. BRADLEY, counsel for Dr. VAN CAMP, insisted that the Court should detain the prisoner until argument could be heard on an application for release under habeas corpus. Case of Consul Jenkins.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, May 27, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

You publish in this morning's paper, from your Washington correspondent, a detail of outrages alleged to have been committed upon the property of Mr. VAN CAMP, late United States Commercial Agent at Apia, Navigators' Islands.

Those acquainted with the true character of that unfortunate victim, now a modest claimant for reappointment, will derive considerable amusement from its perusal; and if this poor, innocent martyr to the unauthorized acts of his well meaning successor, can make Government believe that he has been unjustly deprived of $200,000, and thereupon induce Congress to recompense him for this loss, he will have to be more successful in imposing upon their credulity than he has upon any one who has ever visited the Navigators' Islands, with the single exception of the most benavolent of confidence men, old Commodor MERVINE.

It was exceedingly indiscreet in "J." to bring before the public his friend VAN CAMP's official conduct at Apia—for his case is one of those which is not at all aided by light and truth, and the Records of the State Department will show charges against him of the most serious nature, and supported by the most ample proof, leaving no question as to the propriety of the course adopted by the State Department, in his prompt removal.

That Mr. VAN CAMP should avail himself of the perhaps injudicious course adopted by his successor in his honest endeavors to repair the wrongs committed by his predecessor, and thereupon endeavor to change his position before the Department from that of a dismissed and unworthy servant into that of an unfortunate victim of official tyranny, will surprise no one acquainted with the numerous distinguished and varied professional abilities of Dr. AARON VAN CAMP.

If Mr. JENKINS will avail himself of too most ample testimony now at his disposition in the United States, he need give himself no anxiety lest his honest attempt to undo the illegal acts of his predecessor should be regarded by any sane man as an act of piracy.

And if Government also think fit to avail itself of the proper testimony, it can in a moaner very summary, determine whether any one individual or firm at the Navigators' Islands was ever, by any possible means, legally in possession of property worth $200,000.

RED BEARD.

THE DOUBLE-HEADED POLICE.

Rugged Correspondence between Mayor Wood and the Governors—Ex Captain Hart to Command a Squad of 50. P.s at Seguine's Point—The Councilmen impotent—Matsell gets returns from all the Wards, Carpenter from six—The Target Companies, &c., &c.

Ex-Mayor HALL, of Brooklyn, called yesterday at the office of the Metropolitan Commissioners, and requested that twenty five policemen might be sen to protect the State property at Seguine's Point. He said it would be actually necessary that such e force should be detailed and at once, as the feeling of the inhabitants about Seguine's Point was so strong in opposition to the establishment of a Quarantine in their neighborhood, that a further demonstration of violence would be made by them unless timely steps were taken to prevent it. The Commissioners considered the matter, and it is understood that they will to-day send to Staten Island the force asked for. Ex-Captam HART, of the Seventeenth Ward, probably to bave command.

The trial of First Lieutenant WM. H. MARTIN was then had. Deputy CARPENTER, the complainant, testified in substance as already given in the TIMES. Decision was reserved until to-day, in accordance with the rules and regulations. Many private matters were then disposed of by the Commissioners, who adjourned without finally determining upon any new appointments.

Mayor WOOD seldom leaves his office now till towards night. His time is almost constantly occupied in devising ways and means to checkmate the new Commissioners and "Albany dictation," and he receives frequent visits from many of the party who sympathize with these efforts. The old Commissioners appear to have adjourned for the present. They have not yet tried Captains HOPKINS, DILKS, PORTER, or SPEIGHT, all of whom send returns to the new Commissioners, as well as to Mr. MATSELL, thus showing that it is not always impossible to serve two masters. Returns from every Ward were sent to Mr MATSELL's office yesterday, while from six they were sent to the office in White-street.

Officer BOWYER, who on Wednesday placed himself under orders of the new Commissioners, tendered his resignation as a member of the Department, yesterday. The following is his letter of resignation:

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF POLICE,
NEW-YORK, May 28, 1857.

FREDERICK A. TALLMADGE, General Superintendent—Sir: Your communication of the 27th instant, notifying me that, by order of the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police, I was directed to report myself duly at the office of the Deputy Superintendent of Police, forthwith, was not received until late in the afternoon of that day. Pursuant to the notification, I reported myself to you. Having been assigned to duty at the office of the Chief of Police since its organization, and having been a member of the Police Department for nearly a quarter of a century, during all which time I have obeyed, and, to the utmost of my capacity, aided in enforcing the laws of the State, believing that the oath of office required me to do so, and that the constitutionality of any law would be decided by the judiciery, if I remained in the Department, my action in this respect would not change. But, in conformity with a resolution formed some time since, I respectfully tender my resignation as one of the Police of this City.

Respectfully, your obedient servant.

ROBERT W. BOWYER.

Many of the Captains in favor of the old order of things, have taken advantage of his late general order to give Superintendent TALLMADGE a bit of their minds, as well as define their position. The old Sixth Ward stands steady in the old faith. Not a man has flinched, and all the force there seem united in their intention "to do their old duty." In conformity with their resolntion, the names of the Captains who have refused to make their reports to Deputy CARPENTER will be submitted to the Commissioners to-day.

Several Democratic German fellow-citizens, indignant at the "State usurpation and Albany dictation," will hold a meeting at the Volks Garden, in the Bowery, next Tuesday evening, to give it expression. The Committee of Management for this occasion have invited Mayor WOOD to be present. We annex the letter of invitation and the Mayor's reply:

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, May 27, 1857.

SIR: You are invited to address a mass meeting of the German Citizens of New-York, to be held at the Volks Garden, No. 51 Bowery, on Tuesday, the 2d day of June, for the purpose of expressing their opinion in reference to the act of the Albany Legislature, wherein the rights of the people of this City have been assailed and the Constitution violated.

Respectfully your obedient servants,

WM. SCHURMER, M. D.,
J. A. PAPPEN,
DR. CHARLES WANZ,
BERNARD MYER,
GEORGE DESSOYE,
} Committee.

To Hon. FERNANDO WOOD.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: I am thankful for the invitation to address a mass meeting of my German fellow-citizens on Tuesday next, who thus propose to express their sentiments of the recent acts of the Legislature for this City. To peaceably assemble and demand a redress of grievances is a right which is guaranteed by the Constitution, and hence is inherent in our system of government. Upon this occasion it is not only a right but a duty for the people of New-York, irrespective of birth, class or party, to resist and denounce the gross usurpations which have been perpetrated by their tyrant masters at the State Capital. At no time have our interests been so shamefully and flagrantly violated as now. The immediate causes of the American Revolntion were not near so great an infringement upon the liberties of the Colonies, as these measures which you meet to denounce are of the liberties of this metropolis. Had the same principles been incorporated into ministerial orders or decrees for the cities of Boston, New York or Philadelphia, at any time within fifty years anterior to that war, American freedom and Independence would have had a much earlier birth. Our Republican masters at Albany have issued mandates which their royal predecessors at St. James would not have dared to conceive; and as if this great and powerful City had, after a siege, been captured, it appears to have been given over for pillage and plunder to these Black Republican soldiers of fortune.

History furnishes a few similar cases, though none precisely parallel, where three-quarters of a million of brave, prosperous and happy people were subjugated by paper edicts, issued as laws by an unscrupulous cabal, whom chance gave control of a legislative majority. It is to express honest indignation at wrongs like those that you are called upon to assemble, and I doubt not that the united voice of so large and influential class of citizens will and must be heard. I regret, however, that it will be impossible for me to accept your kind invitation to be present and to address the meeting. Since my incumbency of this office, I have avoided attending public meetings of any kind, and have made it an inflexible rule not to participate in the proceedings of any which, in their character, have a political or party bearing. You will excuse me, therefore, from attending at this time, though sympathizing deeply with the object you have in view. Very respectfully,

FERNANDO WOOD.

To Messrs. SCHURMER, PAPPEN, MYER, WANTZ, and DESSOYE.

THE COUNCILMEN ON THE STATE OF THE CITY.

The Councilmen last evening, after discussing the state of the streets, went into Committee of the whole, and took up the ordinance for the establishment of a Day and Night Watch.

An amendment was made on the third Section, to the effect that the consent of the Common Council should be necessary to the alteration of the rules.

Councilman JONES spoke at length upon the late State legislation for the City.

Councilman HASWELL moved a reconsideration of an amendment which had been discussed regarding appointments to office. He moved that hereafter the Sergeants of Police be appointed by the Mayor. Carried.

The question then came under discussion as to salaries of police officers, equalizing them with the amount paid on January 1, 1857. Carried.

The question of the adoption of the ordinance was lost, for want of a constitutional majority. The vote was 34 to 14. It was reconsidered and laid on the table.

The Board then agreed to meet after the adjournment on Friday night—i. e., next day.

Councilman WARNER demanded the call of the house. Councilman MONSON moved that members who had left should be placed under arrest. The motion, after some discussion, was lost. Councilman HASWELL then moved that streets below Sixty-fifth street be declared open. The matter was referred to the Committee on Roads. After which, the Board adjourned to the next evening at 6 o'clock.

POSITION OF THE TARGET COMPANIES.—Aldermaa WILSON'S Volunteer Army of Citizen Soldiers to sustain Mayor WOOD, and protect the chartered rights of the City, does not recruit its ranks as fast as it might—for after having existed a week not more than ninety seven of the thousands who paraded in April, have enlisted under the Alderman's banner. He is not considered exactly the right kind of a man by them, and it was because of his connection with the late parade as an officer, that a split in the ranks occurred in April.

Alderman WILSON'S operations are looked upon by the Captains of the Target Companies generally, as merely for political effect, and the members of the staff resolved, at a late meeting, that however much they, as citizens, may be opposed to the laws of the late Legislature, as Captains of military companies composed of men of all parties, they could not countenance any such organization as Alderman WILSON is desirous of forming. A meeting of the officers of the late parade will be held on Monday evening next, and besides the Captains of the regular body that turned out in April, those of the independent corps that paraded at that time, will be on hand to express their sentiments in opposition to turning the Volunteer Corps into a political body.

ABOUT STREET-CLEANING.

The Contracts for Thirteen Wards Annulled

The City Inspector is getting his hands full. Day before yesterday he served a notice on contractors for cleaning thirteen wards of the City, to wit: First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-second Wards—to the effect that if they did not put their wards in order before twenty-four hours expired, their contracts would be annulled.

The "twenty-four hours" ended yesterday, and as not a single contractor complied with the notice, Mr. MORTON yesterday afternoon declared their contracts annulled. None of the contractors have been paid a dollar for their past three weeks' work: all they have been paid for was the five weeks time—not work—that passed after the contracts were awarded, and before the official dsmise of Mr. ESLING.

To-day Mr. MORTON undertakes the cleaning of the streets of the wards named above. He begins with the First Ward. The Mayor has approved of the course taken, and Mr. FLAGG promises to pay his laborers, and carts are promised immediately in the remaining wards to cart away the accumulated ashes and garbage.

To Mr. RAYNOLDS, who has the contracts for the Seventh, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-first Wards, as "extension of time" has been granted. Nothing has been paid to him either, during the last three weeks. Most of the men employed under the different contractors have filed their claims for arrearages with the Comptroller, to the amount of $11,000.

The Board of Councilmen on the Streets.

The Board of Councilmen met yesterday afternoon, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the chair.

STATE OF THE STREETS.

Councilman WAUGH offered a resolution to the following effect:

Whereas, the streets of this city are in a very dirty and filthy condition, in consequence of dirt, garbage, ashes, &c., thereby endangering the health and lives of our fellow citizens, and which will no doubt lead to pestilence and disease, during the coming warm weather; therefore,

Be Resolved, That the contracts entered into by the Mayor, Comptroller and Commissioners of Streets and Lamps be and the same are hereby annulled.

And be it further resolved, That the City Inspector be and hereby is directed under his own supervision to have the streets cleaned forthwith.

During the question put, Councilman WARNER commenced a violent phillippic upon Councilman OTTARSON, alleging that he had misrepresented him in "his paper"—alluding to the Tribune. He opposed the reference of the resolution, and after the manifestation of strong personal feeling against that gentleman, was called by him to order. He asked that the words of Councilman WARNER might be taken down, wherein he had charged him with "uttering that which he knew to be false."

Councilman WARNER repeated his charges.

Councilman OTTARSON replied, somewhat warmly, stating that Councilman WARNER "lied," [sensation] and again demanding the words to be taken down.

The President's hammer at length silenced both parties, and the altercation subsided.

The resolution was referred to the Special Committee on Cleaning Streets.

Prize Essay on Slavery.

The undersigned, appointed a Committee to award a premium of $100, offered by a benevolent individual, for the best essay on the subject of Slavery, "adapted to receive the approbation of Evangelical Christians generally," have had under examination more than 40 competing manuscripts, a large number of them written with much ability. They have decided to award the prize to the author of the essay entitled, "The Error and the Duty in regard to Slavery," whom they find on opening the accompanying envelop to be Rev. R. B. THURSTON, of Chicopee Falls, Mass.

They would also commend to the attention of the public two of the remaining tracts, selected by the individual who offered the prize, and for which he and others interested have given a prize of $100 each. One of these is entitled, "Friendly Letters to a Christian Slaveholder," by Rev. A. C. BALDWIN, of Durham, Conn.; the other, "Is American Slavery an Institution which Christianity Sanctions, and will Perpetuate?" by Rev. TIMOTHY WILLISTON, of Strongsville, Ohio.

ASA D. SMITH.
MARK HOPKINS.
THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN.

THE CENTRAL AMERICAN NEWS.

Last Days of General Walker in Nicaragua.

Conditions of the Surrender and How it was Effected.

OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE AND DOCUMENTS,

Scenes and Incidents at Rivas Before the Departure of the Fillibusters.

LETTERS FROM GEN. WALKER.

By the arrival of the Illinois from Aspinwall, we receive full particulars of the capitulation of Gen. WALKER and the close of the Nicaraguan war.

As already announced, Gen. WALKER had left Aspinwall for New-Orleans, where he arrived on Wednesday. Among the passengers by the Illinois to this port were Gen. HENNINGSEN and Col. TITUS.

Our correspondent, whose letters will be found below, gives highly interesting details of the last scenes in Rivas, and of the negotiations between Capt. DAVIS and WALKER, which finally led to the latter's surrender.

On the 7th of May, 101 guns announced to the people of San José, Costa Rica, the occupation of Rivas by the Allies.

Gen. MORA, with his division of the army was expected at San José on the 13th. Great preparations were being made to give him an enthusiastic reception.

The Cronica, gives all due credit to Capt. DAVIS for his humane interference to save the lives of WALKER and his followers, and also speaks in the highest credit of his noble conduct.

OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PANAMA, Tuesday, May 19, 1857.

"WALKER has plenty of food and supplies, and is now in a better position than ever." This stereotyped lie of WALKER's friends, and of the newspapers in his interest, is true for once. For, to-day, he is comfortably cabined on the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's, in the harbor of Panama, where he has as much as he can eat, and "is perfectly secure from any attacks," except those of his own conscience.

In my letter of April 20, in some speculations as to the fate of WALKER in the closing scenes at Rivas, which I wrote you I should probably give you by the following steamer, I said that the only possibility of his escape, was that Commander DAVIS, at the last moment, might intercede with the Allies for his life, and the lives of his few followers. This speculation has become fact. WALKER having been reduced, to only 250 men and officers on the 30th of April, surrendered with all his force on the 1st day of May, to Commander DAVIS, by and with the consent of General MORA, Commander-in-Chief of the Allies. He embarked the same day, with 16 of his officers, on board the St. Mary's, sailed on the 5th, and on the 17th, arrived in the port of Panama.

You will recollect that your last advices from WALKER were up to 18th April, in the shape of a rumor that he was confined to only two houses with all his force, and that he could hold out but a few days longer. This was not fully correct.

On the 4th of April, WALKER burned all the buildings except those composing the heart of the city, which he could defend.

On the 11th of April, the Allies attacked WALKER's fortifications, and after great loss, fell back to their lines. They threw an immense number of ball into the city, and undertook to get possession of it by assault. WALKER claims that they lost 500 killed, and 70 prisoners, who fell into his hands, while his own loss was only two killed. The Cronica de Costa Rica speaks of this battle as an unfortunate one for the Allies, and adds: "The loss was grave on both sides."

From this time up to the 27th April, there does not appear to have been much fighting, but deserters were constantly going over to the Allies. On the 27th, 70 of WALKER's men and 17 officers deserted to the Allies, just as the firing recommenced upon the city. On the 28th, the firing against the city was continued. On the 29th, it was augmented.

On the 30th, Commander DAVIS, of the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's, appeared in the allied camp, and commenced negotiations with Gen. MORA for the surrender of WALKER and the remnant of his force. At this time the force of MORA besieging the city amounted to over 2,500 men. I have been favored with copies of the official papers of the negotiations which resulted in the capitulation of WALKER, and will give you the substance of them in regular order:

No. 1—Dated April 30, in the camp of the allies, from Commander DAVIS to Gen. WALKER—Informs him that he is perfectly aware of his position, and offers, by authority from Gen. MORA, to guarantee his personal safety, and the lives and safety of all under his command, if he and they will quit the country. Commander DAVIS also offers to take Gen. WALKER to Panama in the St. Mary's, and notifies him that Gen. MORA consents to suspend hostilities.

No. 2—Dated at Rivas, April 30.—Gen. WALKER writes to Commander DAVIS that his propositions are too vague, and asks for a personal interview.

No. 3—Dated April 30, Commander DAVIS is surprised that Gen. WALKER finds his propositions to be vague. He now asks him to abandon his enterprise, and leave the country, pledging himself for the safety of all persons in Rivas, without exception, but declined the personal interview.

No. 4—Dated April 30, Gen. WALKER writes to Commodore DAVIS that he agrees to suspend hostilities until notified by Commander DAVIS that they are to recommence. He wishes Commander DAVIS to inform Gen. MORA that he considers invitations to his men to desert, as acts of hostility. He proposes to send two officers to Commander DAVIS to treat, if they can have safe conduct.

No. 5—Dated April 30, Commander DAVIS sends safe conduct for the two officers.

No. 6—Dated April 30, Gen. WALKER to Commander DAVIS, names Brigadier-General HENNINGSEN and Col. JOHN P. WATERS, as the persons who are authorized to negotiate.

No. 7 is an agreement entered into between Gen. WALKER and Commander DAVIS, in accordance with the suggestions of the latter, as follows:

RIVAS, Friday, May 1, 1857.

An agreement is hereby entered into between Gen. WM. WALKER on the one part, and Commander CHAS. H. DAVIS, of the United States Navy, on the other part, and of which the stipulations are as follows:

First—Gen. WALKER, with 16 officers of his staff, shall march out of Rivas with their side-arms, pistols, horses, and personal baggage, under the guarantee of said Commander DAVIS, of the United States Navy, that they shall not be molested by the enemy, and shall be allowed to embark on board the United States vessel-of-war St. Mary's, in the harbor of San Juan del Sur, the said Commander DAVIS undertaking to transport them safely on the St. Mary's to Panama.

Second—The officers of Gen. WALKER's army shall march out of Rivas, with their side-arms, under the guarantee and protection of Commander DAVIS, who undertakes to see them safely transported to Panama in charge of a United States officer.

Third—The private and non-commissioned officers, citizens, and employes of departments, wounded or unwounded, shall be surrendered, with their arms, to Com. DAVIS, or one of his officers, and placed under his protection and control, he pledging himself to have them safely transported to Panama, in charge of a United States officer, in separate vessels from the deserters from the ranks, and without being brought into contact with them.

Fourth—Com. DAVIS undertakes to obtain guarantees, and hereby does guarantee, that all natives of Nicaragua or Central America now in Rivas, and surrendered to the protection of Com. DAVIS, shall be allowed to reside in Nicaragua and be protected in life and property.

Fifth—It is agreed that such officers as have wives and families in San Juan del Sur, shall be allowed to remain there under protection of the United States Consul till an opportunity offers of embarking for Panama or San Francisco.

General WALKER and Commander DAVIS mutually pledge themselves to each other that this agreement shall be executed in good faith.

WM. WALKER.
CHAS. HENRY DAVIS,
Commander United States Navy.

Present and acting—C. F. Henningsen, John T. Waters, J. Winthrop Taylor.

No. 8—Dated at Four Corners, suburbs of Rivas, May 1, is a letter from Gen. MORA to Commander DAVIS, thanking him for his successful efforts in ending the war.

No. 9—Dated May 1, Four Corners, camp of the allies, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to General CANAS, informing him that Rivas and all General WALKER's munitions of war at his disposal.

No. 10—Dated at San Juan del Sur, May 2, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to Lieut. MAURY, of the St. Mary's, ordering him to take the Granada, WALKER's war-schooner, by force, if necessary, after informing Captain FASSOUX of the loss of national character his schooner has sustained.

No. 11 is as follows:

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, May 2, 1857.

CAPTAIN FASSOUX: Deliver the Granada to the United States. WM WALKER.

No. 12—Dated San Juan del Sur, May 3, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to Gen. MORA, telling him he is satisfied the claim of Nicaragua to the war-schooner Granada is just, and that he is ready to deliver her over. Commander DAVIS asks Gen. MORA to make arrangements for the transportation of the officers and crew to the United States.

No. 14—Dated San Juan del Sur, May 3, is an order to Lieut. MAURY to transfer the Granada to Gen ESTRADA, Commander of the division of the allies at San Juan del Sur.

No. 14—Dated San Juan del Sur, May 3, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to Lieut. MCCORKLE, of the St. Marys ordering him to proceed to Virgin Bay, take Gen. WALKER's men in charge, and proceed to Panama by such route as Gen. MORA shall direct, advising him that no deserters are to accompany the party.

No. 15—Dated Rivas, May 2, is a letter from Gen. MORA to Commander DAVIS, informing him that he has received orders to march and fortify points on the San Juan River—that he leaves Gen. CANAS in charge, with directions to continue the friendly relations with all parties, and notifying Com. D. that Gen. WALKER had not complied with the terms of the capitulation, he and HENNINGSEN having mutilated the guns, and thrown the powder into wells.

No. 16—Dated San Juan del Snr, May 4, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to General CANAS, thanking him for his courtesy in all the negotiations, for his humanity to prisoners, and to the sick and wounded, and notifying him that he will leave Dr. ROYSTON in charge of the hospitals.

No. 17—Dated on board the sloop-of-war St. Mary's, May 14, is a letter from Commander DAVIS to Commodore MERVINE, of the flag ship Independence at this port, expressing the great gratification he experienced in witnessing General CANAS' humane conduct, in having immediately after the capitulation sent provisions and all necessaries to the sick and wounded; and informing Commodore MERVINE that he left sixty sick and wounded in the hospitals, and twenty in private houses.

The following is the General Order issued by Gen. WALKER to his troops after the capitulation. You will observe the phrase, "In parting for the present," etc., in the document.

HEAD QUARTERS OF THE ARMY, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, RIVAS, Friday, May 1, 1857.

General Order, No. 59.—The Commander-in-Chief, in communicating to the Army the following agreement, thinks it proper to state that he entered into it on the solemn assurance from Captain DAVIS, that Col. LOCKRIDGE, with his whole command, had left the San Juan River for the United States.

In parting, for the present, with the brave comrades who have adhered to our course through evil as well as good report, the Commander-in-Chief desires to return his deep and heartfelt thanks to the officers and soldiers under his command.

Reduced to our present condition by the cowardice of some, the incapacity of others, and the treachery of many, the army has yet written a page of American history, which it is impossible to forget or erase. From the future, if not from the present, we may expect just judgment. WM. WALKER.

The following is a correct list of the officers of WALKER's staff, now on board the St. Mary's:

Gen. Wm. Walker, Gen. C. F. Henningsen, Col. Bruno Netzmer, Col. John P. Waters, Lieut.-Col. Henry, Lieut.-Col. Rogers, Lieut.-Col. Tucker, Brevet Lieut.-Col. Swingle, Major Hoof, Captains West, Williamson, McEachen, FASSOUX, (schooner Granada,) Hawkins; Lieutenants Bacon, McMichael, Brady; Drs. Kellum, McAlemy; Orderly Frederick Romer.

When Gen. WALKER surrendered he had what he calculated as four days' provisions, viz.: two hulls, two horses and three mules.

The fact that only 80 of WALKER's men remained sick at Rivas at the capitulation shows that, at least, 100 must have died within a few days from neglect and starvation, as the number, when WALKER commenced to eat dogs and mule meat, amounted to 170. When Gen. CANAS entered the hospital he was perfectly horror struck with the destitution and misery of the sufferers. He immediately ordered ventilation, clean linen, medicines, and even luxuries to the patients.

The number of men who surrendered with arms in their hands was 240. These men, under charge of Lieut. MCCORKLE, of the St. Mary's, it was understood, were to be marched to Liberia, taken across the Gulf of Nicoya to Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, and from thence transported in the Panama to Panama. The Panama, however, arrived this morning without any of this force, and Capt. DOW brings no reliable news of their whereabouts. I questioned a gentleman of my acquaintance from Salvador, who was on the Panama, as to whether they would be forwarded on her next trip. His reply was: "No, the Government of Costa Rica has no money to waste in any such expense." Some say that they have gone by way of the lake and river to Greytown, but I think there can be no doubt they were on their way to Costa Rica. Whether they will be forwarded is a case of quien sabe.

Those who have any sympathy for Gen. WALKER in his fall, unless they are lost to even the common sentiments of humanity, will have their sympathy somewhat modified on becoming acquainted with the following facts, which I have from a high official source, a gentleman who cannot be mistaken in what he relates: On the 30th day of May, while General WALKER, without the knowledge of his men, was negotiating his capitulation, knowing that he was to surrender the next day, one of his soldiers, contrary to a general order, went outside of his lines. He shortly after returned, he having only gone out to get a bottle of aguadiente. WALKER called him up, when he acknowledged his fault, and prayed for forgiveness. "If you have any message to send to your friends," said WALKER, in his mild, but sarcastic way, "you had better prepare it, for at sundown you die." Punctually at sunset a platoon of soldiers was drawn up for the execution, and just as the order was given to fire, the soldier appealed to his comrades: "Boys, you wouldn't shoot a fellow-soldier for such a thing as that, would you?" They raised their rifles and fired over his head. The poor fellow broke and ran, when he was brought to his knees by Lieut. Col. ROGERS, an Irishman, who figures in the list I send you, by a pistol shot. Stepping up to the man while in this position, ROGERS placed his revolver at his forehead and blew out his brains! May he there isn't a hell. There ought to be, if there is not.

Gen. WALKER and some of his officers have conducted themselves in the most insolent manner towards Com. DAVIS and Com. MERVINE, notwithstanding the former saved their lives, and has treated them in the kindest way on board the St. Mary's. WALKER even charges Com. DAVIS with having induced his men to desert him, and with unjustly turning over his schooner to the allies. Indeed, his insolence is so great that Com. DAVIS does not enter his own cabin, to which he kindly invited WALKER on his coming on board at San Juan del Sur. High officers of the fleet give me this information.

Yesterday, Sunday, Com. MERVINE, feeling bound to see these officers shipped to the United States, sent a very polite message to Gen. WALKER, asking him how many of his staff were able and willing to pay their own passage to the States? "When I need an agent I will appoint one," replied WALKER. Com. MERVINE then sent for Gen. HENNINGSEN, whom he found to be a well bred gentleman in his manner, and put the same question to him. Gen. H. could not say, as it was rather a delicate question for him to broach to his fellow-officers. "Well," replied Com. MERVINE, "as many as are of Gen. WALKER's way of thinking will remain on board my ship, until I get ready to go to San Francisco, when I shall take him and them to that port." On Gen. H. communicating this threat to Gen. WALKER, he got down from his high horse, and said that himself and Gen. H. would pay their own passage, but as to the others he could say nothing.

Com. MERVINE informs me that he shall send the whole across the road to-morrow, under charge of a file of Marines, who will not quit them until the wheels are moving the steamer out of the harbor.

There are some three or four hundred of WALKER's men in Costa Rica, besides the 240 who surrendered last at Rivas. Many of them were enlisting in the Costa Rican army. Others were being gathered at San Jose de Costa Rica, to be sent to Greytown, by way of the Serapiqui river. Some say that they go to take up lands by permission of Costa Rica, on the Serepiqui. In fact, I can get but little reliable information to the deserters.

Col. MCDONALD, formerly Agent of the steamers at San Juan del Sur, and more or less in WALKER's service, sought the protection of the St. Marys, and after living on board of her six weeks at San Juan, was brought by Com. DAVIS to PANAMA, on the same terms as the others. Having broken his parole not to go on shore, Com. DAVIS sent a Lieutenant with some Marines into town to arrest him and bring him on board. He, however, claimed to be a British subject, upon which Com. MERVINE allowed him to escape.

Col. CAYCE, WALKER's Q. M. General, who was reported by the Costa Rican papers sometime since to have deserted, remained with WALKER up to the last, and then joined the allied army.

"Col. TITUS, the Kansas Bully, who ran away from Castillo at the head of 250 men when his enemy had only 22, joined WALKER at Rivas, but deserted some five or six days before the final break up. He has gained a noble reputation as a warrior truly.

Col. CANTY held Greytown, according to information by the British steamer Dee, at last dates, with 200 men.

The allies' objection to the escape of WALKER was the only difficulty that Com. DAVIS had in his negotiations. His persistency and their own humanity finally got the best of the argument, and his life was saved.

This evening the Governor of Panama having verbally expressed a fear that there might be some disturbance at the railroad station on the departure of WALKER, Com. MERVINE addressed the former a note, offering to send on shore a strong guard of Marines, if deemed necessary. Of course the Governor will not consent.

The Railroad Company's steamer Panama, Capt. J. H. Dow, arrived here this morning, having left Punta Arenas de Costa Rica on the 14th instant. She brings 5,000 hides, 2,300 bags of coffee, some indigo, cochineal, sugar, cigars, &c., and 25 passengers.

Departure of General Walker for the United States.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ASPINWALL, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.

Gen. WALKER and officers left on the Granada at 5 o'clock for New-Orleans, Com. MERVINE sent him on shore under a guard of a file of marines, who came over with him on the same car. There was no appearance of restraint however. The people gathered in large numbers at the Panama depôt to get a sight of the lion, but all was orderly and quiet.

In Costa Rica the people were celebrating their triumph by firing cannon, rockets, illuminations, and every other demonstration of joy.

Henningsen's Account of the War.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ASPINWALL, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.

I inclose you "Statistics of WALKER's Campaign," furnished me by Brigadier-General HENNINGSEN, of WALKER's army, through the United States Consul at Panama. It is not valuable to those who are in search of the real facts, as everything is much exaggerated in favor of WALKER, and against the Allies. To say, for instance, that WALKER had to contend against 3,000 Costa Ricans, in the first nine months after the 29th June, 1855, is an unparlonable misstatement, because everybody knows better. That WALKER has received, including those on the River, at least, 5,000 men is beyond question. That the Allies have neither had more than half the men in arms that HENNINGSEN states, or lost half the number he estimates they have, is equally beyond cavil. But due allowance must be made for the anxiety General HENNINGSEN has to make a good stay under defeat, and also for the errors natural to one who was so much interested they should be truths as he is. If you deduct one-half all through for General H.'s glorification of WALKER and himself, and also one half from the number and losses of the Allies all through, the thing will be as nearly correct as can be arrived at. I submit the statement to you without farther comment, as every one conversant with the facts of the fillibuster war will be able to point out its exaggerations.

STATISTICS OF WALKER'S CAMPAIGN.

BY C. F. HENNINGSEN.

The first period may be reckoned from the 29th of June, 1855, comprising nine months, during which time he fought against 4,800 men, namely: 1,800 serviles, and 3,000 Costa Ricans. The result leaving him (after a loss in round numbers of 200 men in killed and wounded, and 1,000 of theirs) master of the soil of Nicaragua.

SECOND PERIOD.

The Second Period may be reckoned from 1st September, 1856, to Dec. 12, of that year, terminating with the evacuation of Granada. During this time, he had to contend against about 7,000 men of the native and allied army—the result being that with a loss of 311 killed and wounded on his part, and of 2,700 killed and wounded on the part of the allies. At the end of December this force was reduced to 1,600 men, thinned every day by desertion. In fact, but for the capture of the lake and river steamers, the war might have been considered virtually decided.

THIRD PERIOD.

The third period may be reckoned from the 25th of January, 1857, to the 1st of May, 1857, which terminated the siege of Rivas, and during which time WALKER had contended with over 6,000 of the enemy, with a loss to his force of 300 killed and wounded, and between 2,000 and 2,500 to that of the allies.

Total.....			299	2100

Force of WALKER from the time of his landing to the 1st of May, 1857, nearly two years, exclusive of LOCKRIDGE's force, 2,518. Total force of the Allies, exclusive of 1,200 Costa Ricans, if, as alleged, on the river, 18,600. Total killed and wounded of WALKER's force, 850. Total Allies killed and wounded, 5,560.

To this force of 2,518 men, the total force WALKER had under arms during two years, since his landing in the country, it is hardly necessary to add the armed citizens who fought at Granada and Rivas, because they are, with a score of exceptions, discharged soldiers, and it must be borne in mind that if many wounded died, a large proportion of the wounded recovered. It is estimated that during two years, of 2,500 men enlisted or holding commissions, about 1,000 were killed or died of their wounds or sickness, about 700 deserted, 250 were discharged, 425 were at Rivas on the 1st of May, and 80 surrendered or escaped down the river. Total 2,465, leaving 53 unaccounted for.

It will be perceived from these tables, which are substantially correct, whatever errors they contain being in favor of the Allies, that this has been no ordinary contest, either as regards the obstinacy with which WALKER's men fought, or the odds against which they were pitted. And to enable your readers to discern that this has been no holiday-work, it will suffice to point out that in proportion to the number engaged, the loss of the Americans averages more than double the number lost in the battles of Mexico by TAYLOR and SCOTT, and that WALKER's men engaged against an average of double the disparity of force which the United States armies had to struggle against in Mexico. Those readers who will take the trouble to figure out the matter, will discover that the loss was, for instance, at Rivas, 11th April, 24 per cent.; at Massaya, Nov. 13, 25 per cent.; at Granada, 37 per cent.; at St. George, in the first battle, 23 per cent.; in the last, 18 per cent. Whereas, the first day's battle in Monterey, in Mexico, gives under 9 per cent.

They will further discern that the average fighting in Nicaragua has been, all through, rather more bloody than the memorable contest of Lundy's Lane. When it is considered that about 1,000 men of WALKER's army have done the real fighting, it may be admitted that they have redeemed the weakness or the shame of those who could not face prolonged endurance or continued danger.

At Jocoté, March 4, by the incapacity of Gen. SANDERS, 125 men, whom he commanded, gave way before 200 of the enemy. The wounded which he abandoned were slaughtered. His total loss was 37 men. This was called "Jocoté races."

On the 16th March, Gen. WALKER marched to San Jorge with 400 men, 2 six-pounders, 1 howitzer, and 4 mortars, and approached within 400 yards and fired on the place for near two hours, expending about 220 shot and shell.

By this fire the enemy were driven out of San Jorge, except the church, where they left a small guard for the wounded. One portion of their force retired back of the town—the remainder, favored by the broken ground, brush and plantain patches, and numbering over 2,000 men, made a fierce attack, which lasted about four hours, on Gen. WALKER's position, which, half the time, was attacked on three sides at once. Finally, all these attempts having been repulsed, Gen. WALKER fired forty shots more on the place, with the view to show that he had maintained his ground, as there was nobody in it. It was now discovered that the enemy had got between Gen. WALKER and RIVAS, where, in the hollow roads and behind cactus hedges, they hoped to impede his return, or at least to stop his heavy guns, mortars, wagons and wounded. They were, however, dispersed without trouble or loss, till close to Rivas, where, on one road they had strongly barricaded a house at the Cuatro Esquinas.

On this road, one gun, a wagon and some wounded were wedged in on a hollow road, and almost as much loss was experienced in rash attempts to pass this house (which Gen. WALKER twice rode by) as during the whole fight at San Jorge.

Meanwhile Gen. HENNINGSEN, who had brought up the rear guard in excellent order, dispatched part of this force with the two guns (which had been easily cleared) into Rivas. Finally, as night was coming on, the other guns and wagons were driven through a plantain patch and brought into Rivas about daybreak. The total loss of WALKER's force was 75 killed and wounded. The loss of the enemy is ascertained to have been 400 killed and wounded, probably much more, as nearly 600 rounds were fired from WALKER's guns.

On the 23d of March 2,500 men attacked Rivas. They nearly surprised, and had half cut through the doors of the hospital, when discovered. They attacked from three sides with great fierceness for about three hours. On three points they succeeded in occupying houses outside the barricades. On one point they brought up a five-pound gun, which was captured, together with an Italian Lieutenant-Colonel commanding it, the same who was on board of the Costa Rica brig blown up by FAYESEUX. The enemy were finally driven out of all these houses, leaving about 30 prisoners, one gun, and 6,000 cartridges in the hands of WALKER.

Though the enemy had been all the morning removing their dead, seventy bodies were buried that afternoon by the garrison; and two wells, one full and the other half filled with dead, were discovered two days after.

The enemy at one time occupied half the house in which Major TUCKER's men were quartered, and 20 were here taken prisoners by him. The total loss of the enemy was ascertained to be over 400 men; that of WALKER 12 killed and wounded.

The next attack was on the 4th of April. An hour before daylight, 150 Costa Ricans, on the information of deserters, gained the lower plaza and occupied nearly a whole row of houses. They again attacked three sides of the town, and succeeded in occupying some huts, being within a thin partition of Captain MCEACHIN's quarters on the main street.

General HENNINGSEN brought three guns to bear, one in front, one on the side, and one in the rear of the said house of the Plaza, and Captain BUCHANAN's company charging on them, 73 including three officers surrendered, the rest having stampeded. One of the guns was then sent to the relief of Captain MCEACHIN, and the enemy were then rapidly driven back. These and St. Ursula were the serious points of attack, on all others they had been repulsed; and by 9 o'clock A. M., had abandoned the field, leaving 150 bodies for WALKER's men to bury, and 23 prisoners, and 25 wounded in his hands. One hundred more dead were seen laid out at the Cuatro Esquinas, and 225 wounded were counted. This, however, was only part of their loss, which, besides prisoners, cannot be computed at less than 600 men. The total force of the enemy was 2,600 men. WALKER's loss was 16 killed and wounded, and 55 from the 22d of March, when the enemy first opened fire with a 24-pound gun, to the 1st of May.

The enemy attempted to batter Rivas with two 24-pounders, one howitzer and four 8-pound guns, one of which was taken on the 23d of March.

Their 24-pound shot, of which they fired near 500 into Rivas, strange to say, only killed one man, (Lieut. MOORE,) and wounded another by a falling beam, (Col. HENRY.) Capt. MANN was killed by a 5 pound shot, and the roofs of the houses suffered considerably.

Some of these 24 pound shot, together with all the church bells and another gun, taken when WALKER entered Rivas in December last, were cast into 6-pound balls and fired back.

When Rivas was surrendered to Capt. DAVIS, the trunnions of all the guns had been broken off and all the ammunition destroyed.

Letters from Gen. Walker—Interesting Accounts of Recent Engagements.

From the San Francisco Herald.

By the permission of Mr. EDMUND RANDOLPH we are enabled to lay before our readers, this morning, the following narrative of recent events in Nicaragua, from the pen of Gen. WALKER himself. From this letter, devoid as it is of any attempt either at exaggeration or concealment, an accurate idea of the present condition of things in Nicaragua can be formed. It will be read with interest:

RIVAS, March 22, 1857.

MY DEAR RANDOLPH: CRITTENDEN wrote to me that * * * had been a very useful man in California; therefore I sent him back with instructions to report faithfully and accurately. I did not know his propensity to lie, or I should have sent some one else. This time I shall write, and not trust to any one. * * * * * * * * *

Since the enemy came into this Department, we have never had more than 500 men for marching. On the first of January, the aggregate of the army was upwards of 1,000, including sick, wounded, and officers on furlough. Now it amounts (Ordinance, Commissary's, Quartermaster's etc. Departments,) to something over 700—for marching, 400. The diminution is due almost entirely to desertion and the balls of the enemy—very little to fever or any form of disease.

Besides the fight at Ohraje—which, as the Costa Rica papers show, did more damage to the enemy than I thought for—we have four times attacked them at San Jorge, and have had one action on the plains near Jocote. During that time, the enemy had several times received reinforcements. Just before we attacked them last, they had from five to six hundred men from Punta Arenas through Guanacaste. They have never attempted to land any men at San Juan del Sur since the ill-fated expedition of the "Once de Abril."

Concerning the action at Obraje, and the first and second attacks on San Jorge, you are already informed. I supposed that * * * would inform you that before he left we gave them a cannonade of about one hundred rounds, but he does not appear to have done so, and I see nothing of this in the papers. This cannonade depressed the enemy, who did not venture to come out to attack us; but our supply of round shot (6 lb.) was limited, and we retired. Since then, we have been casting 6 lb shot, and our capols for shelling is now in operation. This, with the 500 shot CRITTENDEN sent, assists us materially.

After our first cannonade of San Jorge, I mounted fifty or sixty men, and thus raised the Ranger force to 110 or 120. For some days they scoured the neighborhood and kept the enemy close to San Jorge. But they began to desert; one whole company—FARRELL's—going off in two detachments. This company was made up of Stockton gamblers, who did pretty well in action, but had not moral courage to bear up against the terrible reports put in circulation by the natives.

About the time the Sierra Nevada was expected, I sent forty Rangers to San Juan del Sur, under the orders of Col. CAYCE. The day they were to return, I got news that the enemy—about 200 strong—were at or near Jocote. I accordingly sent General SANDERS, with about 120 rifles, to occupy Jocote and communicate with Col. CAYCE. On the road, some four miles this side of Jocote, he met the enemy, from 150 to 200 strong. Soon after the fire opened, Captains HIGLEY and CONWAY, whose companies were deployed in advance, were killed; a panic seized their men and spread rapidly to the rest of the command, and it was, according to all accounts, impossible to rally the men. Eighteen were left on the field—most of these wounded were left in the flight, and some eight or ten wounded were brought in. What makes the matter worse, CAYCE had met the enemy on the Transit and got the better of them, so that they were probably in retreat to San Jorge when SANDERS met them. This happened on or about the 4th of March.

Of course this affair had no tendency to check desertion, which was already rapid, and fomented by the proclamations and addresses the enemy found means to scatter in our camp. On the 7th, however, Captain STEWART arrived with 70 men, and on the next day I addressed the whole force in the Plaza. The desertion was stopped, and the army returned to a healthy state.

The affair at Jocote had depressed the courage of the men, and impaired their confidence in each other: but on the 15th—this day a week ago—I thought their spirits good enough to hazard another attack. Accordingly, on Monday morning, I marched with two sixes and a 12 pound howitzer, 4 mortars, about 400 rounds of 6 pound shot, and 80 shells, supported by men. We opened fire about 7 A. M., at a distance of about 400 yards; and after giving them 120 or 130 rounds of balls, opened with the shells. This soon forced them to come out of the town and attack us. They came out, I think, some 1,500 or 1,800 strong, attacking us vigorously on all sides. Our men met them well—let them come up close—and drove them back with great slaughter. We kept up our cannonade on the town, so that they did not venture to return. About 3 P. M. I ascertained that nearly their whole force was scattered along the road to Rivas, in order to prevent us, as they said, from returning. Forming, then, the column with our wounded and ammunition in the centre, I took the head of the column and kept the advance companies at a charge all the way to Rivas, driving the enemy from all the points they occupied on the road, and scattering them in all directions.

Our loss in this action was 14 killed and 50 wounded, most of the latter slightly. By the enemy's own account they have lost from 400 to 600. The reports make these killed; so I think their loss may very safely be put at from 500 to 600 killed and wounded. Besides these the roads have been covered with deserters, north and south. On the night of the 19th, 88 Costa Rican deserters passed through Virgin on their way home.

Altogether, I think this last blow is as severe as any we have given them since we have been in the country. It has raised the courage of our own men; I never saw them fight better than they did last Monday. In addition to this, while we were at San Jorge, and this place was in the keeping of the departments, citizens and hospital patients, a number of the poor natives of the neighborhood came in and asked for arms. A number of the natives, too, have been voluntarily bringing in to us hogs and cattle during the week. These facts are significant, for they show how the natives think the war is going.

Considering the numbers which have been brought against us in this war, it is remarkable that so many of the poorer class of people have adhered to us in all reverses of fortune. Ignorant as they are of the resources and the feelings and sympathies on which we rely for support from the United States, their confidence in our power is due to the constancy with which we have borne up against famine, pestilence and the thousands the Allies have sent against us. Their hatred, too, to forced military service and their desire for quiet, tranquil labor makes them sympathize with us. I believe we can say with truth and just pride that, in spite of the calumnies our enemies have spread—in spite of the stories about civil and religious Slavery—that we have a large majority of the working people in our favor. Especially is it true in this department, where the transit has increased their little trade and made them familiar with the advantages to be derived from the Americans.

Concerning matters on the river, you will receive by the Sierra Nevada all the news I have up to the present time. The Orizaba will bring later advices, although not later than the 20th, as the Tennessee does not, I understand, touch at San Juan del Norte. My impression is, that LOCKRIDGE will be here in a few days, either by way of Chontales or along the southern shore of the lake; that is, if he is not able to get a steamer. My aide, Major BALDWIN, left here for San Juan del Norte with such instructions as lead me to expect LOCKRIDGE soon. Before the Orizaba returns I may have news direct from the river; if so, I will send it to you.

You will see that our ports are made free. This will, I think, facilitate the settlement of the Mosquito question in a manner more honorable to Nicaragua than was proposed by the Clarendon-Dallas treaty.

I shall write again before the steamer returns.

This letter is written merely to give you some idea of events up to this date. Yours, truly,

MR. EDMUND RANDOLPH. WM. WALKER.

MONDAY, March 23d.

P. S.—While writing the foregoing the enemy were keeping up a cannonade—very slow—with a 24 pounder, from a hill 1,200 or 1,400 yards distant. Their camp was situated on the Hacienda of Cuatro Esquinas, in the direction of San Jorge, while at the same time they barricaded on the Obraje road, on the brow of a hill about 200 yards from our pickets.

Yesterday afternoon and evening, the women who have been friendly to the enemy packed up and left. This was suspicious and foreboded a general attack. The officers on duty for the day were ordered to be vigilant during the night, and two general and two field-officers were ordered to be up in turn. About daylight, an aids called me, saying that the hospital—the Maleano house on the hill—was attacked in the rear. A company was ordered to the hospital, and the enemy was repulsed with the loss of an officer and 6 or 8 killed, and a number wounded. The fire had hardly ceased on the side of the hospital, when the whole front and right flank, as well as a portion of the rear of our camp, were assaulted by the enemy. They got into some of the houses, and commenced very industriously to throw up barricades; but they were finally driven from all their positions, and repulsed with a loss—as far as I can judge from the dead and wounded left behind—of between 300 and 400. They also lost a four pound piece taken by us, as well as 60 or 70 English Minie muskets, and some 5,000 cartridges—excellent British powder in the last.

One of the wounded taken prisoner is an Italian, who came out under the auspices of the Accessory Transit Company, in July, 1855, for the defence of Castillo and the river frontier. He deserted after the treaty of the 23d of October, 1855, and went to Costa Rica; was blown up on the Once de Abril, and picked up by Captain FAYEOUX. After several months service in the chain gang here, he knocked a careless sentry on the head and escaped. He was, therefore, an officer of confidence with the Costa Ricans, and had charge of two four-pound pieces in the action. From him I gather some interesting details. He says we were attacked this morning by up wards of 2,000 men, under Jose JOAQUIN MORA. It appears that the 800 or 900 men who left San José on the 2d instant, did not arrive at San Jorge until last Wednesday, two days after our cannonade. Since then J. J. MORA came from San Carlos with 300 more, leaving TRINIDAD SALAZAR, (the greatest coward in Nicaragua,) in charge of that post. From all accounts SALAZAR could not have with him more than 100 men; and MORA brought with him the 24 pound gun from San Carlos. I, therefore, conjecture that by this time LOCKRIDGE is in possession of the whole river. This Italian estimates that at least one half of the Costa Rican force engaged this morning was put hors du combat. Considerable numbers have doubtless deserted, as our picket on the Jocote road saw them running away in squads of 2, 3 and 4, without arms. The action, then, has been pretty decisive to the Costa Ricans; and this Hondranos we have captured say there were not many more than 100 left of the contingent which JATEUCH brought. The Nicaraguans engaged to-day have doubtless fled in all directions; for the most of them were pressed and glad of an opportunity to escape. ZABALA's Guatemalans are by all accounts few—not more than 200. So that this third battle of Rivas has, I think, been quite decisive to the Allies.

Our troops are in fine spirits. We lost to-day only 4

for believing that there can never be a question so difficult or complicated that it may not meet with a prompt, a peaceful and honorable solution." Nor did the speaker less represent the feelings of his countrymen when he declared that no class of Englishmen looked with jealousy on the expansion of the Union and the increase of its inhabitants. Some such feeling may have had an existence in the last generation, when the memory of our feuds was fresh, and when it was the plan of even well informed statesmen to raise up in the Spanish race a barrier against the predominance of our supposed rivals. But in English society at the present day we can trace no remains of this feeling. In the first place, we have learnt that no Spaniards or other continental people are capable of holding their own against the energy and enterprise of a nation of Anglo Saxon blood, and to suppose that the Americans can be arrested by a set of Spaniards and half-castes is to suppose that the laws of nature can be set aside at the bidding of the politician. Hence, if even any jealousy still existed, common sense would teach us its uselessness and absurdity. But, as Lord NAPIER justly observed, the feeling of Englishmen is rather one of pride and gratification that in so signal a manner and by a course of even a which our fathers judged calamitous, our language, laws, history, and institutions should be made the heritage of a new world which is growing up to such high destinies. We may trust, then, that with a more complete appreciation of such other's part in the world former animosities will die away, and that, while we look with satisfaction on the legitimate extension of the Republic's power in the New World, the Americans will see with equal good will the development and increasing greatness of the British Empire. There is certainly room enough for both when each has a hemisphere. Long may it be, then, before the friendship of the two nations receives an interruption. If any one were to ask why it is that of late days there has sprung up in this country so favorable a feeling towards the United States, we should be inclined to answer that one of the chief reasons is the utter failure of liberal institutions and what we may call English ideas on the Continent of Europe. In despair or in disgust we have turned from the contemplation of those countries where our political usages have been copied only to be made ridiculous or revolting. The events of the last ten years have taught us how little comparatively these nations have in common with us, and have drawn closer the bonds which unite us to a kindred people, without whom we should be alone in the world.

The United States and New-Granada.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Tuesday May 12.

Mr. WYLD asked whether the Government, in consequence of the expedition now fitting in the ports of the United States, the destination of which was said to be the coast of Central America and the territories of New-Granada, had any intention of stationing a naval force upon those shores for the protection of British interests?

Lord PALMERSTON—In reply to the question of my hon. friend I have to state that the Government have stationed, or are about to station, on the coasts of America, on both sides, naval forces which they think sufficient for the protection of British interests; but, considering the interest—I may say the anxiety—which has been excited in the public mind by the rumors to which the hon. gentleman has referred, it would be more agreeable probably to the House that I should give a short explanation of this question, and of its present position. [Hear, hear.] The House is aware that some months ago there occurred a very deplorable scene of violence and outrage at the Isthmus of Panama; that a quarrel began—nobody well knows how—some people say that it was a dispute between a passenger and a native about a water-melon; but, at all events, it acted like a spark thrown upon a smouldering fire, which burst out into a flame, and the reciprocal dislike which had long been growing up led to acts of great violence and scenes of bloodshed, which every body must deplore. The United States Government applied for redress for the past and security for the future, but I am sorry to say that the Government of New Granada, which is not particularly celebrated for carefully recollections of duties, or performance of obligations, refused compliance with these demands. Those arose negotiations and communications between the United States and New Granada Governments, which have not yet led to any satisfactory termination. It is quite clear, I think, that that which is true in regard to private property is true also in regard to a Government—that it has its duties as well as its rights; and that the Government of New-Granada is bound to provide for the security of persons and property passing along the railway through its dominions. The excuse which it gave for refusing compensation to those who suffered by these excesses was, I think, to a certain degree, its own condemnation, because it alleged that the high-handed proceedings of the passengers for a long time before had created great exasperation, and it therefore was not wonderful that a slight cause should produce very considerable results. Now, I must think that if they knew that this great exasperation existed it was their duty to take measures to prevent the commission of outrages either by foreigners upon their own subjects, or by their own subjects upon foreigners. We have been in communication with the United States' Government upon this matter—a matter which evidently concerns not merely the interests of the citizens of the United States, but also those of all other persons whose people are in the habit of traversing this isthmus. I am happy to say that the United States' Government profess the most just and honorable intentions. They disclaim any desire to occupy or take possession of any portion of the Territory of New-Granada, or of the railway. That which they are naturally entitled to expect is security for their citizens in passing and repassing the Isthmus by railway; and they naturally also require some redress for the injuries which were sustained upon the occasion to which I have referred. I am happy to say that their requirements are such as would be made by any Government in a similar position, and that they entirely disclaim any intention of taking advantage of this quarrel for the purpose of putting forward any unjust or aggressive demands against the Government of the State of New-Granada. [Hear, hear.]

From the London Times' City Article, May 13.

There can be little doubt that the Spanish race in New Granada have made much to bear from the conduct of the Californian emigrants, and that, whatever the United States' Commissioners may think upon the point, allowance is to be made for the effect produced upon a weak and sensitive people by the fact of shiploads of Filibusters, well supplied with ammunition and money, being regularly and openly dispatched month by month from the principal ports of the Union. Nothing of this sort, however, can exempt New Granada from the due discharge of her own duties, and, as in her treaty with the railway company she pledged herself to an efficient protection of the transit, she is bound to pay for any default that may be proved to have occurred in that respect, and also to give guarantees against its recurrence. Whether those guarantees must necessarily involve a cession of territory which would place the entire responsibility on the power of the United States, and whether the acceptance of such cession would be in harmony with the clauses of the Clayton Bulwer treaty, are questions which have probably been reconsidered at Washington by the new Cabinet, and which are therefore, it may be assumed, not likely to lead to embarrassment. It is desirable to remark, however, on the evidences which each year presents of the consequences that have arisen for the conduct of those who in 1852 defeated the efforts for the united action of the commercial classes of England and the United States for promoting a joint interest in opening up the communication between the oceans. Had the two countries gone hand in hand, each route might have been developed according to its capabilities, and the general growth of the prosperity of Central America might by this time have been one of the happiest countries of the age. The result of neglecting the opportunity were plainly predicted, and we now see Nicaragua devastated, New-Granada about to be attacked, and Mexico, while involved in complication concerning the Tehuantepec grant, in constant apprehension of further dismemberment.

From the London Post (Ministerial) May 16.

The short but important statement which Lord PALMERSTON made on Tuesday night, respecting the unfortunate difference which prevails between the United States and the Republic of New-Granada, will, we believe, be received with equal satisfaction on both sides of the Atlantic. It shows, first, that the Government of the Noble Lord is fully alive to the necessity of protecting British interests in Central America; and, secondly, that the policy of Mr. BUCHANAN and of General CASS is not of the aggressive character which has been so generally imputed to both by certain of the American newspapers. Instead of hostility to England, the recent re-establishment of diplomatic relations between the two nations appears to have obliterated the recollection of former disagreements, and to have restored those cordial feelings of friendship, the interruption of which was always a matter of deep regret to the people of this country. The Government and citizens of the United States have given a generous response to the sentiments of amity which were so well expressed by Lord NAPIER on a recent occasion; and Lord PALMERSTON has now adopted and confirmed the views of the British Minister at Washington, by assuring the House of Commons that, in reference to the New-Granada difficulty, the United States Government profess the most just and honorable intentions; and that they disclaim any desire to occupy or take possession of any portion of the Territory of New-Granada, or even of the Panama Railway. The history of the dispute, whether arising from some insignificant cause, or from some gross and long-continued provocation, is a matter which it is now useless to discuss. It is quite clear that the outrage which was perpetrated in April, 1856, on the line of the railway, ended in the murder of several American citizens, and that the evidence being conflicting as to the real authors of the quarrel, the Government of New-Granada have not only failed to show that their subjects were in the right, but they have also refused to give to the United States that redress for the past, and security for the future, which, in this case, they have claimed, first by negotiation, and now are about to demand by a perfectly justifiable exhibition of naval force. Another important inference may be drawn from the proceedings connected with this dispute. The Panama Railway is the great means of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans—the readiest and cheapest route by which the journey to and from California can be accomplished. Every country in the world has an interest in this important line, not only with regard to its neutrality, but with regard to the safety of those who avail themselves of its accommodation. The State of New-Granada, with a weak and disorganized Government, and with a population partly of Spanish and Indian origin, not very exactly, nor very orderly, has not the power, even if it had the inclination, to establish those measures of police along the railway which the necessities of this vast passenger traffic require. In saying this, we do not for a moment doubt that California adventurers and American filibusters, with revolvers and bowie-knives in their pockets, would be rather disagreeable customers even in a country where the law is enforced with a stern and vigorous hand. But it is unfortunate that the weakness of New Granada should be brought in direct contact with the lawless propensities and practices of a horde of men who carry with them wherever they go disrespect and contempt for constituted authority. Too often the United States Government has, therefore, acted with moderation and justice in having sought first, by the peaceful means of negotiation and remonstrance, to secure that system of high police which in New-Granada is an absolute necessity; and secondly, upon the failure of diplomacy, in using force to compel the attainment of the same object. The public in this country will readily agree with Lord PALMERSTON, that the United States Government is entitled to expect security for their citizens in passing and repassing the Isthmus by railway, and also to require redress for grievous injuries. The presence of a British fleet at the scene of possible hostilities will not be unattended with salutary effects. Lord PALMERSTON states that the British Government have stationed, or are about to station, on both sides of the Isthmus, naval forces which they think will be sufficient for the protection of British interests. It, therefore, is not probable that the Commander of the United States squadron will be instructed at once, and without further parley and negotiation, to imitate the proceeding of Captain HOLLES, of the Cyane, proceeding which not only ended in the destruction of Greytown, but in the destruction of much property belonging to English and French subject, for which, we may add, no compensation has yet been given. The English fleet will be on the spot to watch the proceedings of the United States squadron, and to exercise that moral influence which is to be the duty of the United States Commissioner and naval force now about to be dispatched to the Chinese seas. It is in every sense deeply to be regretted that the Isthmus of Panama, perhaps the most important geographical and commercial position in the world, should be the seat of a number of weak and disorganized Governments, which contain within themselves no germ of future permanency or power. The United States Government, by adopting a moderate and temperate course, have in the present instance placed themselves entirely in the right; and should the exhibition of force be attended with the desired result, namely, security to life and property along this great interoceanic communication, the commercial nations of the world will have no reason to complain of a policy in the success of which they have a common interest, and in the results of which they must participate.

From the London Times, May 14.

No reflections are more obvious than those in which the greatness of effects is contrasted with the smallness of the causes leading to them, but it seems as if an extraordinary illustration even of this familiar doctrine would be exhibited in the Chinese waters during the present twelvemonth. Last October Mr. Commissioner YEH thought fit to apprehend on board the Arrow a wretched Chinaman whose son or father was alleged to be a pirate, and to refuse the redress which this offence required. It is not improbable that next October may witness, as the consequence of this trespass on the deck of a lorcha, an assemblage of the fleets of half Europe off the coasts of China. A British squadron is already there, and a second on its way. An American squadron is to be despatched forthwith; and a French squadron is on the point of departure for the same destination. All this, perhaps, is natural, but this is not all. Spain is about to revindicate its interests in "the Indies," and the ancient flag of Castille and Leon will again be conspicuous in the Far East. Austria is to send ships to China, Sardinia is to do the same, and it is not impossible that other Italian ports may despatch their quotas on this all-attractive expedition. Such a gathering of European keels will hardly have been seen since the days when the galleys of Genoa and Venice carried the chivalry of Christendom to the liberation of Palestine.

However, the object is not a holy war this time. The war, if fighting must needs ensue, will be just and will be unavoidable, but for that matter we alone are the actual belligerents, and we could certainly manage the contest by ourselves. Why, then, are the eagles gathered together? Upon the scent which usually collects them, no doubt. The attracting carcass is a huge over-populated empire—not, perhaps, effete, not decaying, not tumbling to pieces, not exposed in the ordinary helplessness of a prey, but still seeming irresistible allurements to the keen-eyed abitants of the Old and New World. The simple matter is, that a country large enough to constitute a considerable section of the whole globe is not unlikely to be brought into the community of Christian nations for the first time. As it happens, the country in question possesses also the monopoly of a produce so sought after as to be all but a necessary of life, and it is rich besides in those treasures of silk indispensable to the markets of the West. It is not, however, in this mere productiveness that the attraction resides. The laws of supply and demand may always be relied upon to insure cargoes of Chinese commodities; nor is it to be anticipated that we shall get tea in much greater quantities, or at a much cheaper price, after this business is settled than we did before. Neither can we assume that the expectations of reciprocity in commerce are exerting any very powerful influence. We ourselves, of course, being such very large consumers of Chinese produce, and such very large manufacturers on our own behalf, may naturally wish that Chinamen would deal with us as we deal with them, and not balance the transaction so interminably in silver alone; but Spain and Sardinia can have no eager anxieties in this way; and, even if they had, it is doubtful whether the pasture is very promising for any of us. The Chinese Empire is so large, its productions are so various, and habits of self-sufficiency in these respects have been inculcated upon Chinamen for so many generations, that it would be unsafe to reckon upon any immediate diffusion of European goods through the interior of the country, even after all the facilities which we may obtain.

Where, then, must we look for the attraction which appears to be so universally felt? Probably in the simple fact that an enormous empire is about to be introduced to the world. Hitherto China has avoided the intercommunion of society—has received nobody, and has visited nobody. The barriers are now likely to be removed, and ere State would like admission to the mysterious region as well as another. Such an event as this gives the only chance now remaining of entirely new dealings, alliances or connections. There are no fresh worlds to be discovered; we have been round and round the globe, and have even found the northwest passage. If anything new is to be done it must be in some country long known but hitherto inaccessible, and such a country is China. Japan is a sealed land, certainly; but Japan is more a speck on the map compared with the mighty empire of China. Here we believe is the true secret of the gathering. Governments do not, perhaps, expect much; we do not expect much ourselves, but none like to lose an introduction which may convey nobody knows what, and which is all the more enticing from its very mystery. Every State wishes to be on a footing with the most favored State in its reception at a perfectly new place. Very likely there won't be much divisible, but nobody desires to miss a dividend for want of registering a claim. Commercial profit, political "influence," colonial position—fifty things besides, are floating about as possibly contingent on a good connection with China, and even where none of these are regarded there is the stimulus of fashion and example. Where half the world is going nobody likes to be behind.

And who, then, is to be the master of the ceremonies at this strange specimen of a Congress? In old days the Pope would have partitioned China, as he did the globe, and assigned the imaginary benefits of its provinces by equitable distribution among the Crowns of Christendom. As there is no longer such an arbiter we must each deal for ourselves, and we can do so, we trust, without any conflict of interests whatever. Our own interests are certainly not such as to clash with those of any other Government. On the contrary, they coincide, in the first instance, with the chief interests of all. We demand security for Europeans, freedom from insult, freedom from abasement, freedom from danger. We desire to terminate once and for all the expression, if not the existence, of that feeling by which a semi-barbarous people, whose lives by their own valuation are as cheap as those of dogs, presume upon a superiority in the scale of creation over the most civilized communities in the world. As our trade with the Chinese is enormous, and as we cannot dispense with some establishments in those parts, we ask for such reasonable freedom of settlement and range as health requires, and for the power of taking a few hours' exercise without being stoned. As we know perfectly well that Chinamen, as a nation, are not troubled with any actual sentiments of intolerance or unsociability, but are ready to take service and lodgings at any place between Singapore and St. Mary axe, we require that they shall give as well as take, and behave as freely at home as they do abroad. Here ends the principle of our demands. As to the immediate conditions of commerce, they must take their chance, nor is a word necessary on this score, although such a trade as the Chinese have lately driven with us is almost without a parallel under the sun. If the "balance of trade" is to be computed by the amount passing in money from one side to the other after the industrial productions of each have been interchanged, what is to be thought of the bargain of John Chinaman, who takes the whole value out in silver, and, after selling millions upon millions' worth, will buy nothing at all? This, however, is at his own discretion; we only ask him to do what he is profoundly anxious to do, viz., supply us with tea, and not visit us with degradation and injury while we are making our purchases. If other nations wish for like facilities, the course is open to them. We can have no possible jealousy in this respect. We want to light our own taper at the Chinese candle, but others can do the same without putting us in a bit worse position, or the Chinese either. We trust, indeed, that the results may be as much for their advantage as for ours. There is very little room left for supposing that the Chinese have any great step now to take in entering upon more liberal communications with the world. We have good grounds for believing that their character is in a phase of transition. Their enterprise, as shown in the goldfields and the Straits of Malacca, their ambition, as evinced at Sarawak, and the fermentation of the whole national mind, as exemplified in the tenacity and scope of their rebellion, are conclusive proofs against anything like a cherished system of isolation or seclusion. They have grown too big for their own country, like young birds for their nest; they are fain to come out into the world for their advancement, and they have turned things upside down at home. Their policy, in fact, is at an end. It has endured a long while, but it has failed at last. China must come out of its shell, for its own sake; and when so many millions of human beings throw their lot in with the rest of mankind it is hard if the result should not be for the benefit of all.

Spain and Mexico.

THE TROOPS FOR MEXICO NOT YET DEPARTED—HOPES OF A SETTLEMENT—GEN. CONCHA TO BE REMOVED ON ACCOUNT OF THE SLAVE-TRADE.

Advices from Madrid state that the troops destined for Cuba, and eventually for Mexico, had embarked at Cadiz on board the vessels prepared for them, and the Generals who command the expedition, MENDINUETA, GARRIDO, and SANTIAGO, had gone on board the Francisco de Asis. The actual sailing of the expedition had, however, not taken place.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 16th of May, says:

A telegraphic dispatch from Madrid announces that M. LAFRAGUA, the Mexican Envoy, arrived there yesterday. He had this morning an audience of the Minister for Foreign Affairs. I have already mentioned the probability of a pacific arrangement of the quarrel between the two Governments. The latest dispatches received by M. LAFRAGUA from Mexico were of a satisfactory kind, and I have little doubt that, as a favorable disposition exists on both sides, zealously encouraged by the English and French Ambassadors at Madrid, the affair will be terminated amicably. In that case the greater part of the troops sent out to the Gulf will be kept at Cuba to strengthen the garrisons of that island.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Times writes, under date of May 8:

There have been reports this last day or two of the intended removal of General JOAN CONCHA from the command of Cuba, but they obtained little credit, as his term of service expires in October, until when it was thought he would be allowed to remain. Information, however, has just reached me, from a highly trustworthy source, that his recall has been decided on in a Council of Ministers, and that he is to be replaced by General LERSUNDI, at present Minister of Marine. The name of the person who is to replace LERSUNDI is matter of conjecture, but the post will very probably be offered to Don LUIS GONZALES BRAVO. It would not be surprising if there were one or two other changes in the Cabinet; at least, it is generally thought that General FIGUEIRAS will not long remain in the War Department—a post he fills but very poorly. I am not yet acquainted with all the reasons for CONCHA's recall, but the recent scandalous extension of the Slave Trade in Cuba is believed to be one of them. On this subject, as I before informed you, Lord HOWDEN has lately had occasion to address frequent complaints to the Spanish Government. General CONCHA has, of course, following the example of most of his predecessors, taken a percentage on the profits of this illegal and infamous traffic. He is said to have made the moderate sum of $1,000,000, on which, even if he receive no other appointment, he will be able to exist tolerably on his return to Europe.

The India and China Mails.

INDIA.

TRIESTE, May 14.—The steamer Bombay arrived here to-day, at 2½ P. M., in 116 hours from Alexandria, which port she left on the 9th instant.

The India mails left Alexandria on that day, with advices from Bombay to the 17th of April; Calcutta, April 9; Ceylon, April 19, and Hong Kong, March 29.

At Bombay the banks have again reduced their rate of discount 1 per cent.

The import market remains unchanged. Freights were declining. Exchange 2s. 1¾d.@2s. 1¾d.

At Calcutta there was little or no change in either the produce or export markets. Freights have advanced. The money market was getting easier. Exchange 2s. 1¾d.@2s. 2¼d.

CHINA.

TRIESTE, May 14.—Accounts from Hong Kong of the 30th March, state that three English ships, with troops, had entered the Canton River. Admiral SEYMOUR had not undertaken any new operations.

The Viceroy YEH had imposed very heavy contributions on the towns and villages under his jurisdiction.

News from California.

ADJOURNMENT OF THE STATE LEGISLATURE—PASSAGE OF IMPORTANT ACTS—THE STATE INDEBTEDNESS—MINING AND AGRICULTURAL INTELLIGENCE—WAGON-ROADS ACROSS THE SIERRA NEVADA.

Our advices from San Francisco are to the 5th of May inclusive.

The Eighth Legislature adjourned sine die at meridian of the 30th ultimo, after a session of four months. Although two hundred and eighty bills were passed, but very few of them were of a general character, and fewer still will prove of ultimate benefit to the State. The most important measures are those submitting to the people the question of voting for or against a Convention to revise the Constitution, and the Revenue Act; the election of two United States Senators; the impeachment and conviction of HENRY BATES, late State Treasurer; the impeachment and acquittal of G. W. WHITMAN, Comptroller of the State, sum up pretty much all of other than ordinary legislative business. It is generally conceded that the Legislature was composed of a better class of men than have too frequently heretofore represented the people. The Alta California of the 5th, speaking of some of the more important measures that have passed the Legislature, says:

"The mail which leaves for the Atlantic to-day will convey the gratifying intelligence that the Legislature has at last passed a bill—which has received the signature of the Governor—submitting directly to the people, at the next general election, the question of repudiation, or settlement of the State indebtedness, declared by the Supreme Court to have been unconstitutionally created. In the early stages of the session we urged upon the members of the Legislature the immediate adoption of such a measure, as it would necessarily have had the effect to preserve, at least to a certain extent, our credit in the East, and might have saved many of the bondholders the pecuniary sacrifices they have been required to make, to the sale of the bonds at the low figure to which they have been reduced on account of the Supreme Court's decision, and the continued neglect of the Legislature to provide for taking the sense of the people upon the question of their adoption or repudiation. As it is, we think we can assure our friends at the East, as we have already said, that California will not repudiate. The question will not come to a vote until the general election in September, and, although it is possible and probable, that individual demagogues, seeking an ephemeral popularity among our floating population, may attempt to make an advocacy of the principle of repudiation the means of obtaining office, we have no idea that any degree of success will be attained by them; and we know that no political party, with any hope of success, would dare to make an issue before the people in favor of repudiation. We again say, that we think we can safely assure the absent holders of our securities, that they need have no fear but that they will receive the indorsement of the people. A Revenue bill has been passed, by the terms of which ample provision is made for the current expenses of government, and when the present indebtedness is provided for, we do not believe there will be any occasion in the future for us to exceed the amount of $300,000, to which we are limited by the Constitution."

The accounts received from the mining section of the State continue to be as favorable as ever, and vast quantities of gold are shipped to the seaboard. The supply of water is generally more abundant this Spring than usual, owing to the extraordinary amount of snow lying on the mountains. The quartz mills in the central counties are doing better than ever. The cumbersome machinery in use at first is rapidly being supplanted by that of a more suitable character, and there also appears to be much more system in the management of these quartz enterprises than formerly. Owing to the unprecedented height of the streams, the season will be far advanced before mining in the drained channels can be profitably or successfully carried on.

Agricultural prospects are not so encouraging as mining. Grains and fruits are far advanced, but the former are suffering much from the drouth which prevails all over the State. In some portions of the Southern border counties the wheat and oat crops are already nearly ruined; and even in Yolo, and other adjacent counties, the farmers are bitterly complaining, and foreboding the entire destruction of their cereal products. There is no doubt that the injuries from this cause are overrated, but if no rain falls speedily, an incalculable amount of damage is inevitable. Much more attention than ever before has been paid during the last season to the growing of fruit trees, and the prospects are flattering for a large yield.

The people in the northern section of the State are holding meetings and conventions, and it is probable that several good wagon roads will be constructed to and across the Sierra Nevada, for the purpose of uniting with the termini of the roads provided for by Congress, and of thus bringing in the immigration to California. There is a great degree of enterprise and determination exhibited by the people of the different counties on this subject.

The schools of San Francisco have held their annual examinations during the week, and closed for the term. It is expected that, under the effect of the late amendments to the Consolidation bill, the schools will soon be in a flourishing condition, although they have labored under considerable embarrassment during the last few months.

News from Oregon.

APPREHENSIONS OF ANOTHER INDIAN OUTBREAK.

The news from Oregon indicates that the Indians are again becoming restless, and threaten hostilities.

Considerable anxiety is felt at the mouth of the Umpqua about the Indians upon the Coast Reserve. They are quite discontented, and threaten to return to their homes on the Klamath and Rogue River. Capt. STUART is prepared, as far as possible, to intercept their southard march, and prevent their crossing the river; but it is feared the small force of sixty men, under his command, will not be sufficient. The Indians number at least 500 warriors; and according to the best accounts, one third of them are well armed. They comprise the fiercest of the southern hand. It has cost two bloody and expensive wars to get them under. It would be a dreadful calamity to Southern Oregon should they get back. The mountains along the coast are filled with detached parties of prospectors and miners, following out the gold discoveries of the Six and Coquille Rivers completely at the mercy of these revengeful devils, should they return; and that they will return, or at least, make the attempt, is the settled opinion of those who are at present here.

Important from Salt Lake City.

BRIGHAM YOUNG BESIEGED IN HIS OWN HOUSE.

From the Calaveras Chronicle (Extra.)

Yesterday (Sunday) morning, 19th inst., Mr. THOMPSON, the daring and intrepid Carson Valley Expressman, arrived in Mokelumne Hill, via Murphy's and the Big Tree Road, from Carson Valley. He left Eagle Ranch on the morning of the 14th, and was four days in reaching Murphy's, having lost his way directly after striking the head waters of the Mokelumne. The reflection of light from the encrusted snow rendered him blind, and that was the cause of his losing his way.

He reports the snow on the mountains from four to six feet deep, from Hope Valley to the Big Meadows; and thinks this is three feet less than is now on the Johnson Cut-off. This is his first trip on the Big Tree Road, and he says it is by great odds the best natural road across the mountains.

By private letters, received from Salt Lake, Mr. THOMPSON learned that the schism in the Mormon Church has assumed a formidable character. The Gladdenites, or apostates from the Simon-pure faith as enunciated by BRIGHAM and his adherents, have of late wonderfully increased their numbers, and grown so rebellious that the Prophet is forced to environ himself with a trusty guard of the faithful. The latter state that his house is guarded night and day by his friends, and that, so bitter are his enemies against him, he is afraid to show himself in public. He has deserted the Tabernacle. Mr. THOMPSON does not confirm the rumor of his flight.

The Mormons of Carson Valley, on account of difficulties apprehended with their Gentile neighbors, had been peremptorily ordered to Salt Lake, by the Prophet, but thinking it easier to negotiate a peace than to sacrifice their homes, they have shaken hands with the Amalekites, and buried the tomahawk.

The Crabb Expedition to Sonora.

Correspondence of the San Francisco Herald.

FORT YUMA, Cal., Wednesday, April 15, 1857.

EDITOR OF THE SAN FRANCISCO HERALD:

Our news with regard to CRABB and his party is rather conflicting. It seems to be pretty generally settled, however, that, after a very severe march over the desert, they reached Sonoita, losing one wagon, much ba the fleet is daily coming here to raise the price of beef and provisions, and not to hostilize the people, or to demand the murderers of our citizens, is evidenced by a proclamation he has just issued. Here it is:

GOVERNMENT CIRCULAR.

The following Circular was issued on Saturday evening, May 23:

REPUBLIC OF NEW-GRANADA. STATE OF PANAMA.}
PANAMA, May 16, 1857. }

By Superior of the Department of ——:

The Government has reliable information that the General Government of the United States does not, for the present, intend to commit any act of hostility against the Isthmus of Panama, or, acting, without doubt, that in the re-opening of new negotiations with the new Administration of New-Granada, the disagreeable questions between the two nations shall be settled in a manner honorable to both.

You will please impress the importance of this information upon all the districts of your Department, in order that the irritation and alarm produced by the rumors in circulation of an approaching invasion of the North American may be abandoned.

You will also impress upon your agents and upon all the influential persons of your Department the necessity and duty of watching over the public order, that no disturbance of the peace which ought to reign between the natives and foreigners, in order that no new complications may arise to render it difficult or impossible to regulate matters in the peaceful manner which we all desire.

There is in the United States a fear, as injurious as it is unfounded, that an attack is now initiated against transient North Americans. Unfortunately the United States Government participates in this deplorable error; and it appears that it is with this view it has direc ed a reinforcement to the corps of war in Colon and Panama.

The insult implied by such a fear, and by the presence of the naval forces, should be responded to by the population with acts of benevolence, prudence, and good conduct, which will practically contradict the disgraceful implication attempted to be fastened upon their good name. It is the desire of the Government that the future acts of this population should prove to the world that they were not Panamenos who committed the execrable crimes of the 15th of April, 1856; and that if these crimes could have been committed in an engarded moment, a repetition of them is impossible, without raising to prevent or suppress them by every patriot of the land.

The Governor is confident that the authorities, as well as the inhabitants of the whole State, will act in consonance with the foregoing ideas; doing all they can by prudent and dignified conduct to smooth the way for reconciliation between the people of the two nations who are now so deplorably at variance.

JOAQUIN ASPRILLA.

By the late news from Bogota, there is not the least indication of the course President OSPINA will pursue towards the United States. The papers, also, are silent on the subject. In the Senate, Senores ARBOLEDA, MERILLO, ROLDAN, and one or two others, have characterized the talk of war against the United States as fa-furonade, and this is the only indication of returning reason I can see. OSPINA will no doubt pay, however, if he feels himself strong enough to wound the pride of his people.

Senator ARCHEREA's bill making the Isthmus independent, placing it under the protection of New-Granada, Great Britain, France, the United States and Sardinia, was defeated in the Senate, it getting only three votes.

The British fleet at Carthagena has brought the Government of New-Granada to terms on the everlasting Mackintosh claim. Congress immediately passed a bill, giving the President power to settle it on terms that will be agreeable to Her Majesty's Minister, and the fleet has left. The first thing the British Admiral did, on his arrival at Carthagena, was to request of the authorities liberty to send two hundred of his men, sick with the yellow fever, on shore to the Hospital, which was acceded to.

Gen. POSADA, who has been some time resident in Aspinwall, has written a pamphlet at Carthagena, urging the rights of the United States to indemnity for the April massacre. He has always been a staunch friend of the Railroad interest.

The opposition to President OSPINA charge him with intending to make use of the proposed vote giving him unlimited power in case of invasion by the United States, to revive the army, by the odious forced enlistment law. A law has been introduced into the House of Representatives raising the national taxes five per cent.

J. M. SAMPER, a member of the House of Representatives, having published a scathing article on the vices of the priesthood in New-Granada, one of the Holy Fathers, undertook to whip him, for in the other day in Bogota—in which, however, he did not succeed. The Pope had better be coming along this way soon, if he wishes to find any relics of the old priestly tyranny his predecessors planted in Spanish America.

There was an idle story afloat at Carthagena, that a young man from Panama had attempted to assassinate SANTA ANA. It is only bar room babble.

The Governor of the State of Panama has called an extra session of the Legislature to meet on the 1st of June. He does not vouchsafe, in his proclamation, any reason for the call. Perhaps it is to define the position of the Isthmus in regard to the alienation of any of its territory to a foreign power.

A law has passed through the House of Representatives at Bogota, selling the right of reversion of the Government of New Granada to the Panama Railroad, and all the national property in the State of Panama; and also inviting advances on the revenue of the customs, provided the whole will pay off the public debt. The Senate passed the bill to a second reading, striking out the proviso. If this be a plan to get the Railroad into British hands, it may succeed.

It is also rumored that propositions have been made to transfer certain rights over the Island of Taboga, the main island in the Bay, to Great Britain, in the settlement of the Mackintosh claim. It would be a joke if England should get in ahead of us in her naval station here, though I do not credit the story.

IMPORTANT FROM SOUTH AMERICA.

Attack on Callao—Defeat of the Revolutionists—Assassination of the Secretary of the United States Consul—Movements of Vivanco—News from Chili and Bolivia, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PANAMA, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.

By the British Mail steamship Lima we have Valparaiso dates to April 16, Callao and Lima to the 26th, Paita 29th, and Guayaquil to the 30th.

PERU.

VIVANCO has gone overboard. He has met the enemy and he is theirs. Fate, which seemed to be in his favor for a short time, totally abandoned him at the critical period. The gods, or the gold condors of CASTILLA had the effect to bring Peruvian officers and Peruvian soldiers up to what nothing had ever brought them before: a good, square fight.

My last, you will recollect, left Castilla en route over the sandy desert from Lambeyegue to Paita, with 1,500 men, in pursuit of VIVANCO, who had reached the latter port ahead of him, and embarked on the Apurimac and Huaras with all his force in the North, consisting of some six or eight hundred men, to go to attack Callao and Lima, before CASTILLA could reach them. On the morning of the 21st, VIVANCO cast anchor in the Bay of Callao, and immediately began to make preparations for landing. The population of the city were much excited, of course, and many families left the city. The National Guard were called to arms, and several companies held themselves in readiness in their barracks. At 11 o'clock at night, VIVANCO's men commenced to take to their boats, and the disembarkation was carried on until 3 o'clock in the morning without discovery.

At 5 o'clock 543 men had reached the shore, near the mouth of the river Rimac, and took up their line of march for the suburb of the Pescadores. Here they encountered 100 men, whom they put to flight after a few shots. These shots served to notify the people of what was going on, and also CASTILLA's steamer Ucajali in the bay, which sent immediately 100 men to the Muelle to protect the batteries planted here.

In the Pescadores VIVANCO's force divided, one portion taking the route through the Calles de Lima and Figura for the Plaza, and the other portion marching straight from the Pescadores for the same point. In the Calle del Socieyo the divisions met, and marched to the Plaza of the Church. At this point it was decided that one division should march by the Calle de Lima to attack the Castle, while the other should attack the Arsenal and the batteries of the Muelle. The latter division had reached the "Hotel de la Marina," when the men from the Ucajali having reached that point, they were received by a heavy fire from both the marines and National Guard, which forced them to fall back. This they did, contesting every inch of ground. They finally occupied the Hotel de Aranchia and the Hotel del Union, from which they kept up a smart fire on the Government party as it advanced. The other division was encountered by three companies of the National Guard and some troops from the Castle, at the head of which was Gen. PLAZA, Commander of the Castle and Governor of Callao. Gen. PLAZA was killed at the first fire: when his force divided—one portion occupying the Calle del Muelle, another the Calle de Bordeos, and another the little street that runs into the Calle de Vivero. Here the fighting was brisk.

In the meantime the marines of the Ucajali and another portion of the National Guard kept up the attack on the two hotels, until a white flag was displayed, when both divisions of VIVANCO's force surrendered. The revolutionists lost General LOPERA and his son, and Colonel ROBINSON killed. The whole of the 543 men landed are thus accounted for: Killed, 70; badly wounded, 48; prisoners, 399; went over to the Government during the action, 25; one man only escaped by swimming off to a ship in the bay. The Government lost 40 killed and 96 badly wounded. The fighting lasted from 5 to 8 o'clock in the morning. Almost every street was filled with dead and wounded. The surgeons from the foreign war ships came on shore and rendered all the assistance in their power. The city was not injured, with the exception of the two hotels, and but few robberies were committed. It is said, but little mercy was shown on either side. The number of troops on the Government side is not mentioned, but it probably amounted to 1,000. VIVANCO expected little or no resistance—but thought to march straight to Lima, where the Government had not more than 500 men. Generals VIVANCO and CAZAVERDE did not disembark. During the fight, the Apurimac and Huaras had steam up, and kept moving about the bay; but afterwards moved a little further out.

On the 23d, two of the principal citizens of Callao, learning that VIVANCO would bombard the city, by permission of General CANSECO, went on board the Apurimac to have a talk with the revolutionary chief. They were politely received in consonance of some 20 officers. VIVANCO commenced by inquiring into the particulars of the morning's fight. After satisfying his curiosity, Senor MERIATEQUI began to speak of the irritation of the people, but without allowing him to conclude his sentence, VIVANCO broke out in anathemas against Callao. "What have I done, that they should abominate me in this manner?" he inquired.

"General," replied Senor BUSTAMENTE, "the people are not what you believe them to be. You must know that the officers are the only ones who fight against them, while the people fight without officers. Your men are either prisoners, or the streets are running with their blood. The people resist you because you do not leave us this."

"What do you mean?" said the General.

"The Apurimac," replied BUSTAMENTE, stamping upon the deck. He then referred to the object of his visit, and of the letter which he first thought of sending, but now brought with him. The contents of this letter was principally occupied in questions to the letter was principally occupied in questions to the General as to why he came from Chili, at the instance of two hair-brained men, instead of waiting for the free election of the people—telling him that he had come without offering anything to the people, except his own arbitrary will, and that he had better retire to Chili and wait the result of the approaching elections, in order to avoid the further effusion of blood.

They spoke of the evils caused to the country by his lessening the price of the guano to a very low sum, when the contracts had been established for ten or twenty years, losing millions to the treasury.

They told him he must not give credit to the stories of movements in his favor in Lima; that it was impossible he should be benefited by any such; that if his friends made any movement, the armed manzanos would fall upon them, and when they had destroyed them, would sack the property of the citizens of the capital; and that he alone would be responsible for all these evils and the blood which would flow. BUSTAMENTE thought that after the events of the morning, VIVANCO had better enbmit to the Convention.

The General replied that he would never do so, and much less after having suffered a defeat; that he had yet 5,000 men, the guano islands, and the fleet to sustain him; that the whole nation was for him; that he had only been opposed by the troops of CASTILLA, which were sustained by the illegal acts of the Convention; that he came from Chili because, under the pretext of morality, a Government had been established in Peru, influenced by the counsels of URETA and GALVEZ, to ruin, oppress and tyrannize over the country. Notwithstanding, if the Convention would dismiss General CASTILLA from the head of the Provisional Government, and offer to the people a reform of the Constitution, he would lay down his arms.

As to the guano, he spoke of the economy with which he applied the funds received from it, of the poverty of those by whom he was surrounded.

During the conversation Captain MONTERO of the frigate threatened to boobard and destroy the City. Senor BUSTAMENTE replied indignantly, when Gen. VIVANCO interposed, saying that this would not happen without his orders.

And thus ended the interview, which has given rise to a story that VIVANCO had made terms with the Convention.

On the 23d Callao remained quiet, although the Custom-House and all but the military offices were closed.

The 24th was the day appointed for the funeral ceremonies of General PLAZA and Captain MONTERO of the Ucajali. While the cortege was passing along the streets, an alarm was raised that VIVANCO was again landing troops. Thereupon the soldiers of the National Guard, in attendance were ordered to discharge their blank cartridges and load with ball. The heavy firing attracted Mr. EATON, the Secretary of the United States Consul, to the balcony in front of the office, where the United States flag was displayed at half mast. No sooner had Mr. E. stepped out than he was shot through the heart by one of the National Guard. He lived only two or three hours. His deposition was taken, in which he stated that the Guard took deliberate aim at him in firing. Two other shots were fired at the same time, the marks of the balls being visible upon the house of the Consul. Mr. EATON's wound was in the right breast, sloping upwards, which corresponds with his declaration that the shots were fired from the short narrow street in front of the Consulate. On the same day, the United States sloop of war John Adams came into port from the Chinchas, and Gen. CANSECO sent his compliments to Commander FAIRFAX. Com. F. replied to Gen. CANSECO that he should be happy to return his salute when the sad event of the morning had been explained in a satisfactory manner. Gen. C. immediately went on board the John Adams, and the result was, that after his explanations he was saluted. He said he had no idea that the National Guard, as a body, was responsible for the death of young EATON, but that it was a simple assassination on the part of one of its members, and that every effort would be made to detect and bring to condign punishment the author of the cowardly murder.

Mr. CLAY was informed by the Council of Ministers of the sad event, as soon as news of it had reached Lima. They expressed their keen regret at the occurrence, and declared the determination of the Government to bring the author to justice. The Comercio, in an editorial on the funeral of Gen. PLAZA, casually speaks of the occurrence, characterizing it as an accident. Neither that paper nor the letter from which I gather the foregoing facts, give the Christian name of young EATON, or the State to which he belonged. His funeral took place on the 25th. It was attended by the Intendente of Callao and his Secretary, by the officers of the war steamer Urajali, by some English officers, and by five of the officers of the John Adams. The body was deposited in the Pantheon at Belia Vista, on the road to Lima.

Gen. CASTILLA, on his arrival at Paita, the same day the British steamer touched in on the 21st of April, finding his bird had flown, left his 1,300 troops behind him, and took passage to Huacho, a couple of days' ride from Lima, where he debarked on the 24th. One of VIVANCO's steamers undertook to intercept his landing, but was prevented by Her British Majesty's corvette Satellite. He immediately took horse, with a few followers, for Lima. In a night ride he was thrown from his horse, and laid insensible for two hours, but finally reached Lima at 3 o'clock on the morning of the 25th. He was in high spirits—claims to hold the North with 4,000 men, and is confident he will soon terminate the revolution in the South.

The Izcuchaca, one of VIVANCO's fleet, arrived at the Chinchas on the 23d. Her commander reported that 1,500 were embarked, or were about to embark, on the Peyton, at Arequipa, to attack Callao. On the 25th VIVANCO left Callao with his steamers, for the South, declaring his intention to return with troops. Previous to leaving port, his Admiral, VALLE-RIESTRA, deserted him, going on board the British ship Naiad, and from thence took passage on the Lima. These Peruvian officers are mostly a set of dirty dogs, who desert one master the moment there is any indication that the feed is going out. He goes to the United States to-day.

Commodore MERVINE having ordered the John Adams to Panama, a petition came up from the American shipmasters by the Lima, representing the danger to American commerce on the coast of Peru, in having such vast interests as are there represented without naval protection. They state that there are now at the Chinchas 61 American ships, of from 600 to 1,700 tons each, loading with guano, some under VIVANCO and some under CASTILLA contracts; and that the American capital invested in these ships and their cargoes at this critical period is not less than FIVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS. Commander FAIRFAX had left Lieut. COLLINS with a boat's crew at the Chinchas. Admiral BROE, of the British fleet, had assured Commander FAIRFAX that as soon as the Alarm had arrived, which was daily expected, that that vessel and the Cockatrice would be permanently stationed at the Islands to prevent any outrages. Under the circumstances, the John Adams will remain for the present at Callao and the Chinchas.

BOLIVIA.

The yellow fever continued its devastations in La Paz. In the month of March it carried off 273 persons, which is an excess of 30 to 40 over the previous month.

The Government had advertised for contracts to be buried in within six months, to survey the Rivers Amazon and Pilcomago. Here is a chance for some of our enterprising Yankee explorers.

CHILI.

The religious festivals intervening, had caused a partial suspension of business. It was suffering much more, however, from a lack of coin. The editor of the Mercurio attributes this great scarcity "to the exportation of silver coin, favored by the actual system of coinage." He could just as easily have attributed it to the right cause, which in all probability is this: This year and the preceding one, on account of the scarcity of agricultural articles for export, and particularly in flour, and their consequent high price, cash has gone forward to pay for the increased imports of the country.

Government, it is thought, will contract a loan of $4,000,000 in London, with which to complete the Valparaiso and Santiago Railroad.

The trials for conspiracy against the Government have not been concluded. One or two new arrests have been made. The public do not believe in the guilt of the accused.

The Municipality of Santiago have obtained permission of the Government to contract a loan of $10,000 to complete the new theatre. It is to be leased this month. It is recommended that a good Opera Company might do well in Valparaiso and Santiago.

Flour brings for shipment, $9 50 to $9 75 for 200 lbs. The Chilians expect to supply the Peruvian market at this or even higher prices, freight added. In American dry goods, narrow grey shirtings were sold 6¾c. to 6¾c.; wide, 9c. to 9½c.; twilled, 10½c. to 10¾c.; flannels, 11¾c. to 12¾c.; white cottons, 10¾c. to 11¾c.; blue cottons, 9¾c. to 11¾c. Sharps are duller. There were on the way two cargoes from the United States, three from Brazil, and two from Holland. Refined Dutch sold for $3 50 a robs; do. English, $3 87; American on private terms. Salt Beef $16; salt Pork, $24—market supplied. In Freights, ship Cypress, Guano, from Valparaiso to Cork for orders, £3 12s. 6d; ship Florence Nightingale, Ores from Caldera to United States, $22; Ores from Caldera to Liverpool, £3 15s.

BRAZIL.

By way of England we have dates from Rio to the 14th of April.

A letter from Rio, of the 14th ult., says: "As to politics, the news of greatest importance is that the present Cabinet will be substituted as soon as the Chambers open, which will take place on the 3d of May next. The Government has just contracted for the importation of 50,000 emigrants, with an association lately organized for that purpose, and to the creation of which Dr. BERNARDO ARMENUJA greatly contributed. The principal director is the Marquis DE MONTRALEGRE."

Exchange at Rio closed at 27½@27¾. The American advices had given an impulse to the Coffee market, and higher prices were demanded, but buyers withdrew in consequence. Sugar improved in value.

No Hides in stock at Pernambuco. Cotton in active demand. Purchases of Sugar limited throughout the month; about 45,000 bags on hand for sale. Sales of Hides at 345 reis. Exchange closed firm at 27½@27¾. Although not quite free from yellow fever, Pernambuco is healthy.

BUENOS AYRES.

A correspondent from Buenos Ayres, writing on the 4th of April, says:

Contrary to all expectation we got through the grand electoral contest on Sunday last with little blood and no loss of life. The Government party carried the day by a large majority, as every official influence was brought to bear on the point, and a large number of the Opposition were not permitted to record their votes. The nomination of the future Governor still remains; and if the views of the extreme party are carried out, by the appointment of MITRE or ALSINA, we regard another revolution as by no means improbable. With the present party there is no hope whatever of any settlement of the national question; and, setting aside the ruinous differential duties, it will be well if we can steer clear of a war with the interior provinces.

The Indians to the Northwest have made another successful incursion, carrying off 300 or 400 captives, and from 40,000 to 60,000 head of cattle. It has been asserted that they are in connivance with President URQUIZA. We cannot say.

The report of a revolution in Santa Fé gains ground. To all appearances we are fast approaching new and serious troubles.

LOPEZ has been reelected President of the Republic of Paraguay, and accepted, but only for the modified term of three years.

The market at Buenos Ayres for articles of daily consumption had undergone no essential change during the month. Arrivals had been moderate, but quite equal to the demand, fully stocked as the market in general was. Holders were firm, and prices tolerable steady, with rather a downward tendency. A fair quantity of exports had been despatched during the month.

News from the British West Indies.

ANTI-SLAVE-TRADE DEMONSTRATIONS — CHINESE IMMIGRATION—MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

We have received files of Kingston, Jamaica papers to the 22d of May. No news of special interest.

The presence of the small-pox on board the Troop ship Wm. Hammond, which vessel has been ordered into quarantine by the Health Officer, has caused some alarm to be felt in Kingston.

The weather at Barbados had turned favorable for crop operations, which were proceeding at small's pace. During the first half of the previous fortnight calms prevailed, and the heat was trying, but latterly the wind had sprung up, and sugar making had become brisker.

From Trinidad the planters are said to be working easily. The heat was oppressive, and on the 19th ult., a smart shock of earthquake was felt. Produce was daily arriving at the wharves for shipment.

The Governor had been spending a few days in the district through which the proposed tramway was to run for the purpose of examining the state of the country. The yearly report of the Agent-General of Immigrants was considered satisfactory. The aggregate number was 6,683 to the 31st December last, since increased by the arrivals in the Adelaide, Eec line and Sir George Seymour of 893 adults and 101 children. Of this number here, at the beginning of the year, 3,484 coolies were under the first indenture for five years, 334 having completed their first five years, had accepted the $50 bounty and indented for another like period; 596 had taken the $10 bounty, and entered upon a year's indenture; 720 had taken out certificates of industrial residence; 457 were Chinese, and 292 children. The deaths of coolies during the year were 110, and the births 46. In 1856 the number who returned to India was 288, and the total of arrivals was 566 adults and 61 non adults. The Agent-General closes his report with the note, that upwards of 100 of the Chinese under indenture have applied to purchase the redemption of their remaining year of industrial residence—and that there is every reason to believe that any future importation of these people more than two-thirds of the number would pay up their indentures at the expiration of the third year. So much for the success of John Chinaman in this field of labor.

Prison discipline was the order of the day in Antigua. The present system being considered faulty, the anxiety is to improve it. The education of the people was another prolific text. The Legislature was still in session.

In St. Lucia the want of medical men still continues to be as great a cause of lament, as the bad state of the roads is of complaint. The press deplores a grave misunderstanding between the authorities in England and those in the East Indies relative to the transport of emigrants; and before any addition to the laboring population can be expected many alterations have to be made in the terms of the ordinance applying to their introduction.

The intelligence from the other Islands is of no interest.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship Arabia, from Liverpool on the 16th instant arrived at this port yesterday afternoon. She announces the arrival of the Vanderbilt at Cowes on the 15th, and of the United States frigate Niagara at Deal on the 13th inst. The news from Europe, which is one week later, is not important. Nothing of transatlantic interest had occurred in the British Parliament, if we except a few remarks made by Lord PALMERSTON on the existing difficulty between the United States and New-Granada. The Premier supported the course pursued by our Government, and justified its resort to extreme measures if indemnity was not given for past outrages and security for future travel across the Isthmus. An article in the London Post, which we have transferred to our columns, takes the same view of the subject. From Spain we learn that the troops destined to operate against Mexico had not left Cadiz. The Mexican Ambassador had arrived at Madrid. France and England were making every effort to prevent an outbreak of hostilities between Spain and Mexico, and there are strong expectations that the question will, after all, have a peaceful issue. The Spanish Government has announced its intention to dispatch two ships of war to the China Seas, with an agent specially charged to conclude a treaty of commerce with the Celestial Empire. Russia is also fitting out two ships of war at Cronstadt to carry out a Russian Envoy Extraordinary, charged with a special mission to the Emperor of China. A telegraphic dispatch from Trieste gives later news from China. Matters in Canton remain in statu quo.

The United States Mail Steamship Illinois, from Aspinwall on the 19th inst., arrived also at this port yesterday. She brings later news from California, Oregon, the Sandwich Islands, Nicaragua, New-Granada and the West Indies.

From Nicaragua we have full particulars of the brief announcement made in yesterday's issue that Gen. WALKER had abandoned Nicaragua and had surrendered to Capt. DAVIS, of the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's. The capitulation took place on the 18th of May, with the consent of the Costa Rican Commander, Gen. MORA, and on the next day, WALKER, with 16 of his officers, embarked for Panama. The nagotiations for the surrender of WALKER were opened by Commander DAVIS, who entered the camp of the Allies for that purpose. Our Panama correspondent, whose letter is published elsewhere, gives the official correspondence in relation to the matter. It will be found of the greatest interest. Gen. HENNINGSEN was among the passengers by the Illinois to this port. From California we have no news of importance to report. The State Legislature adjourned sine die on the 30th of April. Among the bills passed by the session just closed were those submitting to the people the question of voting for or against a Convention to revise the Constitution and the Revenue act. The Governor had signed the bill submitting directly to the people, at the next general election, the question of repudiation or settlement of the State indebtedness declared by the Supreme Court to have been unconstitutionally created. Mining intelligence is favorable, but agricultural prospects, owing to the drouth, are not so encouraging.

From Oregon we learn that there are indications of another Indian outbreak. Considerable anxiety was felt at the mouth of the Umpqua about the Indians upon the Coast Reserve who were reported to be restless and threatening hostilities.

We have a report from Great Salt Lake that the schism in the Mormon Church has assumed a formidable character. BRIGHAM YOUNG is said to have deserted the Tabernacle and remains shut up in his own house, guarded night and day by his friends. He is afraid to show himself in public.

Our advices from the Sandwich Islands are to the 4th of April, but they are unimportant. The month of March had been very stormy, and the loss of the bark J. C. Fremont is reported. A very severe earthquake shock was felt on the Island of Hawaii on the 24th of March.

A correspondent of the San Francisco Herald, writing from Fort Yuma, Cal., gives some particulars concerning the Crabb expeditionists, but our intelligence, received viâ Mexico City, is of a later date.

The difficulty between the United States and New-Granada, according to the news by this mail, has undergone no change. There is not the least indication of the course which President OSPINA intends to pursue. The Mackintosh Claim is settled, it is rumored, by the transfer of certain rights over the Island of Taboga, in the Bay of Panama, to Great Britain. Our correspondent, however, doubts the truth of this report.

The intelligence from Peru is of special importance. VIVANCO, the leader of the revolutionists, had made his threatened demonstration against Callao. He seems to have labored under the impression that when he landed, the people would at once declare in his favor. On the contrary, however, they made a stubborn fight, and the revolutionists were utterly defeated. The whole number of men landed were either killed or taken prisoners. The revolution is considered at an end. On the 24th of April Mr. EATON, Secretary of the United States Consul at Callao, while leaning over the balcony in front of the office, was shot through the heart by one of the National Guard. He lived only two or three hours, and before expiring, deposed that the soldier took deliberate aim at him before firing.

We have received papers from Kingston, Jamaica, to the 22d of May, but we do not find in them any news worthy of special comment.

The steamship Prometheus arrived at this port yesterday, bringing advices from Havana to the 23d inst., and the Isabel arrived at Charleston, with news to the 25th. Quotations for Sugar were unchanged, but Molasses was higher. There is no political news.

The Report on Slavery presented in the New School Assembly at Cleveland, on Monday, states that 27 memorials on the subject of Slavery were handed to the Committee, of which number 11 came from Ohio and 3 from New-York. The report is signed by Rev. Drs. ALLEN, WALLACE, BURCHARD and CLELAND, and Messrs. GRISWOLD and HASTINGS. It declares that the Assembly can never consent to the idea that Slavery ought to be perpetual, and that the Apostles never thought that Slavery was on a level with the natural relations, but that they simply bore with it for the time. The report divides the question into two classes, and counsels moderation and charity, but in the main censures the practice of slaveholding. Its reading created a great excitement.

Officer BOWYER, who had given in his adhesion to the new Police Commissioners, believing the law under which they were appointed strictly constitutional, we regret to learn has since determined to resign his connection with the Department altogether. Officer BOWYER has been nearly a quarter of a century connected with the Police, and has been remarkable for his vigilance and efficient services.

Mayor WOOD has written a letter, rich in rugged abuse of the Republicans, in reply to an invitation to attend a meeting of "German citizens" opposed to the new Police law, to be held at a lager-bier saloon in the Bowery on Tuesday next.

The new Commissioners were asked yesterday by the Quarantine Commissioners, to detail a force of twenty-five men to protect the Quarantine property at Seguine's Point. It is understood that the force asked for will be sent to the Point to-day, in command of Capt. HART, late of the Seventeenth Police District. The old Commissioners have suspended operations for a time, but the Mayor continues busy in devising ways and means, and in consultations with his friends, to carry his points and maintain the "interests of the City."

The Councilmen failed to pass the ordinance creating a day and night watch last night, failing of a quorum.

PETER COOPER declines to be an Excise Commissioner.

The hotel proprietors couldn't get enough together last night to consider the proposed increase of price for hotel board. Probably the project will fall through.

The Board of Councilmen were employed last evening in discussing a resolution to award the street-cleaning contracts—which was finally referred to a Committee—and the new ordinance for the regulation of the night and day police. The adoption of the ordinance was lost by 34 to 14, for want of a constitutional vote—it was reconsidered and laid on the table to Friday.

The City Inspector yesterday declared null and void the contracts for cleaning thirteen Wards of the City, the contractors having failed to come up to their stipulations. Upon the remaining Wards an extension of time is granted. Mr. MORTON promises to enter upon the work of street-cleaning to-day beginning with the First Ward.

The Veterans of 1812 met their friends at Rutger's Institute last night to discuss the means of providing for the indigent among them at least a decent burial.

CHARLES STEPHENS, the second mate of the ship Mary E. Baulch, was tried on a charge of murdering a boy named Ross, about a year ago, while on the high seas. One of the crew testified to seeing STEPHENS strike him on the head with a marlin-spike, and another to seeing STEPHENS take him up and throw him overboard. These witnesses were contradicted by the carpenter, who testified to seeing the boy alive after the time when they swore he was killed, and proved that the second mate was at supper till afterwards, and the Jury, giving no credence to the testimony of the seamen, rendered a verdict of "Not Guilty" without leaving their seats.

Dr. R. OGDEN DOREMUS last evening attracted an immense audience of fully three thousand persons to the Academy of Music. He lectured on "Light," for the benefit of St. Ann's Church for Deaf-Mutes. For three hours and a half the Doctor kept his audience spell-bound. The most brilliant experiments were produced, on a gigantic scale, commensurate with the size of the building. The final experiment of the evening was the production of photographic pictures by electric light, a thing never before attempted with any considerable success. Mr. BRADY officiated, with a large camera. The light produced was perfectly dazzling, and very sunlike. The experiment proved eminently successful.

The Costa Rican Transit Grant and the Fillibusters.

The utter defeat of General WALKER in Nicaragua, and the return home of this eminent fillibuster, gives a new and interesting aspect to that complicated business in which the various transit routes and grants across the Isthmus are involved. The contest for supremacy on the Nicaraguan route has now been transferred from Central America to this City, and the two contending forces are camped in the neighborhood of Bowling Green, on one side, and on the corner of Pine and William streets on the other. The Bowling Green Commodore has succeeded with his usual adroitness in managing his own affairs to create a breach between the parties representing the sale of the Transit for Costa Rica, Messrs. WEBSTER and ANDERSON. It is reported that the latter gentleman and SPENCER, both of them formerly the coadjutors of WEBSTER, are now on their way to Costa Rica as Agents of the Bowling Green Commodore, while Mr. WEBSTER himself, the representative of Costa Rica, remains in New-York, and is actually making terms with the fillibustering firm of MORGAN & Co., his former antagonists, and endeavoring to amalgamate all the opposing interests in favor of this grant.

Messrs. MORGAN, GARRISON & Co. still claim to be the legal proprietors of the Transit Route under the Rivas Grant, while WEBSTER holds the Costa Rican grant in his own name; and, as it is understood that our Government favors the claims of MORGAN, GARRISON & Co., unless the arrangement be consummated as proposed, the Nicaraguan Transit may be closed for some time to come to the traveling community. It may well be imagined that Mr. ANDERSON, the old Costa Rican, felt timid in placing the highway to Nicaragua under the control of the former supporters of General WALKER; but, on the other hand, by settling all differences and disputes, and securing the protection of our own Government and that of Great Britain for the new organization, the convenience of the public will be best served.

A new Company, we understand, is about to be formed, in which some of our leading merchants are taking an active interest; and the business of the transit route will no longer be in the hands of Messrs. MORGAN & Co., nor of any other private speculators. A meeting was held yesterday, we understand, at the office of Mr. DRAPER, at which the preliminaries for the formation of the new Company were arranged. Mr. WEBSTER having been an active opponent of WALKER in Nicaragua, is not likely to be influenced by any other than friendly motives towards Costa Rica. If the new arrangement for settling these Transit difficulties should be carried out, it will probably be recognized by both England and America.

OUR CLAIMS ON NEW-GRANADA.—Hon. ISAAC E. MORSE is at Washington to report the result of his mission to New-Granada. The task is an easy one, for he did nothing. That he would fail to accomplish anything was predicted quite freely, at the time of his appointment, by those acquainted with his rash impulsiveness and his habit of free conversation. He was not born for a diplomat; and among the wily statesmen of Spanish America, who realize the maxim that language is made to conceal ideas rather than express them—he never had a chance of success. Señor DE POMBO would baffle and repel him for the mere sport of the thing, to-day, even though he knew that, to-morrow, he must retrace his steps, and agree to the demands of the United States. The selection of Mr MORSE to treat with such a people was a capital error, and we are reaping the consequences. England, on the other hand, more fortunate in her diplomacy, upon the basis of a single claim of a British subject secures not only respectful attention to her demands, but the cession of a valuable island in liquidation of that claim.

By exertion of similar influences, MORSE's error may be retrieved. At all events, American honor is pledged to the trial, and we trust that it will be made. The responsibility of New-Granada for the outrages perpetrated on innocent women and children traversing her territory, under the protection of a solemn treaty cannot be evaded. Nor are her weakness and poverty to be admitted in bar of her duty to redress, especially when she takes advantage of her weakness to add insult to injury, and mock our complaints. Indemnity for the past, and security for the future, must be exacted sooner or later. If the demand for it shall be presented again through some competent diplomatic agent, we believe that the difficulty may be easily settled upon a basis satisfactory and profitable to both countries. Certainly, if it be true that the new Administration of New-Granada is desirous of re-opening negotiations, it would be wise to make the trial.

A Patriot Wanted.

There seems to be a remarkable dearth of intelligent patriots just now. The phenomenon is so unusual that we hasten to record it, in the hope that when the good people of the Union see how badly it looks on paper, some means of abating the evil may be suggested. Among the thousand citizens generally supposed to look upon acquisition of office as the chief end of man, not one can be found capable of representing the Executive branch of the Federal Government at Salt Lake, who is willing to accept the Governorship of Utah. This, at least, is the reason offered us from Washington, for the unfortunate failure of the Administration to promptly meet and try the treasonable issue tendered by BRIGHAM YOUNG and his deluded followers. Mr. BUCHANAN, we are assured, is in great distress about the sufferings of men, women and children, consequent upon the repudiation of all law in that distant region, and the substitution of the tyrannical edicts of priestly despots. He is indignant at the manifold outrages perpetrated there under the influence of sectarian fanaticism; and if he could only scare up a Governor to carry the law there, backed by a military force should resistance be made against its majesty, he would speedily right the wronged, protect the weak and relieve the oppressed. But a Governor can't be had. It really looks as though Mr. BUCHANAN, in his despair, may be compelled to call upon Col. BENTON and his regiment of dragoons, to run down and lasso a Governor upon the plains somewhere, and force the Executive mantle upon him.

Seriously, we suspect there is a good deal of humbug about the difficulty in finding a Governor. We gravely doubt the sincerity of this plea in extenuation of most dangerous procrastination. Major MCCULLOCH, for whom the President has been waiting so long in the hope of his acceptance, possesses qualifications eminently fitting him for the post; but it is an insult to the intelligence of the country to suppose there are not a hundred other men equally capable, and more likely to accept the position. An average amount of practical common sense, with a little knowledge of human nature, and a dash of humanity and bravery—always found in company—are the requisite qualifications, and it will not be pretended that these are scarce in the President's circle of friends.

If Mr. BUCHANAN is prepared to act in the premises now, if there are no ulterior purposes to be served by further delay, there certainly can be no actual difficulty in finding a suitable Governor. We could name a dozen men within the immediate circle of the President's acquaintance of admitted competence for the place;—and there are half the number at least within pistol-shot of his mansion. Let us hope that the selection and appointment of some one will soon give us practical evidence that the Colonel Steptoe farce is not to be re-enacted. The social ulcer of Utah has assumed so malignant a form that longer forbearance of the knife is not to be tolerated. As an organ of that public sentiment which calls so loud for the application of a corrective, we should be false to duty did we fail to rebuke the procrastination which marks Administrative action in these premises. President PIERCE renewed his promise to check the Mormon theocracy day by day during his entire term, yet never took an honest step towards its redemption; and, in view of that experience and its heart-sickening results, the people will be pardoned for apprehending its emulation by the new Administration, until they are afforded some evidence to the contrary in the shape of a demonstration against the gigantic evil which "masterly inactivity" has reared in the Western plains.

A Standing Topic.

We are not sure but that it is a good thing for the public to have a permanent subject of complaint, when it is not of a too serious nature; it serves as a safety-valve for the escape of a good deal of ill-humor which might cause trouble if it were permitted to remain unventilated, or lead to disturbances by being sent in a wrong direction. In Great Britain the unfailing subject about which John Bull incessantly grumbles, is the taxes. Pay he must, but grumble he will; and while he is grumbling about that sore subject, he is quiet on others. In this City we do not heed the taxes, heavy as they are, because they are levied in a way not to make them inconveniently felt by the multitude, who, if they feel evil, do not clearly comprehend its nature. But we have our permanent sore spot, which causes us constantly to wince. The condition of the streets is the stereotyped growl of New-Yorkers. They are always in a state to be found fault with. In dry weather they are dusty, and in wet weather they are muddy. They never are, but always to be cleaned. We are in the constant receipt of letters on this subject, some of them urging us to blow up the City Officials who neglect their duty, and others suggesting measures of reform. There is nothing more remarkable than the fact that every man in the City (and every woman too, for that matter) feels the evil of our dirty streets, and knows exactly how to remedy it, excepting the individual elected to attend to them. It is no less remarkable that on the day of Election the condition of the streets is never thought on, and nobody hints that anything is the matter with them. A gentleman sends us an earnest letter innocently requesting us to "permit him through the columns of our widely read and valuable journal," &c., to call the attention of the public to the condition of the streets, &c. As though there were any necessity of the attention of the public being directed to so palpable a fact, or as though we had not been in the habit of doing it. We might as well call the attention of the public to the fact that the sun rises in the East. The public have had it in their power to order affairs differently once a year at least for the past twenty years, but they have chosen to let things go on in the old way, and they will probably continue to do so, just as John Bull continues to grumble at his taxes while he continues to pay them.

AN ACCOMMODATING ATTORNEY.—The telegraph from Washington apprises us of a curious fact. The United States Attorney for the District of Columbia has informed the Circuit Court that the Government does not desire to detain Mr. JENKINS in custody on the charge of piracy preferred against him by Dr. VAN CAMP, "as the warrant for his arrest was obtained from a Justice of the Peace, without consultation or advice from any officer of the Government or United States Courts!" This strikes us as rather a singular announcement. We take it for granted that if the Justice of the Peace had any right to issue a warrant at all, the power is derived from the same law precisely which gives efficiency to a warrant issued by an officer of the Courts. The idea that the advice of an officer of the Government or of the Courts, is necessary to give vitality to the charge, is an absurdity;—and the "desire" of the Government in the premises is of no more importance than the "desire" of Dr. VAN CAMP, or any other citizen. The simple question to be decided, is as to whether reasonable evidence is presented, showing probable infraction of the law against Piracy. If it is, then it becomes the duty of the United States Attorney to prosecute, whether he "desires" to do so or not; and if no probable ground of complaint against JENKINS exists, it is his right to be discharged from custody for a better reason than that offered by the District-Attorney. The statement, as telegraphed, is unfair towards the accused if innocent, because it would seem to imply that he is permitted to escape through the leniency of the Government, rather than by the demands of justice. It was evident that Attorney KEY did not "desire" to prosecute PRESTON S. BROOKS for his assault upon Senator SUMNER,—nevertheless, he was constrained by the obligations of decency to go through the forms. Whence comes his new light?

TEXAN SENATORSHIP.—The redoubtable Gen. SAM HOUSTON is out as candidate for the Governorship of Texas, with what prospect of success we are unable at this distance to decide. That he will retire from the United States Senate in any event, seems quite certain. For two years past he has been contemplating a resignation, and at the close of the last session of Congress was most decided in the declaration that he would not return to Washington. Who will be his successor, is an interesting question just now to quite a number of aspirants, some of them the bitter enemies of the "hero of San Jacinto."

Strange to say some of the most popular politicians of Texas have hitherto been unable to secure Senatorial position. Gen. HOUSTON owes his elevation, not to superior personal popularity, but to the fact that the strife between the personal friends of other and rival candidates led to the abandonment of them all and a sort of negative concentration upon the General. The same state of things is likely to ensue upon the attempt to elect his successor. It is this fact, we are told, which prevents Major MCCULLOCH from going to Utah. Though not prominent as an aspiring politician, the Major is personally very popular, and his friends, in anticipation of the war of factions in the Senatorial contest, desire to keep him in training as a compromise candidate, confident of their ability to secure his election. The hundreds who saw him in California, a few years ago, clothed in long cow-hide boots, red flannel shirt, and brigandish-looking slouch-hat, with a brace of pistols in his belt, collecting taxes by force, will find it difficult to realize his elevation, should it be effected. Nevertheless the Major is a good fellow, and possessed of a larger share of common sense and honesty than have fallen to the lot of some of those with whom Senatorial relations would bring him in contact.

A FACT WELL PUT.—The Charleston Mercury thus closes an article upon the political prospects of Kansas:

"Mr. PIERCE courageously and faithfully endeavored to enforce the true policy of the Union and the policy of the Democratic Party, and was beaten down by the Democratic Party itself. If Kansas is not surrendered to the North before Mr. BUCHANAN'S four years of service shall transpire, he will be as powerless as Mr. PIERCE."

This is a distinct recognition of the fact, which we have often stated, that the principle of self-preservation will require that the Democratic Administration make Kansas a Free State. The belief that it was intended to carry Slavery there lost that Party the whole North except three States, and in those three it was saved from similar defeat only by the pledges of its supporters that Kansas should be free. If Kansas should now be brought into the Union as a Slave State, the Administration would lose every Northern State. It is the conviction of this fact which will make it free.

Recent Legislative Acts no Novelty.

The revolutionary discussions in certain quarters upon the City Hall and Central Park acts, and the assertion that it is an innovation in the Legislature to proscribe Commissioners for county purposes, are not only mischievous but founded upon gross error of fact. From a careful search through the Statute Books for twenty years past we have found that every county wherein a jail or a court-house were to be builded, or a park or highway laid out, or a bridge constructed, Commissioners to superintend the works were named by the Legislature!

As long ago as 1807 the Legislature appointed GOUVERNEUR MORRIS, SIMEON DE WITT and JOHN RUTHERFORD Commissioners to lay out in this City streets and public squares "of such width, extent and direction as to them shall seem most conducive to the public good." These Commissioners made an elaborate report, which ought to figure in the next "Valentine Manual" as a lesson to be read by future Mayors before they assert that such action as was taken by the Legislature touching Central Park is unprecedented and the power given of a despotic nature. In 1834, five Commissioners were appointed by the Governor under an act "to provide for supplying the City of New-York with pure and wholesome water,"—known now as the Croton Water act, although at its passage the Commissioners possessed power to locate the head of water as they pleased. In 1816, Fulton Market was laid out by Commissioners appointed by a State Court. In 1845, Commissioners were appointed by the Governor to grant ferry licenses between the City of New-York and Long Island. In 1849, the Ten Governors were first named in Legislative act. Many of the Legislatures in these years were Democratic. In those of which both editors of the Express have been members such kinds of acts for the various counties have been passed, and for which they each voted.

Respecting other counties than New-York, instances might be multiplied to a great extent. Thus, whether the principle of State interference in matters of far less local concern than police be right or wrong, the precedent has been followed by Legislatures of all party grades. And it would be well for those who have suddenly awoke to the "enormities" of 1857 to study the State history.

CLERUS.

The Escape of the Fillibusters.

SIR: When a few men, banded together, with arms and wealth, labor to overthrow the Constitution of a Free State, and reduce a nation to abject Slavery, the mass of mankind look on wondering, and pleased with the magnitude of the attempt. Even the people of free cities and republics—regarding all as the spectacle of a drama in which the catastrophe, however terrible, calls more for their applause as the representation is more real—are not at first affected with those sentiments of horror and indignation which are proper, and should follow the events. They view the struggles of an oppressed and exasperated nation as the Roman people, sitting at ease in the amphitheatre, beheld the contests of bands of gladiators. The nations of Central America struggling in life and liberty against the ragged hordes of WALKER and GARRISON, have been a spectacle to amuse our leisure. We have but lately acquired the taste for blood, and the deaths by famine, pestilence and wounds of our miserable countrymen, who have descended only to fall heaps on heaps in this bloody arena, have not been altogether applauded. Our favorite gladiators disappointed us. They were too brutal, too stupid; ill-trained, ill-supported, their bottle-holders, the Garrisons and Morgans did not show themselves the good judges and sporting men we had supposed them to be. All at once the thought strikes that what we have been so long beholding at our ease is not a game, but a reality, and that the issues of the contest are principles of right and liberty, in which we, as citizens of the Republic, have individually an interest.

The escape of WILLIAM WALKER from Nicaragua with two hundred and sixty men, the remains of an armed immigration of more than five thousand in all, is an event which, if not properly understood and appreciated by the people and government of the United States, may be only one link in a continued chain of calamities. That a large proportion of the filibusters were comparatively innocent and suffering persons, is not for a moment to be doubted. Many of them, by far the greater number, were decoyed by false representations to take part in a hopeless and wholly unjustifiable enterprise. Not so the leaders and abettors of the undertaking, who for motives of mere avarice, or personal gratification, have destroyed a portion of Central America, sacked and burned its cities, desolated its fields, and converted a place of gardens into a howling wilderness. In the ordinary course of this gigantic piracy, crimes have been committed of every color and magnitude. Under cover of assisting the democratic against the aristocratic faction, in Nicaragua, a body of men were enlisted in California and sent down under the patronage and management, as it afterwards appeared, of an agent of the Accessory Transit Company. Soon after, a favorable crisis occurring, two coups d'etat were effected by the leaders of the Nicaragua invasion, namely, the seizure of the American property in Nicaragua, belonging to the Accessory Transit Company, and the seizure of the supreme power in Nicaragua. It would be an idle and unnecessary waste of time and labor to disclose under what pretexts, and under cover of what forms and proclamations of irresponsible power, the rights of American citizens were formally violated through the advice and instigation of their agents, and the liberties of an entire nation abrogated, their laws, magistrates and customs ignored, and themselves attempted to be enslaved by an absolute military despotism, springing fully armed out of a pretended alliance with the democracy.

The property of the Accessory Transit Company, seized by the Walker-Rivas Government, was immediately transferred to one of the Agents of that Company, who then entered upon the business of transporting an armed immigration. This sudden throwing off the mask by the business managers of the enterprise, was followed in due time by the seizure of the supreme power of Nicaragua by her mercenary ally, and the great crime of the age stood forth undisguised, in all its hideous proportions.

The people of Central America, now fully awake to the danger which impended over their liberties, completed without loss of time a military alliance powerful enough to have destroyed or expelled an enemy much stronger than the one with which they had to contend. The troops of Guatemala, marching five hundred miles over many ranges of mountains, united with the mountaineers of Costa Rica on the common battle-ground of Nicaragua. The inhabitants of Nicaragua, flying from their homes into the wilderness, issued forth armed from their secret hiding places, and hung in revengeful bands upon the skirts of the invaders.

The issue is before the world. It was foreseen by the judicious as a necessary conclusion; but the criminality of the acts which led to it, the full extent and enormity of that long series of tyrannies, military murders, usurpations, massacres, robberies, burnings, kidnappings and detention of American men and women, inoffensive and deceived the systematic frauds upon the public, by false information, coloring defeats as victories, and giving unparalleled stupidities and crimes the hue of successful generalship. The true account of these is still to be written, and the historian who will give them to the world as they are, without favor or prejudice, will render inestimable service to the present age and to posterity. Fillibusterism will then appear not only as a crime, but as the fruitful parent of all possible evils.

Let us not deceive ourselves, however, by supposing that the causes which gave rise to the invasion and partial destruction of Nicaragua are now less active and efficient. WILLIAM WALKER escaped from danger, leaving behind him the corpses of so many thousands of our countrymen—brings with him the seeds and pretexts of new enterprises; and among the myriads of simple and ignorant persons who can be deceived by glowing descriptions, or lying tales of military prowess, there will always be found those who will leave an evil condition here to find dishonored graves in a foreign and uncongenial soil. Even now secret preparations are being made for the invasion of Costa Rica by fresh bands of ignorant victims, dull tools of ambition and avarice. The mouth of hell is still open, and thousands stand ready to plunge into the abyss. If there is a central and regulative power in the United States—if there is a Government at Washington sagacious and firm enough to foresee and prevent the destruction which impends over entire masses of our countrymen and over Central America, and which is sure to come unless prevented by the strong arm of the National Executive—if the liberties and property of American citizens in foreign lands are ever to receive protection, hitherto withheld, from that Executive, the moment of action has arrived.

For what purpose are the preparations in the Brooklyn Navy Yard? Are the two ships which it is rumored will be soon in readiness for Central America to be stationed at San Juan del Norte, to prevent the invasion of that coast, or are they to be placed there to enforce the claims of the fillibuster chiefs? Will Mr. C. K. GARRISON continue his negotiations with the Costa Rican grantees for the grant which lies in the safe of Messrs GRINNELL, and thereby endeavor to patch up a peace,—for himself and Mr. MORGAN,—with Nicaragua and Costa Rica; or will he hold his faith with WM. WALKER, and the French gentleman who is helping him, and carry out a new invasion? Is the new steamer destined to convey a cargo of fillibusters, to be thrown upon the Costa Rican coasts? If so, will she take with her the Costa Rican grantees leaving behind them their new Charter, locked up in the safe of Mr. GRINNELL? The policy of the ex-Agent of the Accessory Transit Company is far too subtle for our comprehension. With all the subtlety and management of which he is so great a master, he is making preparations merely to pull down rain upon his own head. For him—the grand patron, and perhaps the parent of fillibusterism in Central America—there is no double course to be pursued. He must make his election. If he still respects the generalship and believes in the humanity and ability of WALKER, let him give WALKER his support. If he thinks that Mr. BUCHANAN will allow Mr. PIERRE SOULE's horde of twelve hundred fillibusters to leave New-Orleans or a port in Texas, and that their landing in Central America will not be prevented by American ships-of-war; if he deems that twelve hundred men can effect what five thousand have failed to accomplish, and that the fens of the Costa Rican Coast are less deadly than the mortiferous shores of Lake Nicaragua; that the ninety days average duration of a soldier's life in the latter region will be sufficiently lengthened in the former,—then let him abandon his present negotiations with the grantees of Nicaragua, and not strive to drag the Transit Charter from the safe of MOSES GRINNELL. Will he, who has spent or made others spend a million in destroying—will he, by complying with that charter, lend a million to Central America? Will he, who looked on quietly while men who were in his confidence wrested the Transit steamers from the accessory Transit Company, and when that was done received them for his own use;—will he pay money to Costa Rica by the terms of a grant, for the ill-gotten property which he and his, it is said, have spent a million in defrauding? Out upon such dealing!

The wily banker of Panama, notwithstanding the grey hairs that sprinkle his massive forehead, has still much to learn. Skilled in the calculations of a profit, infallible in the estimates of a voyage, piercing with intellect like a beam of sunlight the intricacies of a year's account, he is now handling tools too heavy for his hand. There are terms and conditions more imperative than that of the money market, which the would-be Colbert of a Central American despotism must study to understand. The four heroes whose dismal physiognomies, drawn by some bitter enemy of fillibusters, do not "illuminate" the pages of Harper's Weekly, are not the stuff to make conquests. Garrison-Colbert must find other generals more intelligent, more successful. Ignorant courage, sullen ferocity, apathetic disregard of the sufferings of others, artistic talent for coloring ignominious defeats as brilliant victories, the abilities of a recruiting sergeant, a drummer, and a prize-fighter, these are not the qualities which will secure for Colbert-Garrison the golden empire of the Transit, or raise a Walker to the throne of Central America.

Fair readers will be glad to know that at the Philadelphia Opera House, unlike the practice in ours the ladies as well as gentlemen are entitled to the privilege of a promenade between-acts. The custom and its consequences are pleasantly set forth by a lady correspondent of WILLIS' Musical World, as follows:

"The easy and negligent style of manners at the opera there, will do much towards sustaining it. If a lady takes the trouble to dress, she likes to have a chance of being seen, and of course has no objection to take a promenade between the acts, in the corridors and fine saloon, for that purpose—at least you would have thought so if you had seen the display of satins, silks, tissues and laces, not to mention bare shoulders and arms. The promenade room was a perfect ballroom scene, sans the dancing. The Philadelphians recognize equal rights, supposing that if it is agreeable to gentlemen to get up and walk about, it must be equally so to the ladies. I confess rather to like the Philadelphia style, and it did not appear to me that the gentlemen were losers by their gallantry. The beaming faces of the ladies as they chatted and flirted with their companions, were quite a contrast to the serious countenances seen in our Academy, between acts, when the gentlemen go out in throngs and stay till the curtain rises."

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

WASHINGTON, Teursday, May 28.

Mr. KEY, United States Attorney for this District, informed the Circuit Court this morning that the Government does not desire to detain Mr. JENKINS, Consul to Navigators' Islands, in custody on the charge of piracy preferred against him by Dr. VAN CAMP, as the warrant for his arrest was obtained from a Justice of the Peace without consultation or advice from any officer of the Government or United States Courts, and besides, the evidence filed in the State Department by Dr. VAN CAMP did not sustain the charge of perjury. Mr. MAURY, counsel for Mr. JENKINS, asked for his immediate discharge, but Mr. BRADLEY, counsel for Dr. VAN CAMP, insisted that the Court should detain the prisoner until argument could be heard on an application for release under habeas corpus. The case will be taken up again to-morrow.

Case of Consul Jenkins.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, May 27, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

You publish in this morning's paper, from your Washington correspondent, a detail of outrages alleged to have been committed upon the property of Mr. VAN CAMP, late United States Commercial Agent at Apia, Navigators' Islands.

Those acquainted with the true character of that unfortunate victim, now a modest claimant for reappointment, will derive considerable amusement from its perusal; and if this poor, innocent martyr to the unauthorized acts of his well meaning successor, can make Government believe that he has been unjustly deprived of $200,000, and thereupon induce Congress to recompense him for this loss, he will have to be more successful in imposing upon their credulity than he has upon any one who has ever visited the Navigators' Islands, with the single exception of the most benevolent of confidence men, old Commodor MERVINE.

It was exceedingly indiscreet in "J." to bring before the public his friend VAN CAMP's official conduct at Apia—for his case is one of those which is not at all aided by light and truth, and the Records of the State Department will show charges against him of the most serious nature, and supported by the most ample proof, leaving no question as to the propriety of the course adopted by the State Department, in his prompt removal.

That Mr. VAN CAMP should avail himself of the perhaps injudicious course adopted by his successor in his honest endeavors to repair the wrongs committed by his predecessor, and thereupon endeavor to change his position before the Department from that of a dismissed and unworthy servant into that of an unfortunate victim of official tyranny, will surprise no one acquainted with the numerous distinguished and varied professional abilities of Dr. AARON VAN CAMP.

If Mr. JENKINS will avail himself of the most ample testimony now at his disposition in the United States, he need give himself no anxiety lest his honest attempt to undo the illegal acts of his predecessor should be regarded by any sane man as an act of piracy.

And if Government also thinks fit to avail itself of the proper testimony, it can in a manner very summary, determine whether any one individual or firm at the Navigators' Islands was ever, by any possible means, legally in possession of property worth $200,000.

RED BEARD.

THE DOUBLE-HEADED POLICE.

Rugged Correspondence between Mayor Wood and the Governors—Ex Captain Hart to Command a Squad of M. P.s at Seguine's Point—The Councilmen Impotent—Matsell gets returns from all the Wards, Carpenter from six—The Target Companies, &c., &c.

Ex-Mayor HALL, of Brooklyn, called yesterday at the office of the Metropolitan Commissioners, and requested that twenty five policemen might be sent to protect the State property at Seguine's Point. He said it would be actually necessary that such a force should be detailed and at once, as the feeling of the inhabitants about Seguine's Point was so strong in opposition to the establishment of a Quarantine in their neighborhood, that a further demonstration of violence would be made by them unless timely steps were taken to prevent it. The Commissioners considered the matter, and it is understood that they will to-day send to Staten Island the force asked for. Ex-Captain HART, of the Seventeenth Ward, probably to have command.

The trial of First Lieutenant WM. H. MARTIN was then had. Deputy CARPENTER, the complainant, testified in substance as already given in the TIMES. Decision was reserved until to-day, in accordance with the rules and regulations. Many private letters were then disposed of by the Commissioners, who adjourned without finally determining upon any new appointments.

Mayor WOOD seldom leaves his office now till towards night. His time is almost constantly occupied in devising ways and means to checkmate the new Commissioners and "Albany dictation," and he receives frequent visits from many of the party who sympathize with these efforts. The old Commissioners appear to have adjourned for the present. They have not yet tried Captains HOPKINS, DILKS, PORTER, or SPEIGHT, all of whom send returns to the new Commissioners, as well as to Mr. MATSELL, thus showing that it is not always impossible to serve two masters. Returns from every Ward were sent to Mr MATSELL's office yesterday, while from six they were sent to the office in White-street.

Officer BOWYER, who on Wednesday placed himself under orders of the new Commissioners, tendered his resignation as a member of the Department, yesterday. The following is his letter of resignation:

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF POLICE,
NEW-YORK, May 28, 1857.

FREDERICK A. TALLMADGE, General Superintendent—Sir: Your communication of the 27th instant, notifying me that, by order of the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police, I was directed to report myself duly at the office of the Deputy Superintendent of Police, forthwith, was not received until late in the afternoon of that day. Pursuant to the notification, I reported myself to you. Having been assigned to duty at the office of the Chief of Police since its organization, and having been a member of the Police Department for nearly a quarter of a century, during all which time I have obeyed, and, to the utmost of my capacity, aided in enforcing the laws of the State, believing that the oath of office required me to do so, and that the constitutionality of any law would be decided by the judiciery, if I remained in the Department, my action in this respect would not change. But, in conformity with a resolution formed some time since, I respectfully tender my resignation as one of the Police of this City.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBERT W. BOWYER.

Many of the Captains in favor of the old order of things, have taken advantage of his late general order to give Superintendent TALLMADGE a bit of their minds, as well as define their position. The old Sixth Ward stands steady in the old faith. Not a man has flinched, and all the force there seem united in their intention "to do their old duty." In conformity with their resolution, the names of the Captains who have refused to make their reports to Deputy CARPENTER will be submitted to the Commissioners to-day.

Several Democratic German fellow-citizens, indignant at the "State usurpation and Albany dictation," will hold a meeting at the Volks Garden, in the Bowery, next Tuesday evening, to give it expression. The Committee of Management for this occasion have invited Mayor WOOD to be present. We annex the letter of invitation and the Mayor's reply:

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, May 27, 1857.

SIR: You are invited to address a mass meeting of the German Citizens of New-York, to be held at the Volks Garden, No. 51 Bowery, on Tuesday, the 2d day of June, for the purpose of expressing their opinion in reference to the act of the Albany Legislature, wherein the rights of the people of this City have been assailed and the Constitution violated.

Respectfully your obedient servants,

WM. SCHURMER, M. D.,
J. A. PAPPEN,
DR. CHARLES WANZ,
BERNARD MYER,
GEORGE DESSOYE,
} Committee.

To Hon. FERNANDO WOOD.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: I am thankful for the invitation to address a mass meeting of my German fellow-citizens on Tuesday next, who thus propose to express their sentiments of the recent acts of the Legislature for this City. To peaceably assemble and demand a redress of grievances is a right which is guaranteed by the Constitution, and hence is inherent in our system of government. Upon this occasion it is not only a right but a duty for the people of New-York, irrespective of birth, class or party, to resist and denounce the gross usurpations which have been perpetrated by their tyrant masters at the State Capital. At no time have our interests been so shamefully and flagrantly violated as now. The immediate causes of the American Revolution were not near so great an infringement upon the liberties of the Colonies, as these measures which you meet to denounce are of the liberties of this metropolis. Had the same principles been incorporated into ministerial orders or decrees for the cities of Boston, New York or Philadelphia, at any time within fifty years anterior to that war, American freedom and independence would have had a much earlier birth. Our Republican masters at Albany have issued mandates which their royal predecessors at St. James would not have dared to conceive; and as if this great and powerful City had, after a siege, been captured, it appears to have been given over for pillage and plunder to these Black Republican soldiers of fortune.

History furnishes a few similar cases, though none precisely parallel, where three-quarters of a million of brave, prosperous and happy people were subjugated by paper edicts, issued as laws by an unscrupulous cabal, whom chance gave control of a legislative majority.

It is to express honest indignation at wrongs like those that you are called upon to assemble, and I doubt not that the united voice of so large and influential a class of citizens will and must be heard. I regret, however, that it will be impossible for me to accept your kind invitation to be present and to address the meeting. Since my incumbency of this office, I have avoided attending public meetings of any kind, and have made it an inflexible rule not to participate in the proceedings of any which, in their character, have a political or party bearing. You will excuse me, therefore, from attending at this time, though sympathizing deeply with the object you have in view. Very respectfully,

FERNANDO WOOD.

To Messrs. SCHURMER, PAPPEN, MYER, WANTZ, and DESSOYE.

THE COUNCILMEN ON THE STATE OF THE CITY.

The Councilmen last evening, after discussing the state of the streets, went into Committee of the whole, and took up the ordinance for the establishment of a Day and Night Watch.

An amendment was made on the third Section, to the effect that the consent of the Common Council should be necessary to the alteration of the rules.

Councilman JONES spoke at length upon the late State legislation for the City.

Councilman HASWELL moved a reconsideration of an amendment which had been discussed regarding appointments to office. He moved that hereafter the Sergeants of Police be appointed by the Mayor. Carried.

The question then came under discussion as to salaries of police officers, equalizing them with the amount paid on January 1, 1857. Carried.

The question of the adoption of the ordinance was lost, for want of a constitutional majority. The vote was 34 to 14. It was reconsidered and laid on the table.

The Board then agreed to meet after the adjournment on Friday night—i. e., next day.

Councilman WARNER demanded the call of the house. Councilman MONSON moved that members who had left should be placed under arrest. The motion, after some discussion, was lost. Councilman HASWELL then moved that streets below Sixty-fifth street be declared open. The matter was referred to the Committee on Roads. After which, the Board adjourned to the next evening at 6 o'clock.

POSITION OF THE TARGET COMPANIES.—Alderman WILSON's Volunteer Army of Citizen Soldiers to sustain Mayor WOOD, and protect the chartered rights of the City, does not recruit its ranks as fast as it might—for after having existed a week not more than ninety seven of the thousands who paraded in April, have enlisted nodor the Alderman's banner. He is not considered exactly the right kind of a man by them, and it was because of his connection with the late parade as an officer, that a split in the ranks occurred in April.

Alderman WILSON's operations are looked upon by the Captains of the Target Companies generally, as merely for political effect, and the members of the staff resolved, at a late meeting, that however much they, as citizens, may be opposed to the laws of the late Legislature, as Captains of military companies composed of men of all parties, they could not countenance any such organization as Alderman WILSON is desirous of forming. A meeting of the officers of the late parade will be held on Monday evening next, and besides the Captains of the regular body that turned out in April, those of the independent corps that paraded at that time, will be on hand to express their sentiments in opposition to turning the Volunteer Corps into a political body.

ABOUT STREET-CLEANING.

The Contracts for Thirteen Wards Annulled

The City Inspector is getting his hands full. Day before yesterday he served a notice on contractors for cleaning thirteen wards of the City, to wit: First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Ninth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-second Wards—to the effect that if they did not put their wards in order before twenty-four hours expired, their contracts would be annulled.

The "twenty-four hours" ended yesterday, and as not a single contractor complied with the notice, Mr. MOATON yesterday afternoon declared their contracts annulled. None of the contractors have been paid a dollar for their past three weeks' work; all they have been paid for was the five weeks time—not work—that passed after the contracts were awarded, and before the official demise of Mr. ESLING.

To-day Mr. MOATON undertakes the cleaning of the streets of the wards named above. He begins with the First Ward. The Mayor has approved of the course taken, and Mr. FLAGG promises to pay his laborers, and carts are promised immediately in the remaining wards to cart away the accumulated ashes and garbage.

To Mr. REYNOLDS, who has the contracts for the Seventh, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-first Wards, an "extension of time" has been granted. Nothing has been paid to him either, during the last three weeks. Most of the men employed under the different contractors have filed their claims for arrearages with the Comptroller, to the amount of $11,000.

The Board of Councilmen on the Streets.

The Board of Councilmen met yesterday afternoon, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the chair.

STATE OF THE STREETS.

Whereas, the streets of this city are in a very dirty and filthy condition, in consequence of dirt, garbage, ashes, &c., thereby endangering the health and lives of our fellow citizens, and which will no doubt lead to pestilence and disease, during the coming warm weather; therefore,

Be it Resolved, That the contracts entered into by the Mayor, Comptroller and Commissioners of Streets and Lampe be and the same are hereby annulled.

And be it further resolved, That the City Inspector be and hereby is directed under his own supervision to have the streets cleaned forthwith.

question being put, Councilman WARNER commenced a violent philippic upon Councilman OTTARSON, alleging that he had misrepresented him in "his paper"—alluding to the Tribune. He opposed the reference of the resolution, and after the manifestation of strong personal feeling against that gentleman, was called by him to order. He asked that the words of Councilman WARNER might be taken down, wherein he had charged him with "uttering that which he knew to be false."

Councilmen WARNER repeated his charges.

Councilman OTTARSON replied, somewhat warmly, stating that Councilman WARNER "lied," [sensation] and again demanding the words to be taken down.

The President's hammer at length silenced both parties, and the altercation subsided.

The resolution was referred to the Special Committee on Cleaning Streets.

Prize Essay on Slavery.

The undersigned, appointed a Committee to award a premium of $100, offered by a benevolent individual, for the best essay on the subject of Slavery, "adapted to receive the approbation of Evangelical Christians generally," have had under examination more than 40 competing manuscripts, a large number of them written with much ability. They have decided to award the prize to the author of the essay entitled, "The Error and the Duty in regard to Slavery," whom they find on opening the accompanying envelop to be Rev. R. B. THURSTON, of Chicopee Falls, Mass.

They would also commend to the attention of the public two of the remaining tracts, selected by the individual who offered the prize, and for which he and others interested have given a prize of $100 each. One of these is entitled, "Friendly Letters to a Christian Slaveholder," by Rev. A. C. BALDWIN, of Durham, Conn.; the other, "Is American Slavery an Institution which Christianity Sanctions, and will Perpetuate?" by Rev. TIMOTHY WILLISTON, of Strongsville, Ohio.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.—IN BUYING such an article as a sewing machine the truest economy is to buy the best. They who purchase SINGER'S machines always get what they want, and use them with satisfaction and profit; while they who buy any of the cheaper and inferior machines in the market are sure to suffer disappointment, vexation and loss.
No. 323 Broadway. I. M. SINGER & CO.,

REMOVAL.—MARSH & CO.'S RADICAL CURE Truss Office, of No. 2½ Maiden-lane, have removed to No. 2 Vesey-st., Astor House. Trusses, Supporters, Shoulder-Braces, Silk Elastic Stockings and every variety of Bandages of most approved patterns, skillfully applied. Private application rooms for ladies. A competent female in attendance.

CRISTADORO'S HAIR DYE, WIGS AND TOUPEES, are unquestionably the admiration of the critical and the envy of the croakers and imitators. The Dye is the very best in present use, and his wigs the greatest counterfeits of the human head ever seen. For sale and the Dye applied at No. 6 Astor House.

PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY.
MORTGAGE BONDS CONVERTIBLE.
$3,500,000 FOR CONSTRUCTION. $6,500,000 FOR REDEMPTION OF FUNDED DEBT.

Date, January 1, 1857. Principal payable January 1, 1887.

Interest at seven per cent, payable July 1 and January 1.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN NEW-YORK.

To provide means for the immediate completion and full equipment of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad of 466 miles, as well as to make timely provision for the redemption of the Funded Debt of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies respectively, maturing at different periods between Sept 1, 1864, and July 1, 1 74, the PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY, into which those three Companies were legally merged by consolidation August 1, 1856, has authorized the issue of TEN THOUSAND BONDS, of which 3,500 of $1,000 each are known as Construction Bonds, and 6,500 of $1,000 each are known as Redemption Bonds, and are of the tenor above stated.

These Bonds are secured by a MORTGAGE IN TRUST to JOHN FERGUSON and THOMAS E. WALKER of New-York, covering the Company's Road of 466 miles, from Pittsburgh to Chicago, with all its Depot grounds, appurtenances and franchises, embracing the Railroad Bridge over the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh, and Depot grounds at great value in the Pittsburgh, Allegheny, Chicago, Fort Wayne and at other points.

The Mortgage provides for a Sinking Fund.

The Redemption Bonds will remain under the control of the Trustees, and be issued only from time to time, as they can be exchanged for, or are required to be sold to redeem the outstanding Bonds of the three Companies consolidated, and the privilege of such exchange to be extended to holders of those Bonds, and their attention is especially invited to the advantages that will result alike to the Consolidated Company and themselves by such exchange.

The Construction Bonds are offered for sale to provide means to finish the Road between Plymouth and Chicago, 33 miles, and to ballast it and equip and furnish it with a full stock of Rolling Machinery, Service Houses, Shops, Station-Houses, &c., the estimates for all of which are nearly $3,000,000.

The Capital Stock of the Company is fixed at...$16,000,000
The present cost of the Road is about.....13,000,000
The paid Capital is nearly.....6,000,000
The Funded debt secured on the Road is.....6,639,000

The earnings of the Road, mainly from local traffic, since the consolidation, from the 1st of August, 1856, to the 1st of May, 9 months, have been over $1,370,000. The net earnings for that time are at a rate of over 7 per cent on the entire cost of the Road. They are the earnings of an unfinished and but partially ballasted and equipped road

The earnings for 1857 are estimated at $3,000,000.

The Road is operated for 283 miles, from Pittsburg to Plymouth, Indiana, where its business passes to and from Chicago over another more circuitous route of different gauge.

The 33 miles between Plymouth and Chicago are in progress of construction, and far advanced toward completion. Four thousand tons of American iron are purchased, 40 miles of track can be laid this season, and the whole work completed to Chicago within twelve months; after which the earnings will increase, as is believed, with the development of the business of the road, to a permanent income of $4,000,000 per annum.

The guaranties of this result are believed to exist in these facts:

1. The road has immense resources for local traffic in passengers and freights. It connects by the shortest line Pittsburg and Chicago, and passes through 34 counties and 15 county towns, (including the terminal,) the valuation of whose property for taxable purposes in 1856 exceeded $150,000,000—the counties embracing some of those the best developed and most productive in Ohio and Indiana, and the towns being among the most important centres of trade between Pittsburg and Chicago.

2. The road has over 15 lateral railway connections, bringing it in communication with the whole Western Railroad system—these connections conferring marked advantages to the road as a route over various and large portions of the line from Chicago to Toledo, Cleveland and Buffalo, and from Pittsburg to Indianapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, &c. A reference to a map will more fully illustrate this point.

3. The Road is a single line, without branches, and the longest CONTINUOUS Railroad in the United States, and for its whole length of 468 miles, partly of a great central route, in connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad, of 318 miles from Philadelphia to Chicago, and of 906 miles from New-York to Chicago, via Philadelphia and on completion of the Allentown Road in Pennsylvania, of 785 miles only from New-York to Chicago, thus saving from 52 to 72 miles in distance viâ Philadelphia, and from 78 to 98 miles viâ Allentown, as compared with the great routes through New-York—making also the shortest route, of 798 miles viâ Harrisburg, between Baltimore and Chicago. In alignment and grades the entire line from Chicago to Philadelphia has marked advantages, no grades existing between Chicago and Philadelphia, going East, over 53 feet per mile. Between Pittsburg and Chicago no grades except exceeding 47 feet per mile, and for 335 miles there are no grades over 20 feet, and for 200 miles no more than that distance; the route is practically a straight line. The Road, therefore, must become one of the most important, if not the most important, PERMANENT avenues of American commerce, and its traffic will be limited only by its capacity.

4. The Road will be completed at a low cost, as compared with other leading through lines, and has corresponding advantages in grade, alignment, &c., for safe, speedy and economical operation, and easy and cheap maintenance.

A full Exhibit of the history, condition and prospects of this Road, with copies of the Bonds, Mortgages, Articles of Consolidation, &c., has been prepared and will be furnished for the information of parties desiring to invest in the Bonds.

The Company solicits a full investigation of the merits of this loan. It is offered as one in every respect worthy the attention of capitalists, and applications are now invited for the Construction Bonds, $450,000 of which have already been sold.

A subscription for $1,600,000 of the Construction Bonds, conditional on that amount being taken, with the option to subscribers of taking $2,900,000 at the same rate, is open at the office of the Company, No. 37 William-st., (3d floor,) where all needful information will be furnished.

FINANCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, NEW-YORK, April 3, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY have resolved to increase the Capital Stock of the Company, from One Hundred and Seventy Thousand Shares, to Two Hundred and Fifty-five Thousand Shares, which new shares will be allotted to the holders of the present stock, at the closing of the books on the 30th June next, and to such persons as may become stockholders by the conversion of Optional Rights, which expire on the 1st day of January, 1858, in the proportion of one share of new stock, to two shares of the old stock.

The Transfer Books will be closed on the 20th day of June next, and reopen on the 1st day of July next.

The holders of the present stock are required to receive one-third the number of shares to which they may be entitled on the 1st day of July, 1857, and to pay an instalment of $30 per share thereon. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds will be issued—one-half convertible into the stock of the Company, on or before the 1st day of February, 1858, and the remainder on or before the 1st day of July, 1858; such instalments as may then have been called in, on the present Stock to be paid to the Company at the time of conversion.

Those persons who shall become stockholders by the conversion of the present Optional Rights into Stock, on or before the second day of January, 1858, and after the first day of July next, will be required to receive, and pay for one-third of the new stock to which they may be entitled, at the time of such conversion. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds of the new Stock to which they may be entitled, will be issued to them, of the same tenor as those issued to parties who shall appear as stockholders, at the closing of the books on the 30th June next.

Parties converting Optional Rights will be required to pay to the Company all accrued interest on the installments from the time that interest shall have been paid on the installments to the holders of the present shares.

All stock which is not applied for before the 10th day of July next, and the instalment paid thereon, will be forfeited to the Company, together with all rights which attach thereto.

The Directors have resolved to extend the time for the conversion of the existing Optional Rights, which, by their terms, expires on the 1st of January, 1858, so as to include the 2d day of January, 1858.

Information, pertaining to the details of this issue, can be obtained by inquiring at the office of the Company.

Interest will be paid, as usual, upon the Stock of the Company, on the 1st of July next.

By order of the Board of Directors,

J. N. PERKINS, Treasurer.

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF Directors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 6th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000 from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 15th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25 h of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to each as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent, per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenevers shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.

It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but cer ainly by the 10th.

It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association

GEORGE I. SENEY, Cashier.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INcreased to $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the Bank, in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be entered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the 30th inst. 30th day of July, both inclusive.

W. F. HOOKER, President.
B. F. WARNER, Cashier.

UNITED STATES COURT—THURSDAY, MAY 28.

Before Judge Ingersoll.

At the sitting of the Court, this morning, the four sailors, John Smith, John Nedz, John Brown and John De Costa, against whom the Jury yesterday brought in a verdict of manslaughter, for killing Capt. Lawson, of the brig General Pierce, were put on trial under a second indictment, charging them with the murder of Charles Groves, a colored man, cook of the said vessel. The first count charges John Smith with stabbing Groves, and the other prisoners with aiding and abetting; the next count charges them all with striking the blow, and throwing him into the sea. Four jurors were sworn, when the panel being exhausted, the case was adjourned to Friday, at 10 o'clock, by which time the Marshal was directed to have a new panel summoned.

TRIAL FOR MURDER AND ACQUITTAL.

Charles Stephens was put on trial for the murder of a boy named Ross, on board the ship Mary E. Baulch.

The following Jury were impannaled;

Wm. H. Bush, Robert Campbell, Patrick Lynch, H. G. Marquand, John F. Craddock, Denison B. Wood, James Thomas, Joseph N. Dick, James Campbell, James H. Bush, H. J. Bartholf, Edw. B. Buckley.

A seaman, named Alexander, was called as a witness, and said: I am a sailmaker; I was on board the ship Mary E. Baulch, on her voyage from New-Orleans to Liverpool; Stephens was second mate of her; a boy named Ross was one of the crew; I saw him when we were about five days ont from the Balize; saw him on the forecastle head about five o'clock P. M; I was coming from the galley with my tea in a tin-pot; the vessel was a very long vessel, of about two thousand tons; I don't know what her cargo was; I was about three fathom from Ross; it was a bright day and a light breeze; the vessel was going by the wind; we were ordered by the second mate to go to supper at half-past five; that order had been given; I was the only one on deck except the man at the wheel, named John Watts; Ross had a broom in his hand; he was a boy about eighteen years old—a thin boy—the second mate was near him, and I heard him say "You G—d d—d son of a b—h, I'll knock you down," and he then struck him on the head with an iron marlinspike and knocked him down, and then kicked him; I was standing with one foot in the house and one out; I saw it distinctly; he struck him but once; he fell at once; I heard Ross say nothing, but he squirmed, like, on the deck, and then the prisoner kicked him in the stomach; I then went in and took my tea; when I came out again I could not see Ross; never saw him after; the prisoner came to the fore castle door and asked for Ross; he was answered that he was not there; he said he was looking for him; we all turned out to look for him; the second mate went round on the starboard side and came back on the port side with a dark lantern; I heard him say nothing; it was his watch; he was singing out for the boy under the forecastle head; he called him by name, but I can't say what names he gave him; the search lasted about an hour; did not search for him except on deck; there was no place where he could go but there; it was dark when the prisoner came asking for the boy; the sun was up when I went into the forecastle piece, and it was twenty minutes or half an hour after when Stephens came to ask for Ross; we had the decks to clean up after we were ordered to go to supper; I had sore feet and stayed on deck repairing my feet after the rest had gone to supper; could not say how long it took; then I went to get my pot, and got my tea and went into the house; it was then just dusk; we were there twenty minutes or half an hour; Ross was in prisoner's watch; I went into the forecastle about 6 o'clock; we were ordered to go to supper at half past five; I was fixing my foot; I can't say how long it took; I stayed on deck a few minutes after I had done with my foot; I can't say how long; I can't say what makes me think it was about six; the sun was not up then; all hands went to tea at once; it was all hands on deck that day, to clear up the ship I believe.

Cross-examined by Mr. Spencer—I don't know of any difficulty between Stephens and Ross before; I did not tell the Captain when we were searching for Ross about the knocking down; I told the chief mate about it three days before we got to Liverpool; I did not swear before the Commissioners that I never told any one; it was more than a month before I told any one; I did not tell of it because I was afraid of my life; was afraid the second mate would kill me; I was not in his watch; Ross was not robbed before this; he never charged me with it; I did not talk about the knocking down with Watts; Watts was at the wheel; he was to be relieved at six; it was before six that I saw the boy knocked down; I did not see the carpenter and the second mate go in to supper; I made this complaint at Liverpool; I did not run away; I was kept by the American Consul; I have been ten months in the Tombs; Watts has been there too; I have met him every day, but have never exchanged a word with him about it.

Recommitted—I was afraid of my life after I saw the boy knocked; have no feeling against Stephens; he always treated me well; I told the first policeman I saw in Liverpool about it; he came next morning and took me before the consul; Watts and I did not board together at Liverpool; a slung shot was not taken from me.

John M. Watts sworn—I was on board the ship; Stephens was second mate; Ross was on board; he was a slight boy; I was in the mate's watch, and was at the wheel from four to six P. M.; I think she was twelve hundred tons about; I did not hear the order given to go to tea; the men went to tea about twenty minutes past five o'clock; the Captain and the mate were at tea below; I saw no one on deck until I went to the side to spit, then I saw Stephens and Ross forward; there was not much breeze and I could let go of the wheel; I saw them on the port side of the vessel; I could see right along the gangway; it was perfectly light; the ship was on the starboard tack; I saw the second mate lift the boy by the collar from the deck and put him on the rail, and then take him by the legs and throw him over the side; I looked over the stern; the wheel is five to seven feet from the stern, I saw the second mate looking over the quarter at him; I saw the boy in the water; he had a red flannel shirt on; no one else had such a one on that day; he said nothing to me nor I to him; he looked at me and looked very pale; I did not see the mate strike the boy; the sails were not low enough to cut off my view forward; I said nothing to the mate nor the Captain when he came up; I knew it would be no use, I could only get my head broke; a search was made for the boy afterwards; I went to my tea after I left the wheel; I heard no noise at the time forward; I did not say anything about it while the search was going on; I never had any difficulty with Stephens; when at the wheel I could not see the place where the boy lay; I went back to the wheel immediately after I spit; the ship was going about five or six knots; the search was after six, about half-past six; it was about dusk; it was being made when I came up; after I saw the prisoner throw the boy over he came aft; he ran part of the way as far as I could see; he got up on a spar and looked over before he came to me, and then he came to the quarter and looked over.

Cross-examined—I saw the boy thrown over about half an hour before I was relieved; I did not cry to the mate not to throw the man overboard; I did not cry "A man overboard;" I was afraid of the Captain and the mate; I did not tell any one about what I saw; I have been in prison ten months; no one in the prison ever heard me say anything about it; I said yesterday to the prisoner in the prison, when the prisoner's counsel was there: "You son of a b—h I would like to have you where I could lay my hand on you;" before this, in the prison one day after church, he said I was one that was swearing his life away, and I said, "You G—d d—d Dutch son of a b—h, I would if I could;" I spoke before I thought; I never had any other difficulty with Stephens.

The defence then called as a witness

Augustus Wilson—I was carpenter on board the ship; I saw the boy about five minutes before six that day, just as I was going to my supper; I asked him why he did not go to supper, and he said he had no pot; I told him he had better look for it; I then went in to supper; Stephens went in with me; I heard the bell ring for six when we were at supper, when Watts was relieved; we were there some ten minutes after, it was about the 14th of April, the day the boy was searched for; I did not know he was searched for till about half past seven, when a boy came to my room and asked if Ross was with me; Ross was a Swede and so am I.

Cross-examined—The men were ordered to supper about half past five; I was in my room picking up my tools; Stephens was walking on the poop then; I was in my room then about fifteen minutes, and when I came ont Stephens was still aft and the boy sitting on the deck; we were at supper about fifteen minutes; I did not see Alexander on deck then; I can't tell which came ont from tea first, Stephens or I.

The counsel for the prisoner said they did not desire to address the Jury, and the case was accordingly submitted to them under the charge of the Judge, and they rendered a verdict of "Not Guilty" without leaving their seats.

Amusements.

NEW-YORK MUSIC ASSOCIATION.—This young society gives its fourth and last soiree to-night, at Dodworth's Saloon. Miss SIMON, Mrs. CRENEY, Mr. HENRY APPY, Mr. W. A. KING, Mr. BERTI, Mr. ESEN, Mr. JOHNSON and Dr. GUILMETTE assist.

READINGS FROM MOORE.—Miss THERESE ESMONDE gives another of her pleasant readings with this poet to-night.

A Card.

The lady who lost a valuable parcel overboard from the Fulton Ferry boat, yesterday morning, desires to express her most cordial thanks to those gentlemen through whose generous assistance she recovered it safely. To one of them she would say, that he has made all English gentlemen chivalric in her eyes, however careless she may have made American ladies in his.

Police Intelligence.

FELONIOUS ASSAULT WITH AN AXE.—Michael Quilk, an Irish carman, residing at No. 92 James-street, was committed to prison Wednesday morning by Justice CONNOLLY, for an assault with an axe upon Mathew Farrell, also an occupant of No. 92 James street. Quilk, it appears, began an assault upon his wife, and was carrying matters to such an extreme that Farrell felt it his duty to interfere. Quilk ran into a back room, and seizing an axe returned and struck Farrell a heavy blow on the head with the blunt end of the weapon. Farrell fell insensible to the floor. He was soon afterwards removed to the New York Hospital, where he lies in a very critical condition.

FOUND IN THE STREET.—A man was found on the corner of Essex and Grand streets Tuesday evening. He had two severe wounds on the head, which might possibly have been caused by a fall but more likely by blows with some blunt instrument. Officer Donnelly took him to the Tenth Ward Station-House, where his injuries were dressed by Dr. Thomas D. Andrews. He was conveyed home next morning, being still partially insensible from the effects of the hurt.

FIRE IN DEY-STREET.—A fire broke out about 10 Wednesday night in the hat and cap store of PANE & FISHER, No. 26 Dey-street; about $1,100 damage was done. The fire originated on an upper floor. Some damage was done to the stock in the store of Messrs. MEADE & STOWELL, boot dealers, who occupied the lower floor. The building was damaged to the extent of about $300. The loss is covered by insurance.

THURSDAY, May 28—P. M.

The steamer Arabia, from Liverpool Saturday, May 16, at this port, last evening, brings a week's later Money and General market news from Europe. The Cotton market at Liverpool was a small fraction dearer after the arrival out of the Arabia with accounts from this side of the rapidly decreasing receipts. But speculation was not active. The weather had become less unfavorable for the English crops, and Grain and Flour in consequence were less firm. The London Discount market and the Funds, together with the state of the Bank of England, had all improved, while the price of money on Stock loans continued high. Consols during the week were as dear as 94⅛ ₰ cent., closing 94 for money and 94⅜ for the June account. In American Stocks, the business was not large. The prices are quoted higher by 3@4 ₰ cent. for Illinois Central shares, closing with sales at 132½, and 133 asked. The Bonds 90 ₰ cent. New-York Central 7 ₰ cent. Bonds, 93@95; Sixes, 79¼, sales ex conpon; shares 82@84; Erie 7 ₰ Cents. of 1883, '84, sales; Sinking Funds, 82@84; Southern Michigan Sinking Funds, 70@72; Michigan Central shares, 87@89; the Bonds of 1869, 90@92. These quotations from the Stock Exchange list of Friday P. M., May 15. The circular of BARING, of same date, remarks:

The transactions are very trifling. United States 6s, 106@106½; Massachusetts 5s Sterling, 99@100¼; Maryland 5s, Sterling, 89@91; Mississippi Union Bank Bonds, 20, buyers; Pennsylvania Certificates, 75, sellers; Bonds, 81@82; Virginia 6s, Bonds, 83@85; 5s, Sterling, 84@86; Canada 6s, 112@112½; 5s, 100@101¼; Grand Trunk Bonds, 91@92; Preferential do., 101¾@102; Grand Trunk Shares, £16@£16 10s.; Nova Scotia 6s, Bonds, 104½; New-Brunswick, 103; Quebec City, 100@100¾; Pennsylvania Central Railroad Bonds, 1st Mortgage, 89, buyers; 2d Mortgage, 92, sellers; New-York and Erie 7s, Bonds, 1883, 83@85; Illinois Central 7s, 89@91; Freeland, 107@109; Michigan Central 8s, 1869, 91@93.

The return from the Bank of England for the week ending the 9th of May, gives the following result, when compared with the previous week:

Public deposits	£5,163,146	Decrease. £737,014
Other deposits	10,081,864	Increase. 530,620
Rest	3,328,676	Increase. 49,807
Government securities	10,303,838	Decrease. 996,385
Other securities	18,630,857	Increase. 219,534
Notes unemployed	4,226,355	Increase. 672,990

The amount of notes in circulation is £19,341,590, being a decrease of £434,640, and the stock of bullion in both departments is £9,818,127, showing an increase of £249,300, when compared with the preceding return.

FRIDAY EVENING.—The funds this morning again opened with great steadiness, but a severe pressure for loans on stock and Exchequer bills, coupled with the arrival of unfavorable rates of exchange from China, caused a reaction of nearly ¼ ₰ cent., from which there was only a partial recovery. Consols for money were first quoted 94@¼, and after having touched 93¾ they left off at 93¾@94 for money, and 94⅛ for the 4th of June. In the early part of the day the rate for advances on Government securities was the same as yesterday, viz., 2 ₰ cent., but only small amounts were attracted to the market, and it then went to 3 ₰ cent., at which a large sum was lent for a few days upon Consols by one of the joint-stock banks. It is a remarkable circumstance that the sudden requirements which created such extraordinary signs of difficulty are understood not to have exceeded £150,000.

In the Discount Market and at the Bank of England there was increased activity.

In the Foreign Exchanges this afternoon the rates for Amsterdam, Paris and Vienna were quoted the same as last post. Hamburg and the other principal places were about the same.

The final quotations of the French Three per Cents on the Paris Bourse this evening were 69f. 85c. for Money, and 69f. 55c. for the end of the month, showing no alteration.

The Bank of France returns for the past month confirm the anticipation expressed in the Paris letters a few days back, that the stock of bullion would show no material alteration. Although the amount purchased at artificial prices during the period has been one-third less than that in the previous month, it has been nearly sufficient to meet such drain as still continues, the total now held being £9,833,000, or within £70,000 of the total last published.

The gradual but steady influx of gold which seems during the last week or two to have set in from most quarters, is beginning to lead to discussion as to the probability of an early return to the rate of 6 per cent. by the Bank of England. The delay in publishing the weekly Gazette statements deprives the public of the most important materia for forming an opinion on the point; but, judging from those issued up to the 2d inst., and supposing that the increase in the bullion since that date may have been about £300,000, so as to raise the total to £9,850,000 a further improvement to the extent of about half a million will still most probably be required before any alteration can be looked for. This, however, may now take place at any moment. The change of wind gives a prospect of the speedy arrival from Australia of about £700,000; each weekly packet from New York will bring a considerable sum; about 50,000 sovereigns are on their way from Constantinople; and to-day some bills on London of large amount, drawn from St. Petersburg against gold shipped, have made their appearance—the aggregate expected thence being at least £200,000 or £300,000. It was at about this date last year that a sudden and strong, although only temporary revival from a long period of depression took place. On the 17th of May, 1856, the Bullion stood at £9,800,000, and in the succeeding week it reached £10,550,000, the Bank meanwhile having reduced their rates, which, for the past half year had been at 6@7 ₰ cent., according to the term of the paper, to 6 ₰ cent. for all descriptions. By the 31st of May a further augmentation had occurred to £11,850,000, the rate having two days previously been lowered to 5 ₰ cent. Up to the end of June, the favorable movement continued without interruption, until the bullion had reached £13,070,000, and the rate of discount was put at 4½ ₰ cent. The tide then again turned, and from that period to the present, an interval of nearly 11 months, with very few exceptions, each weekly statement has shown a falling off. The signs of reaction, therefore, have not arrived before the time at which, from all past experience, it might fairly have been expected. It is to be hoped that it will not be as rapid and delusive as that of last year; but it is upon the discretion of the public with regard to foreign undertakings that this will in a great degree depend, although the progress of the silk crop and the prospects of the European grain harvest must, for the next three months, constitute the main considerations.

The California Mail steamer Illinois arrived at this port this afternoon, with the mails and treasure which left San Francisco on the 5th May. The manifest of Gold for New-York amounts to $1,658,072. The steamer on the Pacific side left San Francisco with $2,176,622, of which $521,358 was for English account, to go direct from the Isthmus of Panama. The mining news continues satisfactory. The market accounts are not quite so good as by the previous arrival, and of the growing crops much complaint is made. The market at San Francisco for Money is reported very stringent, owing, in part, to the closing up of a prominent Atlantic banking concern, and the withdrawal, also, of some means which had heretofore been employed on European account. The Legislature of California had adjourned, after perfecting the bill for the assumption and liquidation of the State debt, which measure needs to be confirmed by a vote of the people at the next general election in September. The San Francisco papers appear to entertain no doubt of the favorable result of this trial of popular good faith. The receipts of Gold Dust from the interior during the month of April by the express of WELLS, FARGO & Co. alone was $3,500,000. The deposits for coinage at the Branch Mint at San Francisco was 131,612 ounces, and the coinage $2,975,000, mostly in double eagles.

The improvement in the Stock Market noted yesterday was fully maintained to-day, and a further advance realized on both the leading New-York Railroads, and on Reading. The fluctuations from the closing of yesterday afternoon in these three descriptions were:

Log of the Passage Across the Atlantic.

ARRIVAL IN THE THAMES.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

ON BOARD U. S. SHIP NIAGARA, IN THE THAMES, Thursday, May 14, 1857.

We arrived at the entrance of the Thames yesterday about 2 P. M. and came to anchor, and this morning proceeded up the river to Gravesend, which we reached at 8 A. M., where we shall remain a few days until the landing place at Gravesend, where we are to take on board the Telegraphic Cable, is prepared for us. Our passage across the Atlantic was not made in so short a time as we had anticipated, the delay being partly occasioned by head winds and unfavorable weather, and partly by the defective nature of our spars and the bad quality of the iron portion of the standing rigging. The ship, however, has answered the utmost expectations, and, under more favorable circumstances, she would have given a more satisfactory account of herself. Perhaps the better way to give a correct idea of our passage will be to inclose you an authentic log of her run from the time we left Sandy Hook until we arrived in the Thames:

April 24, at 7¼ P. M., pilot and visitors all left the ship. We parted with three cheers, and another for luck. At 6¾ P. M., stood upon our course, under sail and steam—foresail, topsails and jib. At 9¾, took our departure 10 miles distant from the outer buoy at Gedney's Channel. Course 95th, E. b. S.; ¾ S.; revolutions, 41; speed, 11 knots average during the night, course East, wind N. W. and S. W.; distance run, 168 miles, at 38.3 revolutions; lat. 40° 12' W., lon. 70° 28' W.; smooth sea and light winds.

Owing to some wrong turn in a connection with our propeller when we first stood off and started the engine, we thought our cruise had come to a sudden end, or at least to an indefinite postponement. Fortunately no damage was done, and in fifteen minutes we were on our way, let off for the fright, and ever since we have been running on under sail and steam, with very light winds, as quietly as though we were in a mill-pond. Owing to the winds having been so light, we have had no chance to judge what she will do, but it is certain that she can steam up to 9 knots at the least.

25.—At 8 A. M. had run 193 miles, average speed 9 knots, 4 points, revolutions 39. At 12 M., 38½ revolutions, speed 8 knots, 4 points, wind very light and variable, from S. to N. W. Dist. 217, Lat. 40° 8' N, Long 65° 50' W. To-day being the Sabbath, all hands mustered upon the spar deck, and prayers (Episcopal) were read by Capt. HUDSON, and afterwards a sermon, which might have been very good for aught I know, as owing to the flapping of the sails and the working of the propeller, I only caught a word here and there. One thing I am sure of, however—it was too long; and a violent cold I caught over a damp deck for over one hour and a half, and the expenditure of muslin upon my nasal organ, don't make me like it any the more. Brevity has long been allowed to be the soul of wit; it is equally certain that it is as fully important to the effect of a good sermon.

27.—Nothing has occurred out of the regular "routine" during the last 24 hours; at 7, A. M., making 13 knots with 40 revolutions. 2 A. M. 13 knots, 4 points, 36 revolutions, average speed 10 knots, 4 points, wind from S. W. to N. E., variable; thermometer 50. Distance 2,564, lat. 40° 36'.

28.—40° 30'. From 9 P. M. 27th to 4 A. M. 28th under steam, speed 8 knots 9-10, wind variable from N. to S. S. E., lat. 41° 24', long. 50° 31'. Distance 219.6—at 12 M. revolutions 39.2, lowest for 24 hours 31 3. At 4 A. M. made sail fore and aft, at 6 topsails and jib; split the main topsail, owing to keeping fast bunt jigger. Began to feel the influence of the Banks, in hazy weather and occasional squalls. At 2 P. M. going 13 knots close-hauled, ship rolls a little but comparatively nothing worth speaking about.

29.—At 5¾ called all hands to reef topsails. Average speed during the night, 12 knots; 1 point, wind S. E. by S. half S.; ran 281 miles up to 11:20 A. M., 23 hours 20 minutes; in the 24 hours, 292 miles. At 4 P. M. sent up new mizen topgallant mast, crossed mizen topgallant and royal yards; average revolution 36; lat. 41° 45', lon. 49° 10' W.; would have made 300 but for the decrease of the day and low steam during one hour of the night. Thermometer, 58°.

30.—At 12 M. 40 revolutions; speed, 10.4; distance, 234.4; pleasant and smooth sea, and wind very light during the night under very low pressure of steam, from 5 to 15 pounds to the inch and from one to the two after boilers; not making more than 20 revolutions per minute. The machinery still working as smoothly as could be desired, and the ship working like a beauty, as she is. At 10 A. M. general muster. "The Regulations and Rules" for the better government of the Navy read in presence of the officers and crew, and subsequently they were mustered. Lat. at 12 M. 48° 7' 36"; lon. 43° 29' 20". Made good distance, 254 miles. Subsequently, at 3 P. M., all the officers and passengers met at dinner in the ward-room, when everything passed off very pleasantly, and if we can draw an inference from the strong enthusiasm of all, from the Captain and Professor MORSE, down through all the different grades of officers in the ship, most surely we have every reason to believe as well as hope, that our enterprise will be successful.

We have not as yet fairly tried the ship, either under sail or steam, or with both acting together, and for a reason. It is scarcely worth while, upon an experimental cruise, to force on and break down, whether or no, "TOM COLLINS," and thus defeat the object for whose accomplishment we are sent out, and which if accomplished would be of more importance, not alone to the United States, but to the world at large, than the cost of a dozen such ships as this, officers, crew and all. As a matter of well-known experience, our engines will work better when they have run a while, than at the first going off. Even now, at the end of some six days' trial, we are so satisfied with her perfections that beyond a doubt she will be forced up to a greater speed than at present. We shall see. We have gone 9 (nine) knots under steam alone, and over 14 (fourteen) knots with sail and steam, and that in a very light breeze. Do not be astonished should you hear of 17, or even 18 knots.

May 1.—Average revolutions, 36.3 during the night; smooth sea and calm; speed 8 k., distance 224 miles, lat. 42° 52' N., lon. 38° 21' W., wind westerly.

2.—At 10 A. M., showed our colors to an English barque bound to the Northward. At 11 squalls of wind and rain, wind northward and eastward, reduced sail to reefed topsails. At 12 M., lat 43° 53' W., lon. 32° 48', distance 251 miles, average 10.6 knots.

3—At 2 P. M. blowing quite fresh from northward and eastward, rain and slight sprinkling of snow; according to present appearances shall be at least 14 or 15 days on the passage, but we have neither carried sail nor burnt coal with "enthusiasm" as they say at "Laura Keene's," but on the contrary in the greatest moderation.

4.—Showed colors to an English ship standing to the westward. Ran 240 miles, lat. 44° 20', lon. 27° 19'. Heavy sea and strong gales from northward and eastward, with showers of rain and hail, came very near losing masts.

5.—From eight to Meridian at nine, carried away the port forwards, swifter of the main rigging; also the forward shroud; called all hands, shortened sail, furled the topsails and foresail, and commenced setting up the main rigging, having first secured the mast with pennant tackles. At 10 A. M. carried away the fore try sail gaff; unbent the sail. Discovered that the chain parts of the shrouds were defective; the links which were carried away appeared to have been only half welded. At 6 passed a ship standing to the westward, another on the starboard beam; set up all the rigging; under steam alone, making two to four knots; wind dead ahead; ship rolling very deep; heavy head sea, under double reefed topsails (fore and main) and jibs; at 12 M. furled sails and hauled on our course under steam.

6.—At 10½ P. M. furled all sail and commenced steaming; wind East to East by North; lat. at 12 M. 49° 9'; long. 25° 51' 15"; distance per log 106 miles.

7.—Wind E. N. E.; course East under steam; repairing engine; lat. 45° 50', lon. 23° 18' 54"; distance 160 miles; at 12 M. hove to.

8.—At 9 A. M. triced up the propeller, turned reefs out of topsails, set courses, topgallant sails and jib; 8 knots with propeller down, close hauled; lat. 49° 23', lon. 28° 34'; distance 115 miles.

9.—Wind fair but squally, with rain. Three sail in sight—beating them all, we under short, they under full sails; lat. 47° 53', lon. 18° 8'; distance 214.

10.—Light wind and fair; several sail in sight, one a French frigate, the Niagara, drawing ahead of all and gradually dropping them out of sight under sail. At 5:05 lowered down the propeller and started all the engines, with sails from topgallant sails. Lat. 48° 2', lon. 16° 16'; light winds and pleasant; several sail in company, under sail. At 4½ started engines.

11.—At 12 M., lat. 48° 55', lon. 11° 9', distance 209 under sail only; from 1:30 A. M., squally with rain; gave our longitude to a Danish brig; at 1.30 P. M., started propeller with reefed topsails, foresail and jib. At 8 A. M., in the longitude of the Lizzard nearly, very foggy, course E. S. E. to E. by N., making 13 knots.

12.—Lat. at 12 M., 49° 21', lon. 5° 19', distance 224 miles; at 6.30 took a channel pilot; at 3 A. M., Isle of Wight bore N. by W.; at 5 A. M. Coast of France in sight; at 8 A. M. off Beachy Head; at 11 A. M. off Hastings; at 7 A. M. clewed up all sail and under steam only.

13.—At 12 M. off Dungeness, distance 244 miles; came to anchor at the mouth of the Thames at 8 P. M.

The Log will satisfy all those who take an interest in the performance of the noble ship of her admirable sea going qualities. We are now anxiously waiting to learn what our next move will be, and when we shall commence taking on board a cable; respecting which, we are not correctly informed. I shall be able to give you more definite particular by the next steamer.

[FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.]

U. S. FRIGATE NIAGARA, River Thames, Esq., Thursday, May 14, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

We are just passing up this beautiful and interesting river, and I hasten to prepare a few lines to be ready for the first opportunity after reaching our anchorage at Greenwich.

The result of the Niagara's working during the two days previous to our taking our departure for this place have, doubtless, been made public through the gentlemen who came out with us for the purpose of taking the performances of the engines, and who we transferred to a steam-tug on the afternoon of the 24th of April, off Sandy Hook, to return to New-York. The same evening, about 8 o'clock, we were again under way, directing our steps for Merry England, favored by propitious gales and a glassy sea—which attended us until the night of 3d of May, when heavy weather set in from the northward and eastward, delaying our progress and overthrowing our hopes of making a quick passage—which probably would have been within thirteen days had we not met with stress of weather and other delays.

The heavy weather lasted unlil the 5th ult. when it moderated, leaving us with adverse winds. It was of sufficient severity to test the sea qualities of the ship, which are admitted to be of the highest order by all her officers. Nothing can be imagined more easy than her roll and play upon the sea, she rising from it as buoyant and dry as a duck. From her great length the pitching motion is scarcely perceptible, or the tremor which is usually experienced by vessels when struck by a heavy sea. She is remarkably stiff, and would stand up well even under a heavier pressure of canvas than she has been furnished with, although even this has to be used with caution, owing to defects having been found in her sparring, and the iron work about the rigging generally. The former is too light and of inadequate strength and material, while in the latter, marked defects in the texture of the iron, found in the line of fracture in the bolts and rings which gave way during the blow, seriously endangering life, but fortunately no accidents occurred, which might have been the case had that about the heavy works aloft given way. It is, therefore, to be hoped, that on the return of the ship home, her sparring and rigging will undergo a thorough overhauling and changing necessary. In fact, if the hopes of the friends of her late lamented constructor are to be realized, this must be done; for as satisfactory as has proved her working so far, she has not yet come up to the mark expected of her.

The largest day's run made has been 300 miles. The greatest average speed for any number of consecutive hours, 13 knots, under steam and canvas, the propeller making only 44 revolutions. Consumption of coal about 50 tons per diem. Under sail alone she has logged 13 knots, though laboring under the disadvantages already alluded to. When worked under the most advantageous circumstances her log has even indicated a speed of between 14 and 15 knots for a short spirt. The best trial made under steam alone, with current in her favor, has been between 11 and 12 knots. Results, therefore, so far, have proved most satisfactory, and should inspire the friends of the Niagara with confidence that she will reach, when tested under more favorable circumstances, their best anticipations. Her propeller can be worked up to 60 revolutions per minutes, and a fair consumption of coal would be about 75 tons per diem, which maximum point you will perceive has not been reached.

The engines reflect the highest credit upon their constructors, and have worked with but little interruption to the satisfaction of those in charge. The cry has always been that Government contracts never come up to the mark, but it is to be hoped that in this instance Messrs. PEASE, MURPHY & Co. have, in identifying themselves with a vessel which is regarded as an innovation in the "Naval Service," turned out a piece of work which adds to their reputation, and which any successful performance of the Niagara must only tend to enhance. LATER FROM HAVANA.

Arrival of the Quaker City.

The steamship Quaker City, Captain SHUFELDT, from Mobile the 22d inst., and Havana at 10½ on the morning of the 25th, arrived here at an early hour yesterday afternoon.

It was rumored at Havana that SANTA ANA was expected there in a few days, on his way to Mexico, under Spanish protection.

The British brig of-war ——, PEAR, Commander, sailed from Havana on the 25th.

The United States Surveying schooner Varina, BREESE, Commander, left for Key West on the 24th.

Havana continues very healthy.

Arrival of the Ariel.

The steamship Ariel, of the Vanderbilt line, from Bremen via Southampton, on the 16th inst., arrived at this port yesterday afternoon. Our correspondent at Southampton, writing on the 16th, says:

"The Ariel steamer, Capt. LUDLOW, of the Vanderbilt line, leaves here to-day for New-York, with about 140 passengers from Havre. She carries none from this port, for the purpose of avoiding being brought under the provisions of the "Passenger Act," which would have subjected her to a series of very troublesome and disagreeable regulations. This Act bears very heavily upon the numerous first class steamships constantly leaving this port without a mail contract, and measures are being adopted with the view of modifying the Act during the present session of Parliament. The fittings of the Ariel prevent her complying with the Act.

The new steamship Vanderbilt, Capt. D. L. WILCOX, arrived in Cowes Roads yesterday evening, at 6 o'clock, having accomplished the voyage from New-York in a little under ten days. She encountered foggy weather from New York to the southwest edge of the Banks of Newfoundland, and strong gales from northeast to southeast, with high seas, from thence to the longitude of 11 degrees. The Vanderbilt brought 201 passengers, and $400,000 in specie for Southampton and Havre. She sailed from Cowes for Havre at 8 o'clock this morning. The following is her specie list:

Messrs. Geo. Peabody & Co., London	$300,000
Union Bank of London	100,000
Total	$400,000

The Vanderbilt passed a large iceberg in lat. 43° 45', long. 43°. She passed the British East Indian Princess Royal in lat. 48°, long. 10° 30'."

Cleansing the Streets—City Inspector Morton Beginning the Job on His Own Hook.

Mr. MORTON set a force of twenty-five men and carts at work, yesterday, in cleaning the streets of the First Ward. The ashes, garbage, &c. taken from the streets are dumped at the Battery. The men employed are paid twenty-one cents per load. Mr. BURNE, Inspector of the Ward, who supervises the work, remains at the Battery and keeps a tally of the number of loads each man brings. By to-morrow night it is expected that all the ashes and garbage will be removed, and everything be in readiness to apply the scraper, hoe and shovel to the streets and gutters on Monday morning.

Ten men and carts commenced also yesterday the carting away of the ashes and garbage from the Second Ward, under charge of Mr. FORDLOW, Inspector of the Ward. More men and carts will be set to work to-day. The refuse material from this Ward is carted to the foot of Roosevelt-street, and twenty-three cents paid per load.

Mr. MORTON finds great difficulty in getting all the carts he requires. He proposes to advertise for the number requisite to commence work on Monday in all the Wards where he has annulled the contracts. Mr. MORTON has commenced the street-cleaning in earnest, and says that he will persevere in earnest to the end.

☞ Mr. JOSEPH DELMONICO (of the lower "Delmonico's," corner of William and Beaver streets) died very suddenly yesterday afternoon.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR—There is a serious error of the press in the letter signed "Citizen," published in your paper of yesterday. "Citizen" is made to say that Mr. GARRISON and his associates have spent a million in "defrauding" the Accessory Transit Company. The word should have been "defending," and was so written. There was no intention of charging a fraud, as the grammatical connection will show. Please insert this and oblige "CITIZEN."

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Consular Appointments all Made—The Utah Governorship Settled—Marshalship of the District—The Case of Consul Jenkins.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 29.

The Consular Appointments have all been made There were but twenty to be disposed of. No officer is to be removed until the expiration of his term. There were eight hundred applicants—more than one for every Congressional District.

Mr. BUCHANAN desired gentlemen to understand this: that they might go home. Rotation in office will be adhered to.

The Governor for Utah has been appointed at last and has accepted of the appointment. The announcement will be made in a few days. Major MCCULLOCH positively refused.

There are applications for the Marshalship of the District from every State in the Union. The President said to-day that he must be permitted to consult his own views as to the members of his household; that he should appoint a Southern man as Marshal. BEVERLY TUCKER will no doubt be the man.

The Government has every confidence in the report of DR. CALDWELL, that there is a practicable route for a ship canal across the Isthmus of Darien, and will order a survey to be made.

Gen. CASS will leave for the Railroad celebration on Monday, and will visit Michigan before he returns.

[FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 29.

The Jenkins case is for the present disposed of, as, after a long hearing the Court discharged him under the habeas corpus writ, for want of sufficient testimony—the witness VAN CAMP not being able to swear further than up to the time he left for Valparaiso.

LORENZO D. HASKINS, who was the supercargo on board the Eudorus, was too far off to get here in time—otherwise his testimony might have been sufficient for the detention of JENKINS.

The District Attorney KEY, it is said, abandoned the case and was not on hand this morning.

Mr. APPLETON, the Assistant Secretary of State, was called, but knew nothing.

The strong plea of the defence was that the Court was formed, and sale, "or rather, sacrifice, of near $200,000 worth of goods," was made under the belief that authority was vested under the same law which authorizes Consuls in China, Turkey, and the Barbary States, to hold court and decide all matters defined by law and treaty therewith. WASHINGTON, Friday, May 29.

Information has been received in this city by which it appears that the difficulty in entering Austria is now increased by the new passport system which makes it necessary that passports shall be given up at the frontier. Travelers will, therefore, have to enter at the principal routes, if their paseports be not in proper form.

A visé for Austria cannot be obtained of the Austrian Legation in Frankfort, unless the passport has been already veriled by the Austrian Minister a Washington, London or Paris, or unless, occasionally through courtesy, when it has the visé of an American Minister abroad. The Austrian Legation takes no notice of a commercial or consular visé.

Consul JENKINS was discharged this afternoon under a writ of habeas corpus, the Court stating that from documents from the State Department exhibited in his behalf, no criminal intent was apparent.

The news by telegraph that Granada had ceded the islands in the Bay of Panama was not credited in official quarters, nor is such result apprehended.

A contract was made to-day with the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad and Steamboat Company, for carrying the mails between Washington and Richmond twice a day, commencing on Monday next.

Receipt of the News of Walker's Arrival—Important Private Dispatches from New-Orleans—An Infringement of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 29, 1857.

Great excitement was produced here yesterday morning, by the dispatch from New-Orleans, announcing the arrival of the steamship Empire City, with Gen. WALKER and staff at that port. We had been led to believe here that the reinforcements from California would have arrived in time for WALKER to have fought a decisive battle with the Costa Ricans. We were not prepared, however, to hear of his surrender to the American forces. It was known that the Administration of Gen. PIERCE had issued the most stringent orders to Capt. DAVIS, of the sloop-of-war St. Mary's, to do all he could to break up the Fillibusters, but Gen. WALKER was not prepared to receive this last act of ingratitude, as a coup de grace from his quondam friend, the EX President. This was worse than an army of Costa Ricans, and when the American Government pounced upon and threatened to seize his little schooner, the Granada, which held his reserve, he could not but surrender. He is saved the disgrace, however, of surrendering to the Costa Ricans, which, it is believed, he never would have done.

Many are of the opinion that this is the grand finale of WALKER'S attempt to establish a Republic in Central America, and that he is a used-up man. This is not so, however. Private dispatches received here state that the most intense excitement prevailed in New-Orleans, and that preparations were being made to hold an immense mass meeting in Lafayette-square, of that city. Dispatches were being sent off in all directions, and the whole valley of the Mississippi would soon respond to WALKER'S cause with the most substantial sympathy and aid. As I had already informed you previous to this news, a movement was on foot in New York, and many of the Southern States, for the purpose of maintaining WALKER'S Government, and giving it a solid and permanent basis. We shall now see what will come of it. When Messrs. SOULE and SLATTER left here, they were perfectly satisfied with the interview they had had with the President, and if WALKER had been victorious a minister would have been sent to Nicaragua, acknowledging the Government. The Administration is anxious to secure a peaceable and uninterrupted transit across to the Pacific, and it prefers either the Nicaragua or the Tehuantepec route for its mail service to that of the Isthmus.

The report that New-Granada had ceded the island in the Bay of Panama to England, in settlement of the McIntosh claim, is not believed here. If true, it is in direct violation of the Clayton and Bulwer treaty, as construed by this Government, and as revised under the Dallas-Clarendon treaty, which, it will be remembered, England refused to ratify, under the excuse that the preliminary treaty between Great Britain and Honduras, by which the former ceded the latter the Bay Islands, had not yet been consummated. This treaty is now a dead letter, and Lord NAPIER has already made a formal proposition to this Government for a new Central American treaty, upon such a satisfactory basis as shall remove all further misunderstanding between the two Governments. If the above rumor shall prove true, however, great difficulties will not only arise in the negotiations of the treaty, but so serious a misunderstanding may lead to an open rupture.

The investigation into the case of the two Consuls of Navigator's Islands, JONATHAN S. JENKINS and A. VAN CAMP, now proceeding in the State Department, promises some rich disclosures on both sides. Mr. VAN CAMP is furnishing the Department with some very rich and spicy dialogues, said to have occurred between JENKINS and his United States Deputy Marshal, Capt. MARTIN, at Apia. From the statements of JENKINS, (who is quite an aged man, with an immense long white beard,) he has been a martyr to his country, and it is hardly fair to prejudge him by ex parte statements, and thus condemn him without a hearing.

LORD NAPIER gave a grand party last night in honor of the Queen's birth-day. The rain fell in torrents during the evening; but, notwithstanding it was fully attended.

It is now thought certain that Gov. DICKINSON, of your State, will go to the Court of St. James.

A UNITED STATES MARSHAL IN CUSTODY FOR ARRESTING HARBORERS OF FUGITIVE SLAVES—FIGHTING BETWEEN THE STATE AND UNITED STATES AUTHORITIES.

CINCINNATI, Friday, May 29.

Deputy United States Marshal CHURCHILL and eleven assistants left this city last Tuesday to arrest four persons, in Mechanicsburg, Champaign County, this State, charged with harboring fugitive slaves nine months ago. The arrests were made on Wednesday, when a writ of habeas corpus was taken out; but before it could be served, the United States officers, with their prisoners, were beyond the borders of the county. Another writ was taken out in Green County, and served by the Sheriff, assisted by a large crowd of citizens. The United States officers resisted, and several shots were exchanged, but, finally, the United States officers were overpowered, taken prisoners and brought to Springfield for trial for resisting the Sheriff in the discharge of his duty. The greatest excitement prevailed.

The United States Marshal telegraphed the Secretary of the Interior to-day for instructions regarding the arrest and imprisonment of the United States officers at Springfield, but the nature of the instructions received in reply has not yet transpired. Judge LEAVITT, United States District Judge, issued a writ of habeas corpus to-day, and the Marshal has gone to Springfield to serve it. In case resistance is offered, it is reported that the United States troops will be called out.

EXPECTED RETURN OF GEN. WALKER TO NICARAGUA—DEATH OF AN EDITOR.

NEW-ORLEANS, Thursday, May 28.

Gen. WALKER'S friends confidently assert that he will go back to Nicaragua in 30 to 60 days, with plenty of men and means. He and his Staff attended, by invitation, this evening, SPALDING'S Amphitheatre. The house was densely crowded, and when Gen. WALKER appeared the house rose and cheered him most enthusiastically, the band playing the national airs.

Gen. WALKER will address a public meeting here to-morrow night on "Neutral Ground."

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

SEVENTH DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION.

CLEVELAND, Friday, May 29.

Mr. PAINTER, of Tennessee, offered a substitute for the report of the Committee on Slavery, as follows:

Resolved, That the Constitutional Presbyterian Church will not allow any of her preachers to preach in slaveholding States, without being subject to annual reproofs and admonitions from the General Assembly.

Mr. PAINTER said, we wish to know what the Assembly are going to do, embarrassed by continual admonition from the North. If it is the intention of the North to say we will have nothing to do with you it was best to adopt this resolution at once.

The subject was then postponed indefinitely.

Approval of the Synodical records of Mississippi was also postponed.

The report of the Central American Educational Society was read.

The consideration of the report of the Committee on Education was concluded and the report adopted.

The standing Committee on Education reported its approval of the Ashmun Institute.

Mr. CARTER, of Ohio, presented another substitute for the report of the Committee on Slavery, calling the Presbytery of Lexington to rectify its position of sustaining slaveholders.

EIGHTH DAY—MORNING SESSION.

The Committee on Church Polity reported in favor of keeping up a correspondence with the Reformed Churches.

Mr. CARTER'S substitute for the report of the Committee on Slavery was taken up, which called out Mr. CLELAND, of Kentucky, who read a document giving as the position of the Church South the belief that American Slavery is an appointment of God, on the same footing with the family relation.

Mr. SCARRETT, of St. Louis, said that he and his associates not in that paper, belonged to the Northern side of the question.

Pending a motion to adopt the substitute, the Assembly adjourned.

OUR NEW LAWS.

The Metropolitan Police.

The Metropolitan Commissioners met yesterday, at the usual hour, at their headquarters in White-street. President DRAPER presided. A force of men, for the protection of the Quarantine at Seguine's Point, was agreed to be sent, on condition that the Quarantine Commissioners would foot the bill.

Decision in the case of Lieut. MARTIN, of the Fifth Ward, was reserved till Monday.

Formal complaints were preferred by Deputy Superintendent CARPENTER, against fifteen Captains and one Lieutenant for disobedience of orders, in not making their reports to the office in White-street, pursuant to General Order No. 2. Four of the Captains, viz.: those of the Seventh, Ninth, Tenth and Fourteenth, have been summoned to appear and answer the charges on Monday next. The remainder of the session was occupied by the Commissioners in considering private and financial matters.

Superintendent TALLMADGE ordered 75 new clubs yesterday.

No additional appointments have yet been announced.

The old Commissioners did not meet yesterday.

Yesterday, to prevent a repetition of the offence, Mr. CASS puts the books belonging to the Station under lock and key, and told Mr. MCCLANE that his services were no longer needed there.

The Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Friday evening—the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

After the discharge and disposal of unimportant routine business, the Board resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole upon the special order—Councilman WAUGH in the Chair.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A BUREAU OF POLICE.

It was moved that the Committee report the reconsideration of all the amendments of the last evening.

Councilman OTTARSON asked why this should be done. He thought the amendments very proper. During the past twenty-four hours they had been induced to lay all their valiant independence at the foot of the Mayor. If they were willing to acknowledge their master, he had no objection.

Councilman BOOLE said those who had done wrong were willing to correct themselves.

Councilman JONAS thought every deliberative body had a right to reconsider its action. An executive power ought to have an executive head. There were 1,000 men in New-York uncertain of their daily pay. It was a serious question to those men how they should act. The Common Council wished them to come over in a body, under the understanding that an appropriation should be made for them.

Councilman MCCAHILL had been in favor of the amendments, but on second thought he was now opposed to them.

Councilman BOOLE moved that all the amendments except the 16th, providing for the payment of the Police Department, and the amendment to the 3d section, (that the alteration of the rules shall be by the Mayor, and with the consent of the Common Council,) be reconsidered.

The motion for reconsideration being decided in the affirmative, the 3d section was read by the Chairman, as proposed to be amended.

Councilman BRADY said he did not understand the matter. He demanded the reading of the ordinance. The Clerk commenced to read. It was moved that the further reading be dispensed with.

Councilman OTTARSON asked if that were in order. Several members rose to order upon various pleas. The previous question was called and negatived.

Councilman BRADY ineffectually attempted to gain a hearing. The question being carried as to the rejection of all the amendments excepting the two above enlisted, a scene of indescribable confusion arose, in consequence of Councilman ROEHNER refusing to vote, from the allegation that he did not know what he was voting about; Councilman OTTARSON exclaiming: "Let none but Democrats vote."

On the President taking his seat, Councilman BRADY objected to the reception of the report, owing to the fact that members had been denied in Committee the ordinary and proper demands of legitimate members of the Board.

The President stated the speaker had his redress in voting against the reception of the report.

Councilman BRADY asked whether the President was not bound to support the rules.

The President declared the Councilman was out of order.

The ordinance was then read on its final passage. In substance, the amendment of the third section makes the abrogation or alterations of any of the rules contingent upon the consent of the Common Council; before amended this whole power was in the hands of the Mayor. The 16th section, which is an addition, provides that the pay of the officers of the department shall be fixed as it is at present, and was on the 1st of January, 1857. The whole ordinance (which is lengthy) has been already published in the TIMES.

The adoption being submitted, Councilman OTTARSON objected. It was in direct violation of a State law, and consequently a violation of their oath of office. The law under which they had been acting was good.

Never, until now, had the City been arrayed in hostility against an act after it had been passed. The Board were treading on delicate ground. The law since 1844 had been acquiesced in by all parties. It was now discovered that we had been acting all this time under no law at all. The Mayor had been setting a bad example—it was a case unparalleled. Men point to the Executive and say that if there is no law for him there is no law that binds us. The Mayor was guilty of a great wrong.

Councilman WAUGH rose to order. It was wrong to abuse the Mayor in his absence.

The President said the point of order was well taken. Remarks ought to be directed against the bill. He could allow no personalities against any member of the City Government.

Councilman OTTARSON said that if the Mayor was holy, he would take his seat.

Councilman BRADY forwarded to the President a written protest.

The President declared it out of order. Each member's vote was a sufficient protest.

Councilman WARNER was allowed to enlighten the President and the Board as to the law affecting the presentation of protests. He hoped the majority, with whom he should vote, would listen with respect to the remonstrance or protest of the minority.

The President ordered the reader to read the protest, which was as follows:

"The undersigned protest against the reception of the report of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, for the reason that the members of the Board were not permitted to speak upon the paper under consideration, and further, that a request to have the paper read was denied, and the final vote in Committee taken while members were vainly endeavoring to be heard."

Signed—J. H. Brady, A. J. Campbell, A. Hemphill, John Kennard, Ledyard Avery, Jesse Mitchell, A. J. Odell, H. Franklin, W. H. Crane, R. W. Chapman, F. J. Ottarson.

When Councilman ROEHNER'S vote was called for, he excused himself on account of the want of proper courtesy from the person who was chairman of the Committee, asserting that "he could not call the person in the chair a gentleman," whereon, Councilman WAUGH styled Councilman ROEHNER a "Dutch small potntoe."

The other retorting that he was as good as the speaker, Councilman WAUGH called him a "Dutch pup." "What is that you say?" says Councilman ROEHNER, "a pup? I challenge you."

Councilman WAUGH qualified his statement by announcing his belief that Councilman ROEHNER was a "Dutch liar."

[After the adjournment the two gentlemen clinched for a tussle, but mutual friends separated them.]

THE STREETS.

A resolution was then finally passed, authorizing the City Inspector to clean the streets forthwith, and hereafter to be kept clean at the expense of the Corporation, and directing the Comptroller to audit and pay all bills.

The Board adjourned to Monday.

Our New Liquor Law.

Judges DUER, INGRAHAM and Recorder SMITH met yesterday for the purpose of selecting an Excise Commissioner to fill the vacancy caused by PETER COOPER declining the honor. After some consultation, they finally agreed upon ROBERT D. HOLMES, Esq. Mr. HOLMES has been notified of his appointment and accepted it. He will be sworn into office to day by the County Clerk. As to the construction of the new Excise law, Mr. HOLMES agrees with Mr. HASKETT, that different parties should be charged different sums for license. The large hotels, he thinks, should pay the maximum sum, ($250,) and the small fry the minimum sum, ($30.)

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLIES.

OLD SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT LEXINGTON.

Reports of Missions—Reports of Delegates—Board of Education—Commissioners to Europe.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

FOURTH DAY.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Monday, May 25, 1857.

Before adjournment, on Saturday, the resolutions from the Committee on Domestic Missions which had been recommitted, were brought in, in a revised form, and adopted.

Yesterday, being the Sabbath, the various churches of the city were very much crowded with interesting congregations assembled to hear discourses from some of the ablest clergymen present at the meeting of the Assembly.

After the usual devotional exercise and the reading of minutes, the Assembly commenced the morning business. Dr. DUMONT, Chairman of the Committee on the Nomination of Delegates, reported a list of nominations, which was put upon the docket.

Dr. ELLIS, delegate of the last Assembly to the General Association of New-Hampshire, made his report, which was, also, put upon the docket.

The stated Clerk read the resolution of the General Conference of Rhode Island, declining to correspond with the General Assembly on the ground of its relations to Slavery and its unwillingness to receive remonstrances on the subject. The matter was referred to the Committee on Foreign Correspondence.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Rev. J. LEIGHTON WILSON, the Secretary of this Board, made an interesting statement of the position of this cause, and assured the Assembly that, unless there was an increased supply of funds, the Board must not only cease to enlarge, but would be compelled to curtail its operations.

The Executive Committee of this Board reported the state of the funds as follows: During the past year the receipts have been $267,464 47, to which adding balance from last year $34 86, making $267,499 33. The payments have been $118,520 17, leaving a balance against the treasury of $11,030 84.

Rev. Dr. ADAMS, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Missions, presented a preamble and set of resolutions on this subject, suggesting ways and means for increasing the interest and contributions of the Church, in behalf of this object. The gentleman followed with a few remarks, urging the necessity of the children of our Sabbath-Schools being taught to give, so that they might grow up with habits of systematic benevolence.

Rev. CYRUS KINGSBURY, who has been a missionary among the Indians of our own country for forty years, made a statement of the history and position of the Choctaw Mission. At the time the mission was established, the people were in the lowest state of degradation; intemperance and infanticide were prevailing vices. There are now 15 missionaries laboring among this people. There are 15 organized Churches, and about 60 places of preaching. There are six boarding schools, with 300 pupils.

The language of the Choctaws has been reduced to writing, and more than 25,000 volumes have been printed for the use of these Indians. For 30 years ardent spirits have been excluded from this Territory by a law, which is vigorously executed. The rest of the morning was occupied in the discussion of the subject of Foreign Missions.

FIFTH DAY—TUESDAY, May 26.

Rev. Dr. ADAM, of Newark, Delegate from the Reformed Dutch Church, presented the congratulations of that most respectable body, in a speech, setting forth not only the unity of the bodies in respect to doctrine, but also in respect to their conservative position.

The Moderator responded in his usual happy manner, remarking that it was a pleasure to smoke a pipe of peace with the Dutch for three.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Moderator, Dr. VAN RENSSELAER, being the Secretary of this Board, left the Chair to the Rev. Dr. MCGILL, and addressed the Assembly on the subject of this Board. There were 333 candidates for the ministry under its care. The receipts during the past year have been $46,343 83, which is a larger sum than was ever contributed before.

Rev. Dr. LELAND, of the Committee on the Board of Education, presented a series of resolutions, which were read and adopted, commending this object to the increased favor of the Church.

Rev. Drs. ALEXANDER and BAIRD were appointed Commissioners to represent the Presbyterian Church at the meetings of the various evangelical bodies in Europe.

The Committee on Bills and Overtures reported through the Chairman, Rev. Dr. BRECKINRIDGE.

A legacy in North Carolina was left to the Presbyterian Church. As there was a legal doubt as to whether the particular Church to which the testator belonged was intended, or the Presbyterian Church at large, the matter was referred to the Assembly. This Committee resolved to release the claim of the Assembly to the particular Church. Adopted.

The Presbytery of Hudson (New School) sent up a remonstrance, complaining against the Presbytery of Hudson (Old School) concerning their action in respect to a Church in Westchester-ville. The Committee proposed that the subject be referred to the next Assembly. After a long discussion the report of the Committee was adopted.

NEW SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT CLEVELAND.

REPORT ON SLAVERY.

Exciting Discussion--Speech of Rev. Dr. Ross.

Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.

FOURTH DAY.

CLEVELAND, Monday, May 25, 1857.

This morning the Committee on Bills and Overtures made their expected report on the subject of Slavery. The Committee consists of the following members: Rev. Dr. ALLEN, of Lane Seminary, Cincinnati; Rev. BENJAMIN J. WALLACE, of Philadelphia; Rev. J. B. BEHRMAND, D. D., of New York; Rev. THOMAS H. CLELAND, of Kentucky; Hon. H. GRISWOLD, of Cleveland; ORLANDO HASTINGS, Esq., of Rochester, and RICHARD EDWARDS, of Iowa. It was presented by the Chairman, Dr. ALLEN. The report is as follows:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF BILLS AND OVERTURES ON SLAVERY.

The Committee of Bills and Overtures would report to the General Assembly that 27 memorials have been placed in their hands on the subject of Slavery. These memorials come from the following localities, viz: From Ohio, 11; from Illinois, 4; from Indiana, 3; from Michigan, 2; from Iowa, 1; from Wisconsin, 1; from New-York, 3; from Pennsylvania, 1; from Mississippi, 1. They show that so strong a feeling exists on this subject as to make it proper that the Assembly should express its views in regard to it.

The opinions of the Presbyterian Church in respect to Slavery are on record. Had there been no impression on the minds of our Churches that opinions different from those formerly held are now maintained and defended among our people, there might have seemed to be little occasion to do more than to refer to the recorded views of the General Assembly, and to its uniform current of testimony on this subject. But as it appears that such opinions exist, the Assembly hereby reaffirm the views heretofore set forth as to the character of Slavery.

It appears from papers sent up to this Assembly that an impression is wide-spread that it is now held and taught within the bounds of the Presbyterian Church that the system of Slavery is right in this sense, that it stands in all respects upon the same basis with the natural relations which the Almighty has established, such as those of parent and child and husband and wife, that of consequence it is a desirable system of itself and ought to be perpetuated.

In relation to this matter the General Assembly would remark that these opinions are to be carefully distinguished from another class of sentiments which are believed to prevail extensively among our Southern brethren. They are such as these: That the system of Slavery is eminently undesirable, and fraught with many evils; that the relation is to be emotnuod no longer than the best interests of both master and slave imperatively require it; that good citizens should labor earnestly and constantly for a system of emancipation in the State, and individual Christians should seek to be delivered from all connection with Slavery as soon as possible; that freedom is the natural and proper condition of all men so soon as that freedom can be properly enjoyed and preserved; that slaves should, during the unfortunate continuance of this undesirable condition, be instructed and elevated as far possible; that the relations among slaves of husband and wife, parent and child, and church member, should be held as sacred as those among masters; and that the great law of Christian love should in all ways pervade and animate the designs of Christian masters, so constituted by the Providence of God.

The Assembly consider these two sets of opinions as widely and irreconcilably opposed to each other. The first class are clearly opposed both to the principles of humanity and the teachings of Holy Scripture. When the Almighty establishes relations which are in any degree irresponsible to human authority, such as those of husband and wife, and parent and child, he guards them by an affection so tender, that the erring is generally on the side of over indulgence, rather than rigidness. In this affection of the husband and father, the wife and child have a safeguard which is much more effectual than any which human law could give. Not so with the relation of Autocrat in the State, or Master in private life. The subject and servant need the protection of law, a law which will recognize every right of humanity. This Assembly can never consent to the idea that under the teachings of our Redeemer, and the increasing light of the Holy Spirit's influence, Slavery ought to be perpetual. Such opinions are contrary alike to the Revelation of God, and the moral sense of Christendom.

As one of the Presbyteries—that of Lexington South—have sent a memorial to this Assembly in which they declare that a number of their ministers and church members hold slaves, believing it to be "right," without adding any limitation or qualification to the expression, the Assembly hereby declare their entire disapproval and condemnation of such a principle.

But with those brethren who hold the second class of opinions to which we have referred, the Assembly do not hesitate to declare their kind sympathy. They would treat them precisely as the Apostles treated warm-hearted primitive Christians in the same circumstances. The Apostles never taught that Slavery was on a level with the natural relations; they never countenanced the idea that it ought to be perpetuated; but they bore with it for the time; they inculcated principles which led to its removal, and which were calculated to raise servants by the power of faith, knowledge and holiness to a fitness to exercise all the functions of freemen; they exhorted masters to give to their servants that which is just and equal; they endeavored to fill the heart of the master with tender sympathy, so that he should desire and seek emancipation and effect it as soon as possible. So do we feel towards our brethren whose opinions and practice come under our second classification. We would help and not hinder them; we would encourage and not discourage them; and we would labor along with them in every wise and suitable effort to remove this great evil from among men.

For the motion to "print," a substitute was offered as follows:

Resolved, That this report be made the order of the day to-night, and that when it comes before the house the roll shall be called, to afford the Presbyteries an opportunity to state the facts in relation to the substitute, and to express their wishes and that the whole matter be then referred to a select Committee of thirteen, to report at the earliest possible time.

Mr. PERKINS, of Baltimore, called for a further division after the word "print."

The Moderator put the question to vote as follows:

"That it be printed, and made the order of the day for ——."

Carried unanimously.

He then stated the second division as follows:

"That when it comes before the house, the roll shall be called, to afford the Presbyteries opportunity to state the facts in relation to the subject, and to express their wishes."

A motion was made to strike out the clauses in reference to the Presbyters, and the Select Committee.

Rev. Mr. MANNING, of Trumbull Presbytery, moved to divide this motion by retaining the Presbyteries and striking out the Select Committee.

After the vote, the two clauses were stricken out.

FIFTH DAY....TUESDAY, May 26.

DR. ROSS' SPEECH.

This afternoon a great audience gathered to hear the opening of what was expected to be a stormy debate in the General Assembly, on the subject of Slavery. The floor of the house was obtained by Rev. F. G. CLARK, and accorded, by courtesy, to Rev. Dr. ROSS, of Huntsville, Ala., who had previously expressed a desire to make some remarks preliminary to the discussion of the question on its merits. These remarks, which were expanded into a speech of an hour and a half, were a statement of his own personal views on the subject of Slavery, chiefly presented in extracts which he read from his recent and somewhat notorious letters to Rev. ALBERT BARNES, of Philadelphia, interlarded and spiced by oral observations, explanations, and illustrations; all given in this eccentric gentleman's most characteristic style, to the amusement, if not to the edification, of the vast audience. This speech, both in manner and in matter, was very little different from Dr. Ross' celebrated speech in the General Assembly of last year, in Madison-square, New-York. To-day's effort contained a good deal of repetition, but the things repeated in the new speech from the old, were as exceedingly original, and so peculiarly the Doctor's own and nobody else's, that even to those who heard him last year, his "remarks" had all the charm of novelty.

He began by saying that his object was not to make a speech, but to attempt, if possible, to throw some oil on the troubled waves before him. When he told one of his brethren that this was his intention, that brother asked him if he meant the "oil of vitriol." [Laughter.] "No," he replied; he meant "sweet oil"—the "water of rosea." [Laughter.] He had not originally designed to come to the Assembly, having within a few weeks consigned to the grave the good, the brilliant and the beautiful—his only daughter. His beloved people told him to go from that grave—green in its freshness and out in the verdure and flowers upon it—and find in travel some withdrawment of mind from the buried dead. Thus, he said, he had come to the Assembly. He was in no mood for painful strife.

[Dr. Ross, at this point, was greatly affected, and paused for some moments. He continued as follows:]

But let that pass. He had no right, he said, to throw too much of this feeling upon his brethren. He would speak in love, and not with a design to stir up strife. In fact, the great fault of his life had been that everybody loved him too well. Men, women, children, slaves in the South—all loved him. Yes, he said, the great and magnificent South loved him! His object was to take out of the way a "man of straw," which had been set up before the Assembly. This "men of straw" he explained to be Dr. Ross himself. But he thought he had been misunderstood, and wanted to set himself right. He did not want to retract anything that he had ever said—not a jot—but to take out of the way of the Assembly the "bugbear," which some people and some newspapers had made of Dr. Ross. He did not doubt—in fact he knew—that the Committee in their Report meant him, as the exponent of what they called the "first class." He read from the report the following:

"But it appears (says the report of the Committee) from papers sent up to this assembly, that an impression is widespread that it is now held and taught within the bounds of the Presbyterian Church, that the system of Slavery is right in this sense, that it stands in all respects upon the same basis with the natural relations which the Almighty has established, such as those of parent and child, and husband and wife; that of consequence it is a desirable system of itself, and ought to be perpetuated."

He said, in commenting upon this passage, that the prominent sentiment of the paragraph, "the desirableness of the system of slavery, and the duty of its perpetuation," had never been expressed by him, but the very reverse. He reiterated his statement, made the day previous, that he did not believe a single Minister or Elder of the Presbyterian Church in the South, holds this sentiment. He read from his letters to Dr. BARNES some extracts to them that he had never demanded perpetuation of the system of Slavery. In those four letters, he said, and in his speech last May published in the Journal of Commerce, he had fully expressed his view on the whole subject of Slavery. He wrote these letters, he said, not "amid the labors of the pastor," as some ministers say, to excuse an imperfect performance; but he wrote them with care and in his study. And unlike PASCAL, who said of his Sixteenth Letter, that he had not time "to make it shorter," he (Dr. Ross) did have time to make his letters as short as he could; and he thought he had made them condensed and right to the point. [Laughter.] If he was wrong, he was dreadfully wrong. If he was a sinner, he was the greatest of sinners. He referred, with some pride to the effect of his great speech and these letters upon the public mind! They had made an impression on a hundred thousand people. In fact, he found, in coming to the Assembly, that some of his writings had been printed, with an introduction by Rev. Dr. ASA D. SMITH, of New-York, and circulated in all parts of the house! He read from that letter to show that he had never asked, in behalf of Slavery, that it should be "perpetuated."

DR. ROSS ON "AGITATIONS."

He said that, unlike some of his Southern brethren, he was for the agitation of the question of Slavery. He agreed with Dr. BARNES on the inutility and bootlessness of "agitation." He had nothing to fear, but all to hope, from the results of agitation. He read the following:

"Beaconville, many of your most pious men, soundest scholars, and sagacious observers of providence, have been led to study the Bible more faithfully in the light of the times. And they are reading it, more and more in harmony with the views which have been reached by the migrant Southern minds, to wit: That the relation of master and slave is sanctioned by the Bible; that it is a relation belonging to the same category as those of husband and wife, parent and child, master and apprentice, master and hireling; that the relations of husband and wife, parent and child, were ordained in Eden, for man, as man, and modified after the fall; while the relation of Slavery, as a system of labor, is only one form of the government ordained of God, over fallen and degraded man; that the evils in the system are the same evils of spirit that we see in the relation of husband and wife, and all other forms of government; that Slavery, as a relation, suited to the more degraded, or the more ignorant and helpless types of a sunken humanity, is, like all government, intended as the proof of the curse, of such degradation, and at the same time to elevate and bless; that the relation of husband and wife, being for man, as man, will never be over him; while slavery will remain so long as God sees it best, as a merciful power over the ignorant, the more degraded and helpless; and that when he sees it for the good of the country, he will cause it to pass away, if the slave can be elevated to liberty and equality, political and social, with his master, in that country; or out of that country, if such elevation cannot be given therein, but may be realized in some other land all which result, must be left to the unfoldings of the Divine will in harmony with the Bible, and not to a newly-discovered dispensation.

The Southern slaveholder is now satisfied, as never before, that the relation of master and slave is sanctioned by the Bible, and he feels, as never before, the obligation of the word of God. He, no longer, in his ignorance of the Scripture, and afraid of its teachings, will seek to defend his common-sense opinions of slavery or arguments drawn from "Types of Mankind," and other infidel theories; but he will look, in the light of the Bible, on all the good and evil in the relation. And when the North, as it will, shall regard him holding from God this high power for great good—when the North shall no more curse, but bid him God speed—then he will bless himself and his slave, in nobler benevolence. With no false ideas of created equality and inalienable right, but with the Bible in his heart and hand, he will do justice and love mercy, in higher and higher rule. Every evil will be removed, and the negro will be elevated to the highest attainments he can make, and be prepared for whatever destiny God intends."

TYPES OF MANKIND! Have you got that book here? It is published in New-Orleans by some fool, whose theory is that men are created in races, under certain zones, to come out like bees!"

DR. ROSS ON THE "DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE."

He referred also to a political letter, which he had written against THOMAS JEFFERSON and the Declaration of Independence. He pronounced the essential points of that document as infidel and false! That he would maintain in the face of the whole American people;—and not only this, but his views on this subject would go to Europe;—for an "embossed copy" of these writings of his was to be sent to each of the "crowned heads" of Europe. [Laughter.] Four-fifths of the Declaration of Independence, he said, is sublime and ever God-like, but the remainder has no business there. [Laughter.] There are four averments in that instrument which have no business there! He had analyzed them in one of his letters, and he defied the world to overthrow him on these points! He defied the best politician in Cleveland, and the best Philadelphia lawyer! The Declaration of Independence says "That all men are created equal;"—he denied it! That they have "inalienable rights,"—he denied it! That all governments exists with the "consent of the governed;"—he denied it. That men have a right to "change the government" at their pleasure;—he denied it. [Laughter.] That was his view of the Declaration of Independence, and he found authority for these sentiments in the Bible.

DR. ROSS ON THE "EMPEROR OF RUSSIA."

The Doctor gave his views of such a Government, and Governor Dyer it, as that of Russia and its Emperor. By the by, he said, he thought that when the Emperor should read that "embossed copy," he would thank him (the Doctor) for defending him (the Emperor) against the Russian Abolitionists! [Laughter.]

God, in his providence, ordains the Russian form of government—that is, He places the sovereignty in one man, because He sees that such government can secure, for a time, more good to that degraded people than any other form. Now, I ask—has the Emperor right from God to change, at once, in his mere "consent," the form of his Government to that of the United States? No. God forbids him. Why? Because he would thereby destroy the good, and bring immense evil, in his Empire. I ask again—have the Russian serfs and nobles, yea, all consenting, the right from God to make that change? No. For the Government of the United States is not suited to them. And, in such an attempt, they would deprive themselves of blessings they now have, and bring all the horrors of anarchy.

Do you ask, if I then hold that God ordains the Russian type of rule to be perpetual ever that people? No. The Emperor is bound to secure all of "life, liberty and pursuit of happiness," to each individual, consistent with the good of the nation. And he is to learn his obligation from the Bible, and faithfully apply it to the condition of his subjects. He will thus, gradually, elevate them; while they, on their part, are bound to strive for this elevation, in all ways which God may show them the good, and the right, which more and more will belong to them, in their upward progress. The result of such government, and such obedience, would be that of a father's faithful training, and children's corresponding obedience. The Russian people would thus have, gradually that measure of liberty they could bear, under the one man power—and then, in other forms, as they might be qualified to realize them. This development would be without convulsion,—as the parent gives place, while the children are passing from the lower to their higher life. It would be the exemplification of CARLYLE's illustration of the snake. He says, "a people should change their government only as a snake sheds his skin—the new skin is gradually formed under the old one; and then the snake wriggles out with just a drop of blood, here and there, where the old jacket held on rather tighter."

DR. ROSS ON "MAN-STEALING."

He said also that he had written a letter against a celebrated sermon by Rev. Dr. CHEEVER, of New-York, in which that gentleman had endeavored to prove that the Southern slaveholders are "man-stealers."

"The master finds himself, with no fault of personal concern in the African trade, in a Christian community of white Anglo-Americans, holding control over his black fellow-man, who is so unlike himself, in complexion, in form, in other peculiarities; and so unequal to himself, in attributes of body and mind, that he is impossible, in every sense, to place him on a level with himself in the community. This is his relation to the negro. What then does God command him to do? Does God require him to send the negro back to his heathen home, from whence he was stolen? That home no longer exists; but if it did remain, does God command the master to send his Christianized slave into the horrors of his former African heathenism? No. God has placed the master under a law entirely different from his command to the slave trader. God said to the trader: Let the negro alone. But he says to the present master, Do unto the negro all the good you can. Make him a civilized man. Make him a Christian man. Lift him up, and give him all he has a right to claim in the good of the whole community. This the master can do. This he must do. And then leave the result with the Almighty.

We reach the same conclusion by asking what does God say to the negro slave? Does he tell him to ask to be sent back to heathen Africa? No. Does he give him authority to claim a created equality and inalienable right, to be on a level with the white man in civil and social relations? No. To ask the first, would be to ask a great evil; to claim the second, is to demand a natural and moral impossibility. No. God tells him to seek none of these things. But he commands him to know the facts in his case as they are in the Bible, and have ever been, and ever will be in Providence—that he is not the white man's equal—that he can never have his level—that he must not claim it—but that the man he has, ought to have, and must have, all of good, in his condition as a slave, until God may reveal a higher happiness for him, in some other relation than that he must ever have to the Anglo-American."

DR. ROSS ON "UNCLE SAM AND MOSES."

He said that in one of his letters he had given a tableau of "Lucy Stone and Moses." [Laughter.] He thought that Moses had given it to that woman pretty hard. [Laughter.]

"Woman, hast thou ears? Hear. I, by authority of God, ordained that the man should rule over thee. I placed thee, and children, and men servants, and maid servants, under the same law of subjection to the government ordained of God in the family—the State. I, for a time, sanctioned polygamy, and made it right. I, for the hardness of men's hearts, allowed them and made it right to give their wives a bill of divorcement. Woman, hear. Paul, having the same spirit of God, confirms my word. He commands wives and children, and servants, after this manner: 'Wives submit yourselves unto your husbands, as it is fit in the Lord; children obey your parents in all things, for this is well-pleasing unto the Lord; servants obey, in all things, your masters according to the flesh—not with eye service as men pleasers, but in singleness of heart, fearing God.' Woman, Paul makes test rule the same, and the same in essence with the same. The manner of the rule he varies with the relations. He requires the husband the love of the husband, even as Christ loved the church—in the mildness of the father, not provoking the children to anger, lest they be discouraged; in the justice and equity of the master, knowing that he, also, has a master in heaven."

DR. ROSS ON "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN."

The Doctor interjected his opinion of Uncle Tom's Cabin. He said that he had wept, and laughed, and got mad over that book all at the same time. [Laughter.] He had wept because of touching exhibitions which it gave—of affection and love between masters and slaves, between women and the slaves, their servants. All this went to show the pulsations of the great Southern heart. The objection which he had to Uncle Tom's Cabin was this, that Mrs. STOWE had taken aggravated individual facts and presented them as the great fact of Southern life. It ought to be remembered, however, said he, that all the atrocity in that book did not emanate from the South. Miss Fosby, who did not know how to govern a slave because she had no feeling, came from the North. Legree, who whipped Uncle Tom to death, also came from the North. [Laughter.]

DR. ROSS ON THE JOURNAL OF COMMERCE.

The portion of Dr. Ross' speech which made the greatest sensation, was a passage in which he referred to the editor of the Journal of Commerce. A gentleman in New York, he said, a gentleman of very high position, had remarked to him in reference to his speech, (Dr. Ross',) which was published in the Journal of Commerce last May—stand up to that platform, and I will back you in it—I will back you in it." This gentleman, said Dr. Ross, is one of the first editors in the City of New-York. His words were, "I will back you up—stand where you are. Take six months," he continued, "and rake and scrape all the murders of slaves and masters, all the atrocities in the South that result from the system of Slavery, and I will pledge you my word as a gentleman and a Christian, that I will give you statistics to show that more murders, more poisonings, more atrocities have transpired in the City of New-York, or State, in the same given time, in the relation of husband and wife, and parent and child." If it was necessary, he (Dr. Ross) would give the name of the gentleman. He is a man who, when he says a thing, will stand up to the wall as stiff as Dr. Ives.

VOICES—"Give us the name. Who is he?"

Dr. ROSS—HALLOCK.

A VOICE—We know that before!

Dr. ROSS—Very good.

DR. ROSS ON THE "DETROIT RESOLUTIONS."

The Speaker then turned from the Journal of Commerce to the "Detroit Resolutions," referring also to the previous resolutions of 1818. He had called them "exulted abstractions," and "Delphic words." So they are. [Laughter.] Why, said he, what do the resolutions say? They say that you, slaveholders, are committing a great "blot upon our holy religion." And what then? Why, then, they go on to make excuses like this: but, if the "laws of the land" are over your heads, then you may hold on to your slaves. They say that you must not sell a brother in the Church "without his consent," implying, of course, that "with his consent" the poor fellow may be sold or not, just as it happens. According to his (Dr. Rose') plain way of thinking, his old Virginian way is pure and unmitigated nonsense. He wanted something better than this from the Assembly this time. [Laughter.] The resolutions are absurd and nonsensical. Judge JESSUP, he said, made a great speech on them in the last Assembly. After he (Judge JESSUP) got through, he (Dr. ROSS) got up, and, looking the Judge straight in the face, said to him: "Judge, do you admit that, according to the Detroit resolutions, Mr. AIKEN, of South Carolina, may hold 3,000 slaves?" The Judge started as if a horse had seen a lion in the path! [Laughter.] He turned pale, and said: "I don't think he could hold so many." [Laughter.] "Well, Judge, how many can he hold?" The Judge replied, magnanimously: "I believe he can hold the 3,000." That one single question shivered to atoms the whole of the Detroit resolutions! Of course, then, said he, those resolutions are nothing but "exulted abstractions!"

After this statement of his views, the Doctor concluded his remarks with his inevitable and characteristic allusion to the "eternal right and wrong in the nature of things," and took his seat with an air of considerable satisfaction—to the audience.

After the speech of the [illegible] a resolution (introduced yesterday, but lost) was again brought up—to call the roll of Presbyteries, for the purpose of giving opportunity to each to speak in order, and then to [illegible] Committee of thirteen, to report a plan of action to the Assembly. A debate on this resolution immediately "came in like a flood," and swamped the main question, and held its head under water for the remainder of the afternoon. It is not drowned out, however, and will eventually come up above the surface to-morrow.

The result of the afternoon's debate was comparatively nothing. The hour of adjournment arrived and cut short the discussion without a vote.

SIXTH DAY—MORNING.

WEDNESDAY, May 26.

The first order of the day, for this morning, was the consideration of the subject of Education. It was brought before the house on the basis of the "Annual Report of the Permanent Committee on Education for the Ministry." This report is admitted to be the ablest document that has yet been brought before the Assembly. It was prepared by the Secretary of the Committee, Rev. THORNTON A. MILLS, of Indianapolis. The report was received with the more interest by the Assembly, from the fact that this Committee is a newly organized body, which has sprung into existence since the last annual meeting of the Assembly. The Report gives an account of the formation of the Committee, and of its early meeting in June last; a general history of educational matters in this country from the beginning; an examination of some causes that are operating to decrease the number of students for the Ministry; a plan of action for Presbyteries in reference to the general subject of education, and a plan for aiding Beneficiaries. A discussion arose on the report, chiefly on the last two features, viz: The "plans." The plan of action for the Presbyteries embraced nine distinct points, and the plan for aiding Beneficiaries, fifteen. Each of these points, in both reports, was separately discussed and voted upon. The whole of the morning session and a part of that of the afternoon were occupied with these details.

A SQUIB.

The following squib was circulated through the Assembly, on printed slips, this morning. It is strongly suspected that the writer, who states "Dr. Ross' position," is no "Looker-in" only when Dr. Ross himself looks in!

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY PLAYING AT CHESS.

Dr. Ross' position is this: He considers the Slavery question, in the Assembly, to be a great game of chess between the North and the South. And, that, yesterday, he made two movements which have checkmated the North. That is to say—he has brought two arguments to bear upon the North, which they can neither resist nor retreat from.

First—He has shown that the South no longer occupy infidel ground, or no ground at all, as to what slavery is, and their duty; but, are now more and more, understanding what the Bible tells them, and doing their duty; therefore the North must say to them, We see you are not sinners, in your position. You are on the right ground.

Secondly—That he has shown that all the past testimony of the Assembly, for more than forty years, has been "stultified abstractions," and "Delphic words"—double-faced testimony, unworthy of the Presbyterian Church; therefore the Assembly can never, and will never, again, give such testimony. And, finally, that the Assembly can give no testimony whatever against the South, except that, like other Christians, they are not as good as they ought to be—all which the South humbly doth confess, and prays the North to confess, in imitation of their meek acknowledgment.

The Anti-Slavery Party is enveloped under these two batteries, which they can neither silence nor retreat from. The North, then, is checkmated. The game is not, as yet, fully developed. But the Doctor says that is the result when it is played out.

A LOOKER-IN.

American Baptist Free Mission Society.

SECOND DAY.

The Convention assembled in MacDougal-street Church, between Prince and Spring, at 10½ o'clock, and opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. GOODELL, and singing by the congregation. Rev. N. L. POST, from the Committee appointed yesterday on the subject of slavery and other sins, presented the following REPORT.

The Committee appointed to confer with the Dele gates from the Free Regular Baptist Association, on the principle held by said Association, viz.:

"That the Church of Jesus Christ should have no fellowship with those who countenance slaveholding, either by participating in it or apologizing for it."

Report, that, in the opinion of your Committee, the views and practices of the Association are entirely consistent with Baptist principles, and fully authorized by the teachings of the New Testament.

At the same time we think that our missionary body is not competent to prescribe any special course of action to associations, churches, or individuals, from whom, the churches especially, we rather seek direction and control; than assume to govern them.

We also submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That we admire and approve the self-denying dignity and energy of the Association referred to, and do cordially invite them to cooperate with us, and most solemnly and earnestly commend their principles to the consideration of every Baptist Christian.

The following report was offered by Rev. SIMON ARKEN, as explanatory of the above:

Your Committee appointed to confer with Brother CRAVEN and other delegates from the Free Regular Baptist Association, on the subject matter of resolutions passed by that body, report that they have held the conference to which they were appointed, and considered the resolutions proposed for the consideration of this body, and recommend the adoption of the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, We have been requested by the Free Regular Baptist association to express our opinion in relation to certain resolutions passed by said Association, which embody its distinctive sentiments on the subject of Slavery and other sins.

Resolved, That in the opinion of this body, it is perfectly consistent with the independence of Baptist Churches for those composing the said Association, to take grounds of non-fellowship with slaveholders, and all those who are in any way connected with Slavery.

Resolved, That we admire and approve the Anti-Slavery and Liberality of the brethren composing said association, and heartily invite them to cooperate with us in the objects of our common interest.

The resolutions, after debate, passed unanimously.

Rev. Mr. POST then read a long communication from Rev. J. S. GOODMAN, appealing for the establishment of a mission among the Bassas in Africa, and offering himself as a missionary. Rev. Mr. POST strongly advocated the appeal, seconding that brother GOODMAN, who was truly a good man, be sent back to Africa; he was willing to make any sacrifice for this purpose, and he knew that the mission could be sustained.

Rev. Dr. HALL then offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we recommend to the Board the appointment of Brother J. S. GOODMAN, as a missionary to Africa, on condition that he spend such time as the Board deem proper, in visiting churches in different parts of the country, with a view of exciting an interest in behalf of the African Mission, and that he be sent out as soon as the funds shall be furnished for that purpose.

The meeting adjourned, after prayer by Brother GRAHAM, (Freewill Baptist Church, New-York,) till 2½ o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The afternoon's proceedings commenced at 5 minutes to 3 o'clock; the attendance was not so large as in the morning. The exercises opened by singing the 816th hymn, followed with prayer by Elder PHILLIPS. The congregation then sang the 285th hymn, "Go preach my gospel saith the Lord," after which Rev. Mr. KENYON preached from the following text:

But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light. 1 Peter, ii. 9.

After the sermon a motion to refer the Corresponding Secretary's report to the Board of Trustees for publication prevailed.

Rev. Mr. HALL moved that Brother W. WALKER be requested to republish in the Baptist, his review of the Constitution of the Missionary Union, with any additional notes he might deem desirable.

After long debate the resolution amended by inserting an additional clause to the effect that the "review of the Constitution of the Missionary Union" be published in pamphlet form, was adopted.

The Treasurer (Rev. Mr. COWLES) then presented his report, as follows:

Amount on hand at the commencement of the year	$8,890 58
Receipts during the year including legacy from Brother Tweedill	6,990 61
Total	$10,880 19

EXPENDITURES.

Rev. Mr. POST proposed a vote of thanks to the Church and Congregation in which they had assembled, for the use of the church. Carried.

Rev. Mr. HALL said that it was not often that he offered resolutions, but he could not avoid noticing the very excellent reports of the proceedings published in the daily papers, and particularly those in the TIMES and Express. Even in religious papers the Free Baptist Mission was often misrepresented; he would therefore propose a vote of thanks to the Reporters who gave such a faithful record of their proceedings.

Rev. Mr. WARREN agreed with Brother HALL. The papers were generally hostile to this movement, and even the religious papers garbled statements often expressed, and no doubt would now. It would then be gratifying to say that they could refer to the peculiar views for a fair outline at least of the business done by the Association. He had great pleasure, therefore, in sustaining the motion. Adopted unanimously.

Rev. Mr. DUNBAR (pastor of the Church) offered a few remarks in favor of the Colored Churches and people in the City. He suggested that a Committee be appointed to inquire whether the Association could not take the Colored Baptists of New-York under their wing.

Rev. Mr. GLADDEN, of Block Island, and Rev. Mr. DUNBAR supported the suggestion.

On motion of Rev. Mr. WARREN instructions were given to the Board of Trustees to open a correspondence in relation to the matter, and also that the Board appoint a colporteur to the colored people if possible.

A resolution was then offered approving of the appointment of missionaries to Burmah, and after prayer by Rev. Mr. DENISON, the meeting adjourned till 8 o'clock P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

In the absence of Rev. Mr. AARON, the appointee, Rev. Mr. DENISON, of Buffalo, preached a practical sermon from Genesis iv. 9. After which, the meeting adjourned sine die.

Dr. Doremus at the Academy.

Dr. DOREMUS' lecture on Light at the Academy of Music, on Thursday evening, was a remarkable affair, on several accounts. It developed some new facts in Science, it netted a handsome sum for the Deaf Mutes, for whose benefit it was given, and it was unprecedentedly long. Not every man could have kept an audience as interested and orderly from 8 o'clock in the evening till near midnight, as Dr. DOREMUS contrived to do without apparent effort. In the arrangement of his illustrations, he was peculiarly happy. The attractions of his experiments grew greater as the night grew longer, and the best was the last. The entire stage of the Academy was covered with apparatus. Two long tables stretched from wing to wing, behind the footlights, crowded with glasses; a bath of fearful size occupied the orchestra; mysterious implements were strewed about the floor, and two Freenel lights occupied the rear. The house was as full of people as the stage of apparatus, and it was altogether a pleasant scene—Science made handy, and brought down to every man's understanding. Dr. DOREMUS avowed his sense of embarrassment in viewing the crowd who had waited upon him, and was diffident in appearing as a chemist in a house devoted to the Muses, but after making this statement found the occasion excellent for the expression of a lament that New-York has no public Hall of Science in which elaborate experiments can be set forth. He was delighted, however, with the prospect that this want of ours will presently be met by the Cooper Institute, and called down a benison on the head of Mr. PETER COOPER, the response to which was unanimous and hearty. Yet was the Doctor not so sure that he or Science were out of place in an Academy set apart for music—for did not the Grecian poets emblematize Apollo in the sunbeam; was it not possible for one evening to dispense with the lyre and substitute the light? In the beginning of creation, the first development of the action of matter upon matter, was the production of light—and the sunbeam has given, still gives, and, so long as it last, will continue to give, the vitalizing property to animal and vegetable existence. Starting from this point, the Doctor ran over a rapid description of the sources of external light, the planets, the satellites, the fixed stars, the comets; and in touching upon the latter, comforted his hearers by assuring them that the world is not to be knocked to pieces next month by the tail of an erratic Comet, as some would have us believe. This disquisition on the natural lights led readily into descriptions of the means of artificial illumination; and at this point the series of brilliant experiments which afterwards dazzled the eyes of the beholders, was first let loose. First came the familiar experiments with oxygen and hydrogen. Candles burned with increased brilliancy in a jar filled with oxygen, and respectfully declined to burn at all when shoved unceremoniously up a tube of hydrogen, though the flame played about the tube's mouth and kissed the candle-wick into a blaze as it emerged. Then a miniature carbonic-acid-gas factory was started into operation. Hydrochloric acid on bits of marble set free the heavy and poisonous element that killed the men in the Black Hole of Calcutta and murders dogs in the caves of the mountains. Six bits of candles, all in a row, placed in a trough, and the trough tilted up at an angle of 45°, were lighted and burned till the gas was poured over them. The Doctor seemed to pour out of a jar that was full of emptiness, but the lights went out, and so did the gas, and the effect was instantaneous, and the audience applauded vociferously. Then water parted with its oxygen to burn metal. Then ice snapped and crackled and burned f

to prevent him from coming to the assistance of the Captain armed with the Captain's weapons—you are to determine whether this evidence is sufficient to convince you that they had one common object. If you find that Brown is not proved to have been at the spot when the cook was stabbed, that he was at the wheel when the deed was done, and that he joined the other prisoners afterwards, then there is nothing to implicate him legally, unless you should believe that the cook was not dead when he was thrown into the sea, in which case he would be implicated in the crime. With reference to the consequences of your verdict—with that you have nothing to do. The law determines the consequences. You only have to determine the facts from the evidence, according to your oaths.

They returned shortly after 8½ o'clock, and announced there was no possibility of their agreeing, even on the first case of Smith. At the direction of the Judge they again retired, his Honor stating that if they agreed before 11 o'clock he would return to the Court and receive their verdict.

At ten minutes before 11 o'clock, the Judge having been sent for, the Jury returned a second time into Court. They said they had agreed upon their verdict, and found JOHN SMITH Guilty of Murder, and John De Costa, John Brown, and John Nedz, guilty of manslaughter.

Mr. NASH asked to have the Jury polled in the case of Brown. They were severally asked by the Clerk if they found John Brown guilty of manslaughter, and each answered that he did.

Mr. NASH wished the Clerk to enter a stay of proceedings for ten days, for the purpose of giving him time to file a bill of exceptions. Mr. SMITH, for the prosecution, said he understood that in that Court there was no such thing as a bill of exceptions. The Judge assented, but said that he would grant Mr. NASH sufficient time to make a motion for a new trial.

The Court then adjourned.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

DECISIONS.

THE MILLS' WILL CASE.

Lydia Mills, &c. vs. Wm. D. Mills, et al.—Yesterday Judge CLERKE rendered his decision in this case. We give the following abstract of his opinion:

CLERKE, J.—The terms and provisions of this will are inconsistent with the claim of the widow. The testator directs a final distribution of his estate after the youngest child shall have come of age, and that one third of it be reserved and invested for his wife during her life, and in the next clause he further directs that the residue of his estate (remaining after the deduction of the one-third,) be divided among his eight children, evidently not contemplating that another one third for his wife should be also deducted before the distribution.

When a testator directs a general distribution of his estate without assigning any particular distinct portion of it to any one, and gives one-third of the whole to his wife, and the remainder (securing two-thirds of it of course) to others without qualification, this is a deduction totally inconsistent with the idea that the widow should have any more than one-third of the whole; in other words, the residue (two thirds) cannot mean one-third. The real estate in New York being peremptorily directed by the will to be sold, it must be deemed of equitable conversion to be money and personal estate by the testator's death; the judge therefore thinks that the judgments against the children are not liens upon the New York property, but as the other real property is not within this direction, it must be deemed to have vested in them, and is consequently subject to those liens, two-thirds of which being, also, subject to the inchoate right of dower of the moneys of such children, according to their respective shares in said two thirds.

Their future interest in the one-third of the portion of the real estate is not subject to this inchoate right of dower, because the husbands are not seized of it either in law or in fact, the life interest being in their mother. Let a judgment be settled on notice in conformity with this decision, and with the report of the referee, except those points of it in which I have indicated error.

Duncomb vs. Woodruff.—Motion denied, with $10 costs, to abide the event.

Fuller vs. Dakin.—Motion denied, without prejudice to plaintiff's right to present these points before the referee on his claim to surplus money.

In re new Reservoir.—Report confirmed.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Bosworth.

Knapp vs. The Harlem Railroad Company.—Amendments to printed case settled.

Pierson, receiver, &c., vs. Squire.—Decision as to costs affirmed.

TRIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

DAMAGED GOODS.

Rodgers and Buhler vs. Murry.—In 1855, the plaintiffs' agent at Aspinwall shipped a lot of hides for this port. The P. Dee, upon which they were shipped, was bound here via Cuba. The goods were not delivered upon arrival, and the plaintiffs sue to recover their value—$1,578 76.

The defence is, that after leaving Aspinwall the Captain and nearly all the crew were taken sick, and several died. In consequence the vessel was obliged to put into Carthagena in distress. While there, the Captain discovered that the hides in question had been much injured by worms, &c. After a survey of the goods it was decided that if they were taken to New-York they would be worthless. The hides were therefore sold at auction for $344 66, which, deducting expenses and freight, left $257 69, which was tendered to the plaintiffs, as owners of the goods. The defendants claim that they acted for the best interests of the shippers, and deny liability. The case is still on.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.—May 29.

Before Judge Brady.

DECISIONS.

The Governors of the Alms-House vs. J. W. Hart.—Motion granted.

Samuel F. Whiting vs. Michael Hunnsilll.—Defendant discharged on the payment of costs.

William R. Stafford vs. Frederick A. Guion.—Attachment ordered.

D. G. Crane vs. Anthony Vaughan.—Motion denied, without costs.

Edward Hore vs. Joseph Hunt.—Motion denied.

Edward Kennedy vs. C. R. Totten.—Motion granted.

The General Term Supreme Court was yesterday adjourned until Monday, without transacting any business, owing to the absence of Judge PEABODY, occasioned by sickness in his family.

NEWS BY THE MAILS.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office has issued instructions to the land officers at Dooiihan and Lecompton, Kansas Territory, respecting the receipt at the sale of Indian trust lands in June and July next of the transfer drafts on New-York. These drafts have been supplied by the Treasury Department to the Assistant Treasurer at St. Louis, Missouri, and are in sums of $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $20,000 each.

Mr. C. M. ICKEN, a well-known resident of Sussex County, Del., was brutally murdered on Wednesday, in broad daylight, a few feet from his own door. He was standing in his own yard, unconscious of any danger, when two negro women, by a preconcerted signal, rushed upon him, threw him on the ground, and while one held him, the other, with an axe, severed his head from his body.

De Vaux College, an institution founded and endowed by the late Judge DE VEAUX, of Niagara Falls, was opened last week in the new College edifice, just below Suspension Bridge. Although no imposing ceremonial was contemplated, the College Chapel was filled with gentlemen and ladies from Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Lockport, and some of the adjoining towns.

The population of Massachusetts is 1,132,369. In 1855 there were 32,545 births, 12,329 marriages and 20,798 deaths. No marriage occurred during 1854 or 1855 in the town of Hancock, in the county of Berkshire, a town numbering, by the last census, 943 inhabitants.

The late Legislature of Pennsylvania was in session nearly sixteen weeks, passing nearly nine hundred bills, among which is the greatest number of bank charters ever passed at one session since 1837-39.

On the Georgia Railroad there are two Lilliputian engines, weighing but 2,800 lbs. each, used for running very light trains. The boilers are upright and oval, and three feet by two.

Seven hundred German families are now on their way to Davenport, Iowa, as the first of the Spring emigration. This will prove a valuable addition to the population of Iowa.

The country seat and farm of CALEB COPE, Esq., 110 acres, near Germantown, Pa., was sold on the premises last Wednesday, for $70,250.

A Republican State Convention is called to meet at Bangor, Me., on Thursday, June 25.

TELEGRAPHIC FEAT.—The Toronto Globe understands that "for the last few nights, after the close of the regular business of the line, the Montreal Telegraphic Company, in connection with the American Telegraph Companies through the States of Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, have been working direct from Chicago to Quebec, vid Buffalo, Toronto and Montreal, a distance by the telegraphic route of some 1,500 or 1,400 miles. The object of this lengthy communication is to establish the correct longitude, by solar observation, of the two different places. Lieut. ARNE, of Quebec, conducted the observations at Chicago. The operators there say that the lines worked beautifully on fine nights, and the signals went through as instantaneously as though the distance was 14 instead of 1,400 miles. The longest stretch of the great submarine cable between England and America will be about 1,900 miles; so that if the difficulties of laying down the cable can be successfully overcome, there appears to be, so far as human reason can foresee, no difficulty as to the working of it. The opinion of the operators in Toronto, who watched the signals from Chicago to Quebec, was, that if the distance had been twice as great, the electric fluid would have bounded over it as quickly—i. e., literally in less than no time," as the signals leaving Quebec at 10¾ P. M. would reach Chicago about 9¾ P. M.—Chicago time being about one hour slower than Quebec."

Murder in a Whisky-Shop.

From the Public Tribune.

On the evening of the 16th inst., a man named WILLIAM FRENCH was killed at a whisky grocery in Paulding, Miss., by one JOSIAH H. LONG. The following particulars we extract from a letter written in Paulding on the 17th inst.:—"Our town was the scene of much confusion and excitement yesterday (Saturday) evening, in consequence of the death of WILLIAM FRENCH, which was caused by JOSIAH H. LONG, who stabbed him on the gallery at CANDIFF'S grocery. They had been drinking together, and got into a quarrel about some trivial matter. LONG stated something in relation to French, which FRENCH pronounced to be a lie; whereupon LONG picked up a chair and attempted to strike FRENCH with it, but was prevented from so doing by the interference of those present. He then made another assertion similar to the first, and FRENCH replied that he was a d——d liar.

LONG immediately struck him in the face with his fist and knocked him down; after which LONG went back into the grocery, and FRENCH left the place. About fifteen minutes afterwards, FRENCH returned, and endeavored to enter the house, but was prevented by Mr. CANDIFF. FRENCH then remarked that LONG had knocked him down without any cause or provocation. LONG asked him what he intended to do, and he replied that he intended to defend himself. Angry words ensued, and LONG drew a bowie knife and struck French with it in the abdomen. FRENCH fell back on the ground, and exclaimed, "Oh, I'm dead man." The crowd rushed towards him, and on examination, it was found that he was dangerously cut. Meanwhile, LONG effected his escape. Warrants were issued, and every house in town was searched, but LONG could not be found.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

BULLETIN OF NEW BOOKS,

PUBLISHED BY D. APPLETON & CO., 346 AND 348 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

I.

THE LIFE OF CHARLOTTE BRONTE.

Author of "Jane Eyre," "Shirley," "Villette," &c.

BY MRS. GASKELL,

Author of "Mary Barton," "Ruth," "North and South."

With a portrait of Miss Bronté, a view of Haworth Church and Parsonage, and fac simile of handwriting of Miss Bronté. In two volumes, 12mo. Cloth, $1 50.

WHAT THE PRESS SAY OF IT.

From the Newark Daily Advertiser.

The reputation of both the biographer and the subject add assurance that the reader will be well rewarded.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser.

We need not praise this book. It will find its own way in the world, as all remarkable books do.

From the New York Tribune.

The story of Charlotte Bronté is more touching in its truthful simplicity, than the mimic pathos of romance.

From the Athenæum.

The story of a woman's life, told as it is in this book, is calculated to make the old feel young and the young old. * * By all this book will be read with interest. * * Mrs. Gaskell has produced one of the best biographies of a woman which we can recall to mind.

From the London Times.

It is rarely that we find a portrait of literary character with such a remarkable setting, and as rare to find an author whose works are so popular, so vivid, and distinctive, and whose personal history was so utterly unknown.

II.

DYNEVOR TERRACE, OR, THE CLUE OF LIFE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF THE "HEIR OF REDCLYFFE."

2 Vols. 12mo. Cloth $1 50.

Extract from a review of "The Heir of Redclyffe," and "Heartsease," in the North American Review for April

"The first of her writings which made a sensation here was the 'Heir,' and what a sensation it was! Referring to the remains of the tear-washed covers of the copy aforesaid, we find it belonged to the 'eighth thousand.' How many thousands have been issued since by the publishers to supply the demand for new, and the places of drowned, dissolved, or swept away old copies, we do not attempt to conjecture. Not individuals merely, but households—consisting in great part of tender-hearted young damsels—were plunged into mourning. With a tolerable acquaintance with fictitious heroes, (not to speak of real ones,) from Sir Charles Grandison down to the nursery lady Carlton, we have little hesitation in pronouncing Sir Guy Morville, of Redclyffe, Baronet, the most admirable one we ever met with in story or out. The glorious, joyous boy, the brilliant, ardent child of genius and of fortune, crowned with the beauty of his early holiness, and overshadowed with the darkness of his hereditary gloom, and the soft and touching sadness of his early death—what a cautious is here! What a vision!"

III.

THINGS NOT GENERALLY KNOWN.

A popular Hand-book of Facts not readily accessible in Literature, History and Science.

EDITED BY DAVID A. WELLS.

CONTENTS: Part I.—Language, Literature and Books. Part II.—Customs, Manners and Laws. Part III.—History, Geography and Statistics. Part IV.—Physical Science. Part V.—Natural Sciences. Part VI.—Arts and Manufactures.

The general idea of the work will be gathered from its title, and from a glance at its contents. It contains many little items of information, gathered from the broad fields of literature, history, and science, which are not contained in Encyclopedias and ordinary books of reference, and which are readily found when sought. In the department of the Physical and Natural Sciences, moreover, are contained many interesting results of modern research, of too recent date to have found a place in ordinary scientific treatises. In a word, while this volume has little claim to a strictly scientific character, it is believed that it will be found at once useful, interesting, and familiarly instructive.

A NEW BOOK OF NOVELTY, ELEGANCE, AND INTEREST.

A CHARMING STORY FOR LADIES.

Will be published TO-DAY, (May 30,

EROS AND ANTEROS.

OR, THE BACHELOR'S WARD.

12mo, elegantly bound in cloth. 360 pages. Price $1.

(What a critic says:)

"The title of this book suggests its character. Love, pure and simple, has gone somewhat out of fashion, as a couple of romance, and "young people" have deplored the innovation which came in with heroines not strictly beautiful, and other originalities by no means fascinating or pleasing. EROS AND ANTEROS will be

it will be extensively read and praised, especially by ladies; it is a story of strong interest in which the element of affection is predominant. Like D'Israeli's best works, love, intense and wrestling love, forms the centre of the story, round which living and acting figures are but the materials which fill out the picture. Such a novel opens a delight ful prospect, and whether we envy the of Walsingham, or admire and cling to the simple and loving Viola, the interests and sympathies of the reader are fastened; charmed by the beauty and delicacy of language; elevated by the moral earnestness of purpose, and allured through chapter after chapter, by the exquisite poetry of imagination."

☞ This work has been perpared with the utmost care, and we shall present a production of a delicate and refined mind, which will insure, without doubt, the sympathies and interests of ever lover of graceful prose.

Booksellers and others should order at once from the Publishers.

Copies of this book will be sent by mail, postage paid, to any part of the United States, on the receipt of the price, $1.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A collision has occurred between the Stste and the United States anthorities in Ohio. The trouble grew out of the arrest by the Deputy United States Marshal of four persons charged with harboring fugitive slaves at Mechanicsburg, in Champaign county. An attempt was made on the part of the citizens to detain the prisoners by means of a writ of habeas corpus, bnt the latter were taken out of the county before the writ could be served. Another was then procured in Green county, which was served by the Sheriff, backed by a large body of citizens. After considerable resistance, in which several shots were exchanged, the Marshal and his assistants were overpowered and conveyed as prisoners to Springfield, where they are to be tried for resisting the Sheriff in the discharge of his dnty.

It is confidedtly asserted hy the friends of Gen. WALKER, in New-Orleans, as we learn by telegraph, that he will go back to Nicaragua in from thirty to seventy days, with plenty of men and means. One of our Washington Correspondents also states that private dispatches have been received in that city to the same purport.

Our Special Washington Correspondent telegraphe that the Consular appointments have all certainly heen made, though the names of the successful applicants have not yet transpired. The Utah Governorship has also at last been disposed of, bnt who has accepted this great responsibility does not yet appear.

By the British hark Pearl we havo Turk's Island papers to May 16. Rain had fallen, bnt did not do so much damage as was anticipsted. Several cargoes of salt had since been gathered at Turk's Island and the neighboring islands, and the pans were again making. The stock throughout the colony was about 270,000 bushels. Price 9@10 cts.

The steamship Ariel, from Bremen, viâ Southampton, on the 16th inst., arrived yesterday. Her advices are not so late as those brought by the Arabia.

The Kansas Aid Resolntions of the Massschusetts Legislature were, yesterday, vetoed by Governor GARDNER. The House attempted to pass the resolntions over the veto, hnt failed for want of a two-thirds vote.

A meeting of those opposed to the laws passed by the late Legislature was held last eveuing, at National Hall. The speakers were: THEODORE E. TOMLINSON, ARTHUR WOOD, Alderman COULTER, CONRAD SWACKHAMER, JOHN CREIGHTON, and ANDREW JACKSON PLUM, who favored the organization of a company, to be called the "Citizen Volunteers," and called on the people to stand by their chartered rights, at the point of the bayonet, if necessary. There were about 500 in attendance.

The trial of the four seamen of the brig General Pierce for the murder of CHARLES GROVER, the cook of that vessel, on the high seas on Feb. 10th, took place yesterday in the United States Circuit Court. It will be remembered that the same men were tried at the commencement of the present week for the murder of Captain LAWSON of the same ship, when the Jury after consulting for several hours, returned a verdict for manslaughter in the first degree. Yesterday the Jury took several hours to deliberate, bnt late at night found the prisoner SMITH guilty of murder, and the rest guilty of manslaughter in the first degree.

There was a stormy time at the Board of Councilmen last evening, on occasion of amending and finally passing the Police Ordinance. Of course, the large majority had it their own way. Personalities were exchanged between Councilmen WAUGH and ROEHMER, and the dirty streets passed over to Inspector MORTON for cleansing forthwith, at the City's expense.

The twenty-five Policemen granted by the Quarantine Commissioners to protect the buildings about to be erected at Seguine's Point, will, it is likely, not be sent there. They were to go on condition that the State pay the bill, hut yesterday the Comptroller of the State notified the Commissioners that it could not be legally done. More difficulty ahead, and better prospects than ever of yellow fever.

Mr. ROBERT D. HOLMES, a lawyer, was yesterday appointed Excise Commissioner. He has accepted the appointment and will be sworn into office to-day. Commissioner KERR is very ill and it is doubtful whether he recovers.

Mr. MORTON has entered npon his promised work of street cleaning in earnest. Yesterday he had as large a force of men and carts as he could raise in the First and Second Wards carting away the ashes and garbage.

Abont one-half of the ancient hurying grounds of St. George's Chapel in Beekman-street, has to be removed in widening Cliff-street. The exhuming of the remains of seven old family vaults, in good preservation, was concluded yesterday.

A negro was shot—it is thought dangerously—during a fight, last night, in a notorious dance-house in Baxter-street. He was conveyed to the Hospital.

The Fallen Fillibnster.

The people of New-Orleans are enacting a pitiful parody npon the prond and generous words of the stoical hero of Utica. If the strong heart of CATO olnng to the conquered cause in the face of fortune smiling on the conquerer, it was because justice and the right were with the vanquished hosts of liberty. But the indefeasible sympathies which were so noble and so honorable in the Roman, become ridiculous—a worse than ridiculous—when they are lavished upon a hateful mockery of greatness, gallantry and heroism.

We have never indulged in any indiscriminate abuse of the adventurous ambition which it is so easy to brand with the infamous name of "fillibusterism." We have never been blind to the fact that the instinct which leads the people of the country to hail any manifestation by American enterprise, in another country and beneath a foreign flag, of the splendid qualities to which we owe our own National independence, growth and glory, is a passion of the race which cannot die out of the popular heart till the Future of the Anglo-American Repnblic shall have lost its brightest promises and its most stable assurance. We have never seen and we do not now see how it is possible for any true lover of his kind, for any practical philanthropist, or any sensible economist, to question the enormous advantages which must result to the world at large, from an infusion into the more torpid and stagnant life of the Spanish-American States of the brisk and aspiring vitality npon which we of the Northern Empire so ostentatiously pride ourselves. And when we heard of the descent which WILLIAM WALKER had made into the arena of Nicaraguan civil war, we were more than willing to believe that his career would be as successful as his opportunities certainly were brilliant and inviting. We put aside at once the unpleasant prepossessions excited by his known antecedents, and the not less unpleasant anticipations engendered by the manœuvering of the rival mercantile companies, in whose ignoble conflicts it seemed almost inevitable that he must soon become involved.

We endeavored to regard him as the destined deliverer of a people quite incompetent to deliver themselves from the imbecilities and the deviltries of faction and internecine strife. We looked upon Nicaragua as a nation needing his strength to revive her weakness, his high ambition to inspire her sluggish temper, his loyalty to liberty and law to correct her intemperate ignorance of the principles of freedom and of polity.

Had WILLIAM WALKER proved himself to be what all decent people who tolerated his first proceedings encouraged themselves to snppose him, it would not be easy for us to measure the sympathy which Americans shall extend to him in the honr of his reign. Had he failed in the pnrposes which it was so loudly proclaimed that he cherished, the voice of New-York would rise over the voice of New-Orleans in lamentation over the downfall of his anthority, and in exultation over the safety of his person.

But how different has been his history from the dreams which were dreamed of him!

While the people of New-Orleans are wasting their time, their money, and their good name upon the refugee Chieftain, his followers, basely abandoned to their fate, are dependent upon the victorious government of his enemy for present subsistence, and for the hope of return to their native land. The American flag which sheltered the defeated adventurer from the just indignation of his magnanimous opponents, was insulted by his vituperation of the American Government, whose allegiance he had thrown off in the hour of his prosperity, only to abuse its protection in the hour of his reverses. The darkest intimations which have yet been given of the conduct of WILLIAM WALKER during the latter days of his stay at Rivas, will soon be fully borne ont and amplified by the revelations which we have a right to expect from the laudreds of sick, suffering, and penniless Americans left by him in Costa Rica, for whose safe transmission to this country the Administration of President Mora is now engaged in making the necessary arrangements. It will be well for the enthusiasts of New-Orleans to mitigate the tempest of their pæans until the voices of these redeemed followers of the Chieftain they are so hasty in hailing can be mingled in their chorus. When the facts of the fillibustering experience of WILLIAM WALKER shall be fully and fairly set before the public, it will be easy to discern by whom the beautiful dream was blindly worshipped, and by whom the hideous reality was knowingly embraced. In that day of the popular judgment we confidently anticipate that the great body of the American people, of all parties and creeds, will rapidly clear themselves of the imputation which such inconsiderate proceedings as these of the citizens of New-Orleans are but too well calculated to bring upon us.

It is not difficult to understand the share which our Government has taken in the evasion of the incompetent PIZARRO, who fairly turned the commander of the St. Mary's out of his own cabin by his conduct and his language. Foreseeing the inevitable discomfiture of WALKER, the Administration has for some time been anxious to get him out of the way as smoothly and as rapidly as possible. Humanity and policy combined to make this desirable, and if the New-Orleans people must have a hero, we beg leave to commend to them the Costa Rican General who had the good sense to second the wishes of President BUCHANAN in disposing of a personage who greatly cursed the country he had invaded, and did small credit to the country from which he came.

The Isthmian Ship Canal.

The Secretary of the Navy has ordered the Arctic to carry a party of engineers to the Isthmus to survey the Atrato and Truando Rivers route for a ship canal, in accordance with the authority delegated to him by Congress at its last session. This promptness on the part of Mr. TOUCEY does him credit, and evinces an enterprising appreciation of the vast interests of commerce locked up in the snbject of an interoceanic ship canal. This expedition, if carried out under the auspices of a discreet and careful leader, will settle definitely whether the Atrato and Truando can be availed of for the desired purpose, and if so at what probable cost. The parties who project this enterprise estimate its cost at $145,000,000, and its saving to commerce at a snm equal to six per cent. on five times that amount. If these data prove reliable, immense as is the cost of the proposed undertaking, capital enough and enterprise enough will be found in the countries expected to derive benefit therefrom, to carry it through, unless some equally available and cheaper route shall be discovered.

But this single examination of the Atrato route will be insufficient to definitely determine capital to engage in the construction of the work. Not only must a route be proved practicable in order to command success, but it must be shown to be the most favorable route which can be found. It is important, therefore, that a general reconnaissance of the Isthmus of Darien should be made, and, if possible by a Commission, under the joint auspices of England, France and the United States. If the Atrato expedition is successful, the fact will encourage and stimulate the more general survey,—and to that end it is opportune. Meantime, we have reason to believe there are other routes quite as practicable and less expensive. Colonel TOTTEN, the energetic and able Engineer of the Panama Railroad Company, has made a very perfect map of the Isthmus, on which he has delineated the line of a proposed Ship Canal, which he estimates can be constructed for one-fourth the snm the Atrato route will require. If we remember aright, the highest grade of the Railroad in crossing is considerably under two hundred feet above the mean level of the two oceans,—a fact which, of itself, goes far to establish the practicability of a Canal in the same region.

The interesting details of Dr. CALDWELL'S expedition, communicated in our Panama correspondence published yesterday, confirm the opinion that the route of GISBORNE and CULLEN, to which we have heretofore adverted, presents great advantages. Here we have at least three routes challenging careful examination and comparison. Colonel TOTTEN'S well-known enterprise may be relied upon for an elaborate elucidation of his project in good time. Secretary TOUCEY has already initiated steps to test the Atrato estimates—and if he can now find it within the line of his duty to authorize Dr. CALDWELL to make thorough exploration of the route from Port Escoses on the Pacific viâ the Savanna river, we shall have a basis for future operations, well calculated to stimulate further inquiry by capitalists, and so to provoke the thorough examination of the entire subject, indispensably prerequisite to the practical development of the enterprise itself.

THE FIRST PASSAGE OF THE UNITED STATES STEAMSHIP NIAGARA.—It was peculiarly unfortunate that the first passage of the Niagara across the Atlantic should have been attended by a number of petty accidents which prevented the sailing qualities of that noble ship from being thoroughly tested. Bnt Uncle Sam is always unfortunate in the details of all his great undertakings, though in this respect he is not much worse off than that respectable old gentleman, John Bull, from whom he is descended. Any ordinary merchant can build a ship and send her to sea with a certainty that everything on board of her will be all right. Bnt let the great and mighty Government of the United States attempt to do the same thing and it will not only cost twice the money it would have cost a private individual, but it will consume double the time, and then not be half so well done. We built one of the largest war steamers in the world, on the finest model, and fitted her out on an international expedition regardless of expense. The whole country was on the tip-toe of expectation awaiting the intelligence of her arrival in England, confident that she would beat every other vessel afloat; and the first news we hear of her is, that she was nearly twice as long in crossing the Atlantic as an ordinary steamer; and the consequence of this long passage was owing to no fault in the ship, nor in her engines, but in the worthlessness of her spars, and the insecurity of her rigging. What a comment is this upon Government workmon. When the Niagara was first getting under way in our harbor, the head of one of the cylinders burst, and she was detained a week while a new one was being made. She started on a trial trip of two days, and a gentle wind carried away her foretopgallant mast; she had hardly got to sea when she carried away her mizzentopgallant mast; then the gaff of her spanker came down by the run, nearly killing two men, in consequence of defective iron fastenings, and the first smart gale proved that the iron fastenings of the standing rigging could not be relied upon, one of the few swifters having parted. So that it was necessary to be extremely cautious about carrying sail. The consequence was, that, instead of running across the Atlantic in ten or twelve days, she took nearly eighteen, about the average passage of a Liverpool liner. Notwithstanding all these annoying accidents, which we trust the Secretary of the Navy will make the snbject of an investigation, so that the blame may be placed where it belongs, the Niagara is pronounced by her officers a great success.

The letters which we publish this morning from officers on board of her, speak of her qualities, as a sea boat, in the highest terms. But we shall have to wait until after she comes from her present voyage, and has been newly sparred, before her sailing capacities can be properly tested.

THE JUDGES AND THE STATE CONSTITUTION.—In noticing Judge ROOSEVELT'S opinion upon the new Police Law a day or two since, we stated that he had evidently based his conclusions on one important point, upon an incorrect version of the section of the State Constitution referred to. The Judge uses the following language:—

"The Constitution does not say or intend that all officers whose offices may thereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people or appointed as the Legislature may direct—but all officers 'other' than county, City, town and village officers, and 'other' than the specially enumerated State officers."

It is a little remarkable that Judge MITCHELL argues the point upon the same basis,—snpposing that the language of the Constitution is accurately given in the Legislative manual. In the argument of this case before the Court, Mr. D. D. FIELD stated that the word "other," as quoted by Judge ROOSEVELT, is not found in the official draft of the Constitution, which is on file in the State Department, and that the Constitution does therefore say precisely what Judge ROOSEVELT says it does not.

As this is a point of some importance, we applied at the office of the Secretary of State for a certified copy of the section of the Constitution referred to,—and have received the following certificate from the Depnty Secretary of State:

"ARTICLE 10, Section 2: All county officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, shall be elected by the electors of the respective counties, or appointed by the Boards of Supervisors, or other County authorities, as the Legislature shall direct. All City, town and village officers, whose election or appointment, is not provided for by this Constitution, shall be elected by the electors of such cities, towns and villages, or of some division thereof, or appointed by such authorities thereof, as the Legislature shall designate for that purpose. All other officers, whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all officers whose offices may hereafter be created by Law, shall be elected by the People, or appointed, as the Legislature may direct."

STATE OF NEW-YORK, SECRETARY'S OFFICE.

I have compared the preceding with the original Section 2, of Article 10 of the Constitution of the State of New-York on file in this office, and do certify that it is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of such original section.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal, this 27th day of May in the year of our Lord 1857.

L. S. N. P. STANTON, Dep. Sec. of State.

RAISING THE PRICE OF BOARD AT HOTELS.—A late meeting of the proprietors of the leading Broadway Hotels was adjourned to Thursday evening at the St. Nicholas—the object, to consult as to the expediency of raising the present tariff of prices. The proprietors of the St. Nicholas, the New-York and Clarendon were the only parties present. Letters were read from the proprietors of several other hotels announcing their inability to attend, whereupon an adjournment was voted, subject to the call of Mr. TREADWELL.

It was stated by one of the parties present, that, unless the proprietors of all the most influential Broadway Hotels united in raising their prices the present scheme would be abandoned. When, three summers ago, the St. Nicholas, the New-York and the Astor raised to $3 a day, the number of their customers fell off wonderfully, and they had to come back to the previous price in three weeks time. In this instance, the Metropolitan and other hotels who made no change in their prices were the parties benefited. It is proposed to allow no such benefits again, and hence, if the projected change cannot be made general it will not be made at all.

FIGHT IN A SIXTH WARD DANCE-HOUSE—A MAN SHOT.—A desperate fight occurred, about 12 o'clock last night, in the notorious "Pete Williams' dance-house, in Baxter-street. Pistols and knives were freely used, and one man, a negro, was so badly shot that it was thought he could not long survive. The wounded man was conveyed to the New-York Hospital. No arrests were made.

The Fillibustering Career of William Walker.

The name of WILLIAM WALKER is, by this time, as widely known as that of any other living man in the Old World or in the New. Many have heard his name to execrate, and many to extol his achievements. All, perhaps, will consent to rank him as the greatest fillibuster of the present age—equal to any fillihuster of the past, with this difference, that in former times people encouraged and justified, while now they condemn the practice of fillibusterism. But this difference is immense, and leads naturally to most opposite results: for in popular support or disapprobation lies the secret of a fillibuster's success or failure. No man, in an invasion of a weak distracted country, was ever more favored by chance than was WILLIAM WALKER during the first few months of his reign in Nicaragua. He had the prestige of being a skillful general and a sagacious politician; he had at his command any quantity of men and means; and his personal popularity, among both natives and Americans, was great. Yet all these advantages were successively lost and, having sacrificed to his ambition over five thousand of his own countrymen, he has been obliged to fly from the wrath of the people whom he has so misgoverned and betrayed. Since, then, the fillibustering career of WILLIAM WALKER may be considered, for the present at least, as at an end, a brief review of its principal features may not be uninteresting to the general reader.

It was not till the year 1853 that WILLIAM WALKER, then twenty-nine years of age, organized his first fillibustering expedition. Sonora the fairest Province of Northern Mexico, was the territory at that time to be invaded. The expedition was set on foot in San Francisco, and its first attempt to leave that city was prevented by the Government; but in the month of October the party finally set sail in the hark Caroline, and landed on the 3d of November at La Paz, in Lower California. WALKER'S first act was to declare Lower California a Republic, independent of Mexico, and himself its president. La Paz was captured without much difficulty, and the Governor and other Mexican officials were placed on board the Caroline, and removed. After this coup d'etat, WALKER "annexed" the State of Sonora by a decree, and then awaited reinforcements from California ere he proceeded to carry ont further his projects of invasion. On the 20th of March, 1854, WALKER left San Vicinto—which, for some months previous, he had made his head-quarters—for Sonora. In this expedition, his luck seems to have wholly left him. After he had crossed the Colorado, his men deserted to such an extent, and his means were so totally exhausted, that he was compelled, with a few half-starved, half-naked followers, to retrace his steps. The whole expedition was thus broken up, and WALKER, harassed by Mexican cavalry, surrendered to United States troops, giving his parole of honor to answer for his violation of the Neutrality laws. Upon this charge, after his return to San Francisco, he was arraigned, tried, and acquitted, before the United States District Court.

In San Francisco, WALKER again resumed his editorial profession, but he was not destined to remain long in the occupation of such a peaceful pursuit. He was too covetous of power, and his eyes were now turned towards Central America. The scheme was a long time ripening, and it was not till the 4th of May, 1855, that WALKER, with the advance of his Nicaraguan expedition, consisting of sixty-two men, finally left San Francisco in the Vesta.

The Republic of Nicaragua, at this time, was in a state of anarchy. The treasury was exhausted, and the country ruined by a succession of conflicts between the Servile and the Democratic parties. WALKER had been invited by the latter to assist them in regaining their predominance in the State. He accepted the invitation, and arrived in the Vesta at Realejo on the 11th of June, 1855. He proceeded at once to Leon, the capital, and there received orders to march against Rivas. In the expedition he took 58 of his own men, now incorporated in the Nicaraguan army, and 100 native troops. With this force he embarked at Realejo, and landed at Agua Callito, a short distance from San Juan del Sur. On arriving near Rivas, he encountered the enemy, some 500 strong. A desperate fight ensued, in the midst of which the native force deserted WALKER, and he was finally compelled to retreat with great loss. He reached the coast, and returned once more to Realejo.

Some time now elapsed, after which the Americans under WALKER were again commissioned by the Democratic leaders to make an attempt against the Southern Department of Nicaragua. The first battle took place at Rivas on the 2d of September, and the Serviles were completely routed. General WALKER, in this action, had 58 Americans and 120 natives under his command. After the victory they returned to San Juan del Sur. WALKER here began to receive recruits from California, and here, too, he planned the capture of Granada, which was subsequently carried out with complete success.

On the 10th of October WALKER commenced his march for Virgin Bay. Arrived there the next morning, he embarked his force on board the Virgin, and steamed up the lake towards Granada. The party landed that night at a point about four miles northeast of the city. It was dark, and silently the force moved along. The city was completely taken by surprise, and though General WALKER, having left the natives troops behind, had only 110 men, he captured Granada and took from 300 to 400 prisoners, with a loss to himself of only 10 men.

After these events, WALKER took up his residence at Granada, organized his forces, and concluded a treaty of peace with PONCIANO CORRAL, General-in-Chief of the Nicaraguan Army. By this treaty, dated the 23d of October, 1855, PATRICIO RIVAS was named Provisional President, and WALKER, General-in-Chief of the Army of the Republic. It was only two weeks after this that the unfortunate CORRAL, accused of being implicated in a conspiracy to overthrow the Government, was tried by a court-martial, found guilty of treason, and shot.

WALKER was now at the height of his power. He had received large reinforcements from California and the Northern States—his army numbering about 1,000 men. To strengthen his position, he appointed Col. PARKER H. FRENCH as Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States. Our Government refused to recognize Col. FRENCH, and while that personage was in New-York, in January, 1856, he was arrested on a charge of enlisting soldiers for Nicaraguan service. This treatment of its accredited Minister roused the ire of the Nicaraguan Government, and on the 22d of January a decree was issued suspending diplomatic relations with the United States. The example of the United States, in refusing to recognize the new Government, was immediately followed by Guatemala, Honduras, and Costa Rica. The last mentioned State, in particular, refused to hold any communication with Nicaragua, and expelled her Commissioner, LOMIS SCHLESSINGER, from the Republic. This step, which took place in February, 1856, was promptly followed by a declaration of war from Gen. WALKER.

At this time WALKER made another effort to establish diplomatic relations with the United States, and believing that personal considerations influenced our Government in its rejection of PARKER H. FRENCH, he selected Padre VIJIL as a fit representative of Nicaragua in Washington. The Padre arrived here in May, and though he succeeded in obtaining a recognition, he was but coldly received, and finally returned to Central America, having secured little by his mission.

The war with Costa Rica, in the meantime, had been commenced in earnest. Costa Rica took the initiative, and a Nicaraguan force of 200 men, under SCHLESSINGER, were dispatched to Guanacaste to meet the enemy. On the 20th of March the Nicaraguan troops having occupied, on the day previous, a hacienda called Santa Rosa, were attacked by the Costa Ricans and defeated. The defeat has been variously attributed to the cowardice and treachery of SCHLESSINGER. Be this as it may, he shortly afterwards deserted the service, and for this offence, as well as for neglect of duty and cowardice, he was proved guilty by a court-martial.

On the 7th of April, the Costa Ricans took undisputed possession of Rivas. When this was known at Granada WALKER immediately put himself at the head of 600 men and advanced to give them battle. The attack, which took place on the 11th of April, and is known as the second battle of Rivas, resulted in the rout of the Costa Ricans, who, after suffering great loss, were compelled to retreat from the position they occupied. Cholera at this time made great havoc among the Costa Ricans, and shortly after the battle of Rivas they evacuated Nicaraguan territory and returned home.

The quarrel between President RIVAS and WALKER, which ended in the former's flight from Granada, occurred about this time. On the 20th of June, 1856, WALKER issued a proclamation declaring the Provisional Government no longer worthy of existence. He accordingly announced its dissolution, and organized a new Provisional Government of which he himself was elected President. On the 24th of the same month, President RIVAS fled to Leon with the whole of his Cabinet except DON FERMIN FERRER, and there he entered into an alliance with the other Central American States to wage war against WALKER and drive him from the country.

In the latter end of August, Señor SALIZAR, one of the Ministers of President RIVAS, was captured and brought prisoner to Granada. He was charged with treason and conspiracy to overthrow the Government, and, without trial, was shot in the public plaza. To this act, perhaps, more than to any other in particular, may be traced the causes of the decline of WALKER'S power in Nicaragua, which now commenced. The murder, for so it was called, of a man so universally esteemed as SALIZAR excited the wrath of the entire native population, and estranged them from WALKER'S cause, and while he was thus creating enemies for himself in the country of his adoption, his revocation of the Transit Company's Charter and the confiscation of their property raised up against him another class of enemies which contributed greatly to the consummation of his ruin.

President RIVAS did not remain inactive at Leon. With large reinforcements arriving from San Salvador and Guatemala he prepared for a campaign as soon as the rainy season should be over. It is somewhat surprising that Gen. WALKER should have allowed his enemies to take the initiative, and that he should not have prepared for war until he received intelligence that a large body of men had advanced upon Massaya. This, however, roused him to action. On the 12th of October, he left Granada, and engaged the enemy near Massaya. While in the act, he learnt that a large force of Guatemaleans had attacked Granada in his absence, and thither he was at once compelled to return. The battle then and there fought resulted in the complete discomfiture of the Guatemaleans.

But they were not discouraged. On the contrary, a real enthusiasm for the crusade against WALKER seems to have been at this time engendered among the people of Central America. They voted money with the utmost liberality, and men were not wanting to take up arms in such a cause. The alliance among the various Central American States against the fillibusters was complete. During the latter end of October and beginning of November several conflicts took place with varying success. The most formidable enemies of WALKER from this time were the Costa Ricans. They pressed him so closely that he was compelled to abandon Granada, which he first destroyed. Rivas then became his head-quarters. This occurred in November, 1856, and though the fillibusters remained in Rivas for six months after, their power then was virtually overturned WALKER from this time ceased to receive reinforcements of any consequence; and every skirmish, whether victorious or not, was to him a dead loss. The policy pursued by his enemies was to allow disease, suffering and want to do the work of death.

After the destruction of Granada, the next step taken by the Costa Ricans was the seizure of the Transit. The idea was ably conceived and was as ably executed. It completely divided the fillibuster force on the San Juan from that under the immediate command of WALKER at Rivas, and cut off his supplies from the Atlantic States. The force on the San Juan, under Col. LOCKRIDGE, attempted to retake the river, but the forts and defences were too impregnable, and they abandoned the enterprise without striking a blow. The fillibusters who had been under LOCKRIDGE'S command, and numbered some two hundred, returned en masse to the United States.

Public attention was now centred on the Chief himself, who remained shut up in Rivas with the Central American Allies gradually closing their lines around him. He made many desperate efforts to relieve himself. The accounts of divers battles fought, in which both he and his men displayed the most daring courage and determination, are too fresh in the minds of our readers to need recapitulation here. But the destruction of the fillibusters, destitute as they were of provisions, and with no chance of reinforcements, was inevitable. They held on, nevertheless, with miraculous tenacity, until, on the 1st of May instant, after being reduced to one-tenth of their original number, and in a state of literal starvation, they were released from their prison in Rivas by the capitulation of WALKER to the commander of the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's.

Gen. WALKER had, perhaps, as good a chance of success as any man of ability and energy could ever wish to have. He has had chances which, in all human probability, he will never have again. In his last general order he attributes the causes of his failure to "the cowardice of some, the incapacity of others, and the treachery of many;" but these are obstacles which, in the natural course of things, he should have expected—which he should have been prepared to conquer, or else he never should have undertaken his Nicaraguan expedition. A candid and impartial judge, who will calmly examine the leading points in WM. WALKER'S career, can come to no other conclusion than that it is chiefly marked by a series of egregious blunders. We offer no opinion as to the morality or immorality of his enterprises: we speak solely of his ability to achieve the successes after which he aimed. His ruling passion is personal ambition and the possession of power, and that passion has been his greatest enemy. His better qualities are courage and perseverance, and by these he retained his foothold on Nicaragua soil long after his cause was hopelessly lost. His total want of judgment is to be remarked in all his movements—both in the Sonora and in the Nicaraguan expeditions. His battles were won—not by sagacious generalship, but by the furious, reckless courage and devotion of his men. Every victory, after WALKER'S quarrel with President RIVAS, was to him an irretrievable loss. His reinforcements were stopped, and yet he sacrificed his men with the most deliberate recklessness. He alienated from himself the native population, when with the least ingenuity he might have bound them to his cause and triumphed over the united opposition of Central America. He made many fatal mistakes, and his temporary successes were effected rather by the weakness of his enemies than by his own strength. We do not suppose that he will ever regain the confidence even of his admirers. He is now but an unsuccessful fillibuster, and, being unsuccessful, he has inflicted a world of misery upon the country over which for the last two years he has ruled with dictatorial sway, and which he has ravaged with fire and sword.

Musical.

THE AMERICAN MUSIC ASSOCIATION gave its last concert of the second season last night, to a good audience, at Dodworth's Saloon. The programme figured up nearly a dozen pieces, all written in this country, and all of full average merit. Considering that the gentlemen who write for this Association have no kind of hope that their productions will ever produce them any material benefit, it is in the highest degree satisfactory to find that a pure enthusiasm for art leads them to such efforts. The American Music Association does direct and positive good in laying these works before the public. The following artists assisted: Miss SIMON, Mrs. CRUMP, Mr. BEEN, Mr. KING, Mr. EBEN, Mr. J. A. JOHNSON, and Dr. CHAS. GUILMETTE.

BENEFIT.—Mrs. HOEY, a lady who combines grace, elegance and talent in just and beautiful proportions, takes her annual benefit to-night. To the majority it is, of course, perfectly unimportant what is played on such an occasion; the opportunity of complimenting a worthy and esteemed lady being the attraction. Baser minds will be gratified to hear that the comedy of "The Wonder," and the musical burlesque of "Jenny Lind," will be performed. In the latter, Mrs. MARY SHAW, a sister of Mrs. HOEY, will appear.

Obituary.

Lieut. ISAAC G. STRAIN, U. S. N., died at Aspinwall on the 15th inst., whither he went to report himself for duty on board the Cyane. His death is a serious loss to the service and to science. He was widely known as the leader of the expedition to Darien. Lieut. STRAIN was a native of Pennsylvania, and was born, we believe, in Lancaster. From an early age he panted for adventure. While yet a midshipman, he obtained leave to explore the interior of Brazil, and in company with a small party, explored the interior of the province of San Paulo, tracing the courses of the Rivers Tieté and Paranapanema, nearly to their confluence with the Paraná. In 1848 he explored the Peninsula of Lower California. In 1849, returning from the Pacific, he crossed the continent from Valparaiso to Buenos Ayres, and wrote a narrative entitled "The Cordillera and Pampas." Soon after this he was attached to the Mexican Boundary Commission. An African cruise followed his return from Mexico, and not long after we find him leading the fatal expedition across the isthmus of Darien, misled by the fallacious reports of the English engineer, GISBORNE, who never saw the route he pretended to describe, and which cost so many valuable lives, and, in effect, undermined the health and has now caused the death of the heroic leader. Rallying from the immediate effects of the mental and physical hardships of that adventure, he accompanied Lieut BERRYMAN, second in command, in the late voyage of the United States steamer Arctic to sound the course of the Atlantic telegraph. This was his last public service.

MORE QUARANTINE TROUBLE.—It will be remembered that upon the requisition of the Quarantine Commissioners, the Metropolitan Police granted 25 men to protect the shanties about to be erected at Seguine's Point, on condition that the State pay the bill. The Comptroller of the State telegraphed, yesterday, as the 25 men were about to depart to Seguine's Point, that the State could not, legally, pay the expense under the Quarantine act. Upon the strength of this decision it is rumored that the Commissioners are about to apply to the Governor for military protection at that place.

The Counterfeiter, Seducer and Assassin!

[The following revelation is founded on facts which would long since have been published, were it not for the risk of casting suspicion on the really innocent. The disclosures of a well-known counterfeiter, who was recently arrested in this city, form its basis the names only being fictitious. Although published in the shape of a romance, its truthfulness will be apparent to tens of thousands of readers, who will be able to distinguish the characters illustrated.]

ROSE MYRTLEFIELD;

OR, THE COUNTERFEITER'S PLOT.

A TALE OF LOVE, MYSTERY AND CRIME.

CHAPTER I.

THE TWO LOVERS—AN ANGRY INTERVIEW.

Rose Myrtlefield sat in her boudoir.

A delicate little oasis was this boudoir, in the Great Desert of a Madison-av. mansion, in the good (or evil?) City of New-York; and a lovelier girl never sat to a more enchanting boudoir.

Rose Myrtlefield was very young, fresh and beautiful; her features were regular, and set exquisitely cut, and so soft and delicately outlined that their very regularity served only to enhance their natural brilliancy; her hair was jet black, and fell in ringlets over her neck and shoulders; her eyes sparkled like diamonds, and her cheeks were tinted with that yet more interesting complexion so common among the ladies in this trying climate, before they have known the abominable stain of the rouge; her figure was full and well-proportioned, and, set off as it was by an exquisitely-fitting dress, added another link to the chain of her beauty.

She was a child of fortune, too; wherever she turned, happiness was in her path, and that, even, was gilded by luxury and wealth. Her father was once a merchant prince—dashing, yet shrewd and calculating. He died in the zenith of his prosperity, leaving to his wife and child the whole of his mammoth fortunes. Her mother, who was now beginning to fade, loved to guide Rose's fairy steps through the mazes of fashionable life, and, as age crept on, to "live again in her child."

There, then, is our heroine—there her life and prospects; and there she gracefully reclines on a fauteuil in the aforesaid boudoir.

The boudoir had at that dim, soft light which is produced by the agency of stained glass and rich curtains—a light which harmonized well with the dark, mellow color of the copies of certain superb old paintings which adorned the walls, for which as great a price was paid as would have been asked for the originals themselves. You might almost suppose on entering this apartment, that you beheld the sitting-room of an eastern princess. The sinking of the feet in the carpet—the luxurious comfort of being buried alive in a chair, the perfumed air—and last, but not least, the brilliant Venus herself, Venus—do not all these things waft the senses far away from the utilitarian city of New-York?

"Heigh-ho!" murmured Rose to herself, as she shut up the book she had been reading; "what a thing it is to be rich and fashionable! What a butt am I for the proposals of all the lazy and penniless young men in town! for the match-making propensities of mothers with marriageable sons, and for the attentions of the gentry from fashion with their titles and longer moustaches! There is that horrible Count Hulle Dale, whom I met at Mrs. Gunnybag's party—he made me sick with his quantity of oil he put on my salad; and then young Marchmont, the briefless barrister, and the most dissipated young man in our set, he must fall in love with me, and "—A blush came over Rose's face as she thought of some one else who had, she hoped, done likewise. The blush seemed to say that she did not quite roam

Yet there was a silent voice which told Rose that she was not insensible to the calm, refined and intellectual manners of Richard Molton—there was a soft palpitation around that heart when he appeared. Oh, how she scouted the idea that he was merely eyeing her fortune—how little did she believe the rumors which she had heard regarding his character—how she scorned backbiters!

The blush had vanished, and reappeared again, when the servant announced Mr. Marchmont. "Pshaw!" thought Rose, as she collected her thoughts and roused herself from her half-pleasing reverie, "what a bore this fellow is!"

The young gentlemen, who just then entered the room, was far from deserving this pettish remark; in fact many a young lady would have been delighted to receive Harry Marchmont, with his fine, manly, honest, and open-hearted countenance, his gay and dashing manners, his brilliant conversational powers, and his general air of happiness and good humor. "What if he was a little dissipated? was he not young and high-hearted, and would he not get over it when he got married and settled down? And then he was so handsome." Thus many a young lady pleaded for him before their frowning parents, when they sternly refused to allow their daughters to dance with "that young rake-shame."

The "young scape-grace" seemed, as he entered the boudoir, to be in a state of the most lively embarrassment. Rose did not deign to rise, but frigidly offered him a chair. He bowed as though he did not know what he was about, and then sat down as though the luxurious chair was a bed of nettles. For the first few minutes Harry did nothing but blush, apologize for his intrusion, and tear his kid glove. Rose must have had an instinctive feeling of what was coming, for she started up and in a determined manner exclaimed:

"Perhaps you will now be good enough, Mr. Marchmont, to explain to what extraordinary circumstance I am indebted for the honor of this call at an hour when gentlemen belonging to the legal profession are supposed to be at their business?"

"It is, I admit, an apparently early hour for a man of business, like myself, to be 'up-town,' (he had not seen a client for two months,) "but I trust to be able to explain to your entire satisfaction."

He then muttered something about having to go up town to draw up the will of a client who was on the bed of death, and wound up with an excuse for having "just dropped in as he passed."

"I trust, then," said she, "that you will not allow me to prevent you from performing this very important duty."

Harry bit his lip—he had come to tell her that he loved her, and, as yet, he had had but little encouragement. However, he determined to throw off his bashfulness and tell her, in a plain, honest, unvarnished way, how he loved her—tell her that he sought her hand, and not her fortune, that he awaited her decision, and then, if she did not love him, bear his fate like a man. And Harry Marchmont did love Rose Myrtlefield in his own noble, disinterested way: from the time when he first saw her, she had been gradually creeping around his heart, until at length she had taken complete possession of it; and his was indeed a heart well worthy of her, and well she knew it—a true, warm, gushing heart!

"Miss Myrtlefield," said he, calmly, "I am wrong when I call that business called me here. I came here purposely to see you—to tell you what has been on my tongue and in my heart for many a day. The world calls me wild and dissipated—alas! it is somewhat true. I am giddy and thoughtless, but I trust my heart is right; and I feel that I only need the society of a pure and virtuous wife, to become steady and domestic. I tell you, Miss Myrtlefield—Rose—that I love and respect you—that I adore and worship you. I care not for your fortune—I do not seek your gold—throw it away—burn the golden chaff, but give me the wheat—your love! 'Tis all I ask."

A shade of deep feeling passed over Rose's countenance. "This heart is true—this heart is true," thought she, as he buried his face in his hands, so intense were his feelings of suspense. She was deeply grieved that she should have been unwittingly the cause of so much future misery to so honest a heart as "Mr. Marchmont," said she, "I feel deeply sorry that you should have entertained such ideas concerning me. I have never, in any way, given you the slightest encouragement; and I am, therefore, compelled to inform you that your affection can never be returned. Although I respect you very much, yet I can never be yours, because,"—she hesitated—"because I—"

"You love another? Tell me, is it so?" said he.

"Yes, Harry Marchmont—I do love another."

"And that other"—said Harry, with quivering lips and blanched cheeks—"who is he?"

"You go beyond the limits of propriety, Sir," said Rose; "what you ask is my secret."

"Is it—can it be—the man I saw with you at Mrs. Gunnybags' party—Is it Richard?"

Rose started, as the question came.

The door of the boudoir opened, and the servant announced—

"Mr. Molton."

Harry stood with clenched fists, and Rose was pale as death, as the man who was so near the thoughts of each entered the boudoir.

Richard Molton was a man of from twenty-eight to thirty years of age, about the middle height, good looking, rather pale, with jet black hair and eyes; a dark moustache; a regular set of teeth; and a supremely real, yet powerfully built and wiry frame. He was always dressed with great taste: a plain black dress-coat and pantaloons; snow white linen and black cravat. He was a man on whom the eye could rest for a considerable period—there was such an air of consummate coolness about him—a kind of mystery—which excited curiosity and interest. He was pleasing in his conversation, quiet and graceful in his manners, and polite and cool even in the most ordinary matters. As he now entered the boudoir, his quick eye, at one glance, grasped the whole position of affairs.

"I beg pardon, Miss Myrtlefield," said he, "if I am interrupting a tête-à-tête. I will retire if—"

"On the contrary, Mr. Molton," said Rose, as she extended to him her hand, "Mr. Marchmont was about taking his departure." And she gave Harry a glance full of meaning.

Harry arose to go.

"Miss Myrtlefield," said he, as he was about to retire, "remember that the person of whom we were just about to speak, is not worthy of you."

He glanced towards Molton, and that individual caught his eye. As Harry left the room, Rose looked after him with a sort of sisterly kindness. She could have loved him as a brother!

"Might I ask," said Molton, as soon as Harry had departed, "whether I am acquainted with the person whom our young friend considers unworthy of you?"

Rose blushed as she felt that his eye was fixed upon her. "It is of no consequence, I assure you," she replied "whom Mr. Marchmont considers worthy or unworthy of me."

"You will pardon me if I seem to be inquiring into your secrets," he rejoined; "but I thought Mr. Marchmont might have referred to some one par [illegible] unworthy individual; and, I thought that as his opinion would be apt to weigh very strongly in your mind against such a person"—

"In such matters I take no one's opinion—I judge for myself," exclaimed she, blushing crimson.

A smile of triumph passed over Molton's countenance, as he determined to seize the opportunity, and make a bold stroke for victory.

"I am glad to hear you say that," he replied, "as I almost fancied that he alluded to me; and you know that I am one of your most devoted admirers."

The crimson on Rose's countenance changed to white, and then returned to crimson again.

"Ha! ha!" exclaimed she, with a forced laugh; "thank you, Mr. Molton; but, really, I have heard that expression so often, that it compels me to smile. There is so much insincerity in it."

"I sincerely!" he cried, with considerable fire; "insincerity! Ah Miss Myrtlefield, do you believe me capable of it? When I tell you that I love you, do you think that I would deceive you? Oh! no—no—no."

He became loving and vehement. Her eyes fixed on the carpet, and the tell-tale bloom on her cheek, revealed to him the state of her feelings, and gave him a modest and silent answer.

Five minutes afterwards Richard Molton's arm might have been seen around her waist, as her head gently reclined on his shoulder. She looked no into his eyes, which seemed so cool and crafty in comparison with hers—hers, so loving and trusting!

And thus they sat—the cold man of the world soothing and caressing the woman that loved him; and she, with her young heart wrapped up in him, thinking of nought but love. Banished were all her doubts and fears. He was worthy of her—and Harry, poor Harry, was wrong! So she thought, but she could not see or read the heart that beat near hers. The step of Rose's mother on the stairs finally recalled the lovers to a sense of the earth. Molton sprang up; and bowing politely, and raising her hand to his lips, took his leave, promising to return on the ensuing day. As he turned into the hall, Harry Marchmont stood before him.

"Richard Molton," said he, "I have seen and heard what passed between Rose Myrtlefield and you. I did not depart as you supposed, but glided into yonder niche, and there heard all. I did so from a feeling of duty I love Rose Myrtlefield as a brother does a sister, and as such I shall watch over and protect her. I know who and what you are, Richard Molton, and, with such knowledge, I declare that you shall never marry her!"

"Ah!" exclaimed Molton, "an eaves dropper. I perceive. Ha! I despise you! What you know, or pretend to know, concerning me, you are at perfect liberty to divulge. If you say you know ought but what is good of me, you say what is false—FALSE—do you hear? I say it is not true. Rose Myrtlefield is a brother, but that you are a discarded lover." His voice was as cool as ever, yet he spoke in a terrible key, and his eyes assumed a sinister and deadly aspect. "And, I say, that I will marry her in spite of you; and, further, I advise you, Sir, not to cross my path in future."

"You are a scoundrel and a villain," cried Harry, almost choked with rage, as he listened to these deliberate insults; "and what you say is false—false as you are your-self."

Molton made a motion as though he would have stricken him to the earth; but he recovered himself, and said, with a sneer.

"Ay!" Harry replied, "when and where you please with whatever weapons you please."

"To-morrow morning—six o'clock. Place—Hoboken. Pistols—at ten paces."

"Enough, I will be there," said Harry.

Molton smiled, as he saw revenge thus near him, for he was a dead shot, and already, in his imagination, he beheld his victim a bleeding corpse stretched out before him. Besides, he hinted that Harry had no cause for concealing his knowledge of his character, rather startled him, and he thought that he would, in any event, be better out of the way.

As Molton left the house, he looked carefully around, and, seeing no one was passing, he whistled an air from one of the operas. In a few moments a rather rough-looking fellow walked towards him. As Molton passed him, he whispered rapidly:

"I have won the prize—tell them I will be at the cabaret to-night—let them meet me there."

He then hailed an omnibus, and left the rather ill-looking man gazing after him in intent, wonder and astonishment.

CHAPTER II.

DEAN COFFEE; WHO HE IS, WHAT HE SAID, AND WHERE HE WENT.

At 6 o'clock P. M., on the same day, a party of six gentlemen sat down to dinner at the house of John Marchmont, Harry's father. The party consisted of Mr. Marchmont, Sen., ditto junior, a Mr. Downygoes, (popularly known as Phit Bang Downygoes, Esq.,) Rose's honorable friend, the Count Hulle Dale, Mr. Brunet, a sporting man the gentleman whose name figures at the head of this chapter, Mr. Marchmont was a nice, quiet old gentlemen, who loved his roast beef and his son Harry. He was not rich, but he had a modest competence—enough, anyway, to pay eighteen pence a pound for his beef, and the office rent and tailor's bills of his son—"my son Harry, Sir, attorney and counsellor at law."

Count Hulle Dale, an individual who deserves a short description, for he was a most remarkable man; his height was upwards of six feet, and he was broad in proportion; his colossal build was heightened by a kind of devil-may-care swagger, which he put on, and his face wore a mixed aspect of good humor and demureness. Sometimes, when he would try to look particularly gentified a funny expression would draw out his great whiskers, and twinkle with merriment. He always wore a long black coat, buttoned close up to the throat, but just leaving sufficient room for the ends of a white cravat to peep out, resplendent in whiteness and sacred in starch. He had long, flaxen hair, which reminded one of Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and which he tucked behind his ears, they being of sufficient size to prevent any locks, once placed there, from straying on his forehead. His face was always clean shaved—in fact, he turned up his cuffs in holy horror on seeing Hulle Dale attempt to eat soup. He was one of John Marchmont's intellectual sit-lits. Oh! how the old dog enjoyed him! Dean Coffee had one great failing—a strong predilection for whisky. He liked it in every possible form—whisky and water, cold, or whisky punch, or, indeed, whisky solus, (no pun intended.) Dean Coffee was not precisely a deacon, although he did wear a white cravat and black gloves. He was merely a great public benefactor, and the white choker (as Harry denominated it) was simply the symbol of his purity and innocence, although it did contrast rather suspiciously with the fiery, glowing, nutmeg-and-lemon-ish color of his cheeks. The pastors which, in large letters, invite the public to go and hear him, at the moderate fee of twenty-five cents, (which, of course, was to be devoted to some charitable object) called him "the great temperance lecturer," and great, indeed, was his popularity and his size.

The dinner progressed rapidly and pleasantly. There was no delay between the courses, and then every one was in good humor and happy, with the exception of Harry, who was thinking more of suicide and pistol galleries than lurtle and "crusty old port." Every one had his own department. Old Marchmont did the laughing and joking part; Phit Bang Downygoes, the uproarious stories and jolly songs; Dean Coffee did the drinking, the relating of temperance anecdotes, and the general facetious. Hunter told fish and game stories; and the Count Hulle Dale, after the olive oil, sighed as he thought of the master piece of salad dressing he once constructed for Rosa, and inwardly swore he did not believe a word of Hunter's stories. Harry relieved the general gaiety with a spice of melancholy. Jaques among the Touchstones!

The cloth was cleared away, and now the punch brewing commenced. Dean Coffee was in the seventh heaven of delight; in fact, the whole feast of reason had departed, and the flow of nectar and lemon juice had commenced, when Harry threw the following skulls and bones into the mixture, and aloud.

"Gentlemen, listen to me. I wish to ask a favor of one of you. To-morrow morning, at six o'clock, I am going to fight a duel with Mr. Richard Molton, at Hoboken, and I request one of you to officiate as my second. Come—who speaks first?"

There was a dead silence. They all looked aghast.

"A duel! God bless my soul!" said Mr. Downygoes.

"Harry, my boy, what do you mean?" said his father.

"The punch will be ruined," quoth Dean Coffee.

"I mean, gentlemen," replied Harry, "that the man I am about to fight with, insulted me—that I retorted, and told him he was a scoundrel—that he challenged me, as I was about to challenge him, and that I let him name his time, place and weapons."

"My boy, you must not fight. Consider."

"Father, 'tis useless to attempt to dissuade me. You will cease to urge me not to fight, when you know that I should be dishonored and disgraced forever in case I retreated. No, father, I must fight, and with such knowledge, I declare that you shall never marry her!"

"Ah!" exclaimed Molton, "an eaves dropper. I perceive. Ha! I despise you! What you know, or pretend to know, concerning me, you are at perfect liberty to divulge. If you say you know ought but what is good of me, you say what is false—FALSE—do you hear? I say it is not true. Rose Myrtlefield is a brother, but that you are a discarded lover." "Harry, my boy, what do you mean?" said his father.

"The punch will be ruined," quoth Dean Coffee.

"I mean, gentlemen," replied Harry, "that the man I am about to fight with, insulted me—that I retorted, and told him he was a scoundrel—that he challenged me, as I was about to challenge him, and that I let him name his time, place and weapons."

"My boy, you must not fight. Consider."

"Father, 'tis useless to attempt to dissuade me. You will cease to urge me not to fight, when you know that I should be dishonored and disgraced forever in case I retreated. No, father, I must fight, and with such knowledge, I declare that you shall never marry her!"

"Ah!" exclaimed Molton, "an eaves dropper. I perceive. Ha! I despise you! What you know, or pretend to know, concerning me, you are at perfect liberty to divulge. If you say you know ought but what is good of me, you say what is false—FALSE—do you hear? I say it is not true. Rose Myrtlefield is a brother, but that you are a discarded lover." His voice was as cool as ever, yet he spoke in a terrible key, and his eyes assumed a sinister and deadly aspect. "And, I say, that I will marry her in spite of you; and, further, I advise you, Sir, not to cross my path in future."

"You are a scoundrel and a villain," cried Harry, almost choked with rage, as he listened to these deliberate insults; "and what you say is false—false as you are your-self."

Molton made a motion as though he would have stricken him to the earth; but he recovered himself, and said, with a sneer.

"Ay!" Harry replied, "when and where you please with whatever weapons you please."

"To-morrow morning—six o'clock. Place—Hoboken. Pistols—at ten paces."

"Enough, I will be there," said Harry.

Molton smiled, as he saw revenge thus near him, for he was a dead shot, and already, in his imagination, he beheld his victim a bleeding corpse stretched out before him. Besides, he hinted that Harry had no cause for concealing his knowledge of his character, rather startled him, and he thought that he would, in any event, be better out of the way.

As Molton left the house, he looked carefully around, and, seeing no one was passing, he whistled an air from one of the operas. In a few moments a rather rough-looking fellow walked towards him. As Molton passed him, he whispered rapidly:

"I have won the prize—tell them I will be at the cabaret to-night—let them meet me there."

He then hailed an omnibus, and left the rather ill-looking man gazing after him in intent, wonder and astonishment.

CHAPTER II.

DEAN COFFEE; WHO HE IS, WHAT HE SAID, AND WHERE HE WENT.

At 6 o'clock P. M., on the same day, a party of six gentlemen sat down to dinner at the house of John Marchmont, Harry's father. The party consisted of Mr. Marchmont, Sen., ditto junior, a Mr. Downygoes, (popularly known as Phit Bang Downygoes, Esq.,) Rose's honorable friend, the Count Hulle Dale, Mr. Brunet, a sporting man the gentleman whose name figures at the head of this chapter. Mr. Marchmont was a nice, quiet old gentlemen, who loved his roast beef and his son Harry. He was not rich, but he had a modest competence—enough, anyway, to pay eighteen pence a pound for his beef, and the office rent and tailor's bills of his son—"my son Harry, Sir, attorney and counsellor at law."

and all they did, and called upon the people to stand for their rights, which, he was sure, had been invaded. He charged Mr. TALLMADGE with having been caught in bed with another man's wife, and asked whether he was not a pretty man to intrust with the protection of the lives, and property, and morals of the City. He regretted what he called the attempt of the Black Republicans to create riot and bloodshed at the present time, and warned Mr. GREELEY, that if his advice to form a Vigilance Committee were taken, he would be the first person hung.

He was followed by ANDREW JACKSON PLUMB, who, like the others, was strong in his denunciations of the recent Legislature, and urged the people to stand for their rights.

The meeting then adjourned.

The following letter was received and handed to the reporters:

OFFICE OF THE NEW-YORK EXPRESS,
CORNER OF WALL AND NASSAU STREETS,
NEW-YORK, May 27, 1857.

DEAR SIR: Violating every established principle of self government, and of human liberty as well as of chartered rights, which many of the acts of the last Anti Republican Legislature do, emphatically, I shall be ready to avail myself of the opportunity so to say in public, during the week, if a previous engagement did not on Friday take me out of the City.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN CHEEVER, Esq. JAMES BROOKS.

The New-York Citizen Volunteers.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: The counter proclamation of Alderman WILSON, claiming to be Commander-in-Chief of the New-York Citizen Volunteers, requires a few lines in reply. He accuses me of saying that the organization of the Citizen Volunteers did not exist after the parade. I deny that I ever said such a word. What I did say was that no authority was conferred upon the Generals and their Staff, except in connection with the parade and its incidents, and that none of its members had any right to use the Citizen Volunteers for their own private purposes. He attempts to explain how he came to call that meeting, and adds that, for the or the purpose of more effectually calling the meeting, I was empowered to use the title I was known by, but he forgets to tell us who delegated that power to him when he just previously has said that the Citizen Volunteers were not in existence after the parade. Again, he says he called the meeting as a body of citizens. The best reply that I can make to this statement is to refer to the proceedings of that meeting, published on the 23d day of May, 1857, and also the call of the meeting, as follows:

HEAD QUARTERS FIRST DIVISION NEW-YORK
CITIZEN VOLUNTEERS, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.
Special Order, No. 10.

The officers of the First Division are notified to attend a meeting at the National Hall, Canal-street, on Friday evening, May 22, at 7½ o'clock. Punctual attendance is requested, as business of importance will be transacted By order,

WILLIAM WILSON, Major-General,
Commanding First Division
New-York Citizen Volunteers.

CHARLES W. KARGER, Assistant Adj't-General.

This appears to me to be the most singular way to call a meeting of citizens that I have ever heard of. He complains that I had no right to interfere with his business. This I admit, and I deny ever having done so, so far as he acts individually. What I objected to was his publishing his individual resolutions and opinions as emanating from the citizen volunteers and own independent companions. Our independent companies do not wish, under any pretence, to be held up before the public as an armed mob. Their organization is one for pastime and pleasure. They are composed of men from all classes and conditions in life, and they will not permit any persons to call assemblies for political purposes in their name, and commit them as a body to any course of political action whatever without protesting against it. I trust the captains will take such action in reference to the present call that will prevent anything of the kind from ever taking place again.

HENRY WILSON, Commander-in-Chief

MURDEROUS ASSAULT—PROBABLE HOMICIDE.—A colored man named FRANCIS SAULTERS was admitted to the New-York Hospital early yesterday morning, suffering severely from a pistol-shot wound in the head. It appears that three men, in a carriage driven by a colored man, went to a house of prostitution in Thomas-street, and were refused admittance. After various attempts to enter the premises, and threats of vengeance if they were not admitted, they returned to their carriage and started off, but had proceeded but a few paces when they observed a colored man named FRANCIS SAULTERS standing upon the steps of a house nearly opposite that which they had attempted to enter. They ordered the driver to stop, get out, and each drawing a pistol, fired deliberately at the unsuspecting and unoffending man upon the steps. They then immediately leaped into their carriage, and went up Hudson-street at a rapid rate. Only one ball took effect upon SAULTERS, and this entered the corner of the left eye, which it entirely destroyed. SAULTERS was alive last evening, but his recovery is regarded as almost impossible. The attack upon him was witnessed by one man and two women, but as yet the perpetrators of the deed have not been arrested.

SMALL POX.—The steamer Glasgow arrived at Quarantine yesterday, having small-pox on board. She will be detained for ventilation, fumigation and cleansing, and her passengers will be thoroughly vaccinated before being allowed to proceed. The occurrence of even one case of pestilence on shipboard, is a serious hindrance to vessels as well as to passengers, but no caution or inspection can be instituted in Europe, which protect steamers from such unfortunate incidents.

GENERAL HENNINGSEN AND FRIENDS.—The door-bell of the General's residence in Twelfth-street was in lively action much of the time yesterday, and his personal presence was in great demand. Numerous friends called to congratulate him on his safe return with a whole skin from his late perilous campaign in Nicaragua. Among those who did so were Don FERMIN FERRAR, defunct Minister, &c.; Colonel FRANK ANDERSON, Generals WHEAT and DUFF GREEN, and Mrs. General CAZNEAU and her husband. General HENNINGSEN will not engage in another expedition at present; meantime he is enjoying a fair share of health and comfort, and looks as if he could stand another six months in Central America, and still "live to fight another day."

THE COUNCILMEN AND THE COMPTROLLER.—Nearly all the members of the Board of Councilmen have determined to sue Comptroller FLAGG, should he refuse to pay them their $32 for the eight sessions of the Board in May. The suit will be brought in one of the District Courts, in the name of one of the Councilmen, the decision of which the others will abide. The Councilmen have been advised that as they were elected to office until Jan 1, 1858, their claims are valid, notwithstanding the last clause in section 44 of the new Charter reads, "that no member of the Common Council shall receive any compensation for his services as such member" after the 1st of May, 1857.

☞ J. R. STAFFORD'S Olive Tar is a concentrated extract which is applied and inhaled; it is the only fluid that contains electro-magnetism, which it imparts to the system, increasing its vitality, enabling it to expel pain and disease. STAFFORD'S OINTMENT and POWDERS cure all diseases of impure blood. The Ointment is made of J. R. STAFFORD'S Olive Tar, diluted with mutton tallow. The Powders are a new combination of sulphur and iron with sugar of milk; the taste is agreeable; they do not sicken nor purge, but act directly upon the blood. The following are the names of a few well known persons who have used the noove, and who commend their use as indicated, for diseases of the throat, lungs, nerves, muscles, joints, skin, &c.:

FRIDAY, May 29—P. M.

There was a large and animated business at the Stock Exchange to-day. The Bulls were rather in the ascendant on the Railroad list, and prices for most descriptions were 1@1¾ ₰ cent. higher than on Thursday. The speculative feeling was quite marked throughout the day, or until after the official list of sales was printed, when the Bears took advantage of the inactivity in Southern Michigan through the day to offer that stock down, on the Street, to 59@58¾, seller's option, to produce effect, if possible, upon the general market. The most elastic stocks were New-York and Erie, New-York Central, Reading, Illinois Central, Toledo, and Cleveland and Pittsburg. These fluctuated as follows, the inside figure being the closing rate of Thursday:

New-York and Erie...35@35⅞@36¼@36@36⅛@36½
New-York Central.....85½@86¾@86½
Reading.....80¼@80⅜
Illinois Central.....139¾@140@139½
Toledo.....64¼@64¾@66@65¼
Pittsburg.....44½ seller 60 days @47@49

The whole business of the day reached over 90,600 shares, with some fair orders in State and Railway Bonds. Missouri 6s sold at 83¼, buyer 60 days.

The private financial advices from England by the Arabia more than confirm the newspaper reports of the changed tone of confidence in the future course of the London Money market. The speculators in the Funds were the chief parties paying an extravagant rate of interest. Discounts were working easier. There was a fair business the week the steamer sailed in American Stocks, but confined to the bonds and shares of the old-established lines. The rates of interest were much too high for the introduction of any large undertakings from this side. The Detroit and Milwaukee Company, who have found considerable favor in London, as being a kindred enterprise with the Great Western of Canada, will probably place a million of dollars in Freeland Scrip shares, to represent a recent grant of 50,000 acres of land along the line of the Road, made by Congress and assigned to the Company by the State of Michigan. The stock will take the full sales of the land besides participating equally in the profits of the Road.

Among the passengers by the Arabia, arrived last evening, are Mr. JAMES LEE, of JAMES LEE & Co., Bankers, Wall-street; Mr. TREVOR, of the Stock Exchange; Mr. HOTTENGUER, Jr., Banker, of Paris, and Mr. LABOURCHERE, of HOPE & Co., Amsterdam.

Our own Money market continues quiet. The correspondent of the ROTHSCHILDS has been a larger drawer of Sterling this week, and will ship about $700,000 in Bullion by the Arago, for France. The whole shipment is stated on 'Change at a million of dollars. Sterling closes 109¼@¾, most of the sales at 109¼@⅝. In addition to the $1,658,000 Bullion brought in yesterday by the California packet, the same vessel brought a considerable sum of Specie drafts on the Sub-Treasury, of which $118,000 were paid to-day. The whole payments were $450,296, against $277,577 receipts. The balance now stands $13,158,391. We learn from passengers who returned in the Arabia that the liberal shipments of Bullion from this side on an easy Money market will be quite unexpected to many parties in England, as from the croaking of hard times which had been going over for a month or two, in connection with the great depression of our Stock Exchange, it was scarcely believed that the United States would be able to spare large sums in Gold. It is not unlikely these parties had been reading the Herald on the bankruptcy of the Atlantic and the exhaustion of the Pacific States!

We understand the Board of Directors of the Michigan Southern Company have determined to place the registration of their transfers with one of the large Banks, and the office has been tendered to the American Exchange Bank. It is particularly due to this Bank as it has shown a liberal confidence in dealing with the Company when their credit was otherwise hardly dealt by in Wall-street. This movement will give satisfaction to the stockholders. It is also in contemplation by the Company, and a like measure has been suggested to the New-York and Erie and Cleveland and Toledo to confine their transfers upon each certificate to one assignment a day, after the manner of the New-York Central Company. In their case, the Brokers strenuously remonstrated at first, but have since accustomed themselves to dealing with each other by the simple delivery of certificate and power, when the transaction does not involve the necessity of placing the stock in a new name outside the street. The truth is, the immense daily transactions in the three stocks named have become so disproportioned to the amount of so called floating or speculative Stock, at the command of the Brokers, that the duty, responsibility and expense of an indefinite number of transfers the same day with the same 50 or 100 shares, have become burdensome and annoying beyond endurance. Not only so. The operation, so fictitious in its character, in a large degree, is a positive injury to the credit of the stock. There being no corresponding advantage from the thankless courtesies extended to the street jobbers, most of whom show little consideration to the question of relative legitimate supply and demand, and some of whom do not scruple to misrepresent the actual movement of the stock, if not to impeach the integrity of the transfers. It is known that this has been systematically done through the Herald for months past in the case of at least two of the Companies named, and it is not unreasonable that the new Treasurer of the Southern Michigan, Mr. JOHN A. C. GRAY, should, at an early time, as he has done, suggest a remedy for this unwarranted expense and mischief. The change was one that was felt to be unjust to the Brokers when made a year or so ago by the Central, but the regular commission dealers in the Board have not only become reconciled to it, but we believe they are prepared to second the more general introduction of the reform.

Having alluded to the misrepresentations frequently put forth as to the disposition of the real holders of certain stocks which are made the foot balls of Wall-street jobbing, we might here call attention to the instance of New-York and Erie office, where the Brokers recently transferred from and to each other 68,000 shares, or two-thirds the then capital, less than 13,500 on certificates for shares only, which was the movable or available number then in the names of Brokers and Bankers, out of 17,360 shares ostensibly under their control. We have heard, indeed, that only 10,000 shares were actually used that day. Since that time, now five weeks past, the case has been thus changed:

NEW-YORK AND ERIE TRANSFERS—UNOFFICIAL.

Capital Shares.	Wall-street Names.	Of which in Brokers' Control.
April 24.....	17,300	13,500
May 23.....	13,000	10,000

On the 24th of April the Capital stood 100,000 shares. It was then made 110,000 shares by the Stock dividend of 10 ₰ cent.

This enterprise has assumed a large importance by the recent acquisition of two of the Federal Land Grants, through the States of Illinois and Michigan, for the purpose of extending the work north and west of Fond du Lac to the Iron and Copper fields on Lake Superior. The present financial purpose of the Company (W. B. OGDEN, President, CHARLES BUTLER, Treasurer,) is to complete the work as soon as practicable from Chicago to Appleton, 40 miles north of Fond du Lac. This will give them the title in fee to 230,400 acres of the Land Grant. Their first issue of Land Grant Mortgage Bonds will be made for only $3,600,000, eight ₰ cents., with optional scrip privilege to an equal amount, that is, to ten shares scrip to each $1,000 Bond. It is stated in the programme of the loan that:

This stock will have the following rights and privileges: 1st. No future assessments will be made upon it. 2d. As the bonds are paid and cancelled by the proceeds of the sales of the lands, the amount of such paid and cancelled bonds shall, from time to time, be credited to this, (and any future stock which may become entitled to the same privileges,) until it shall be made full paid stock. 3d. It will share dividends, and be entitled to vote, at all times, pro rata, according to the amounts which shall have been paid, or credited as paid upon it. 4th. Payments of the ten per cent., made at any time before the expiration of the two years, will draw ten per cent. interest until that time, if preferred to dividends. The above liberal stock privileges, or optional rights, are intended to be limited to the present issues of bonds, and the Company do not anticipate offering so large privileges, or issuing bonds bearing more than seven per cent. interest hereafter. Intending to reserve the benefit of these stock privileges, and of the proceeds of sales of other lands, as far as the success of the work will admit of, for the benefit of their existing stockholders, the preference of taking these bonds, with the optional rights or stock privileges, attached thereto, is now offered to them, until the 20th of June.

The Dry Goods Import for the week is $828,966, against $1,124,210 the week ending May 31, last year. The following is the summary:

THE FRENCH EXTRADITION CASE.

Louis Greiet sent back to France—A writ of Habeas Corpus issued but not served.

The French "Extradition Case," which has been pending here, before Commissioner BETTS, since January last, is finally ended. Commissioner BETTS having sent the result of his examination to Washington, a telegraphic message was received from the Capitol on Saturday, ordering the United States authorities here to deliver up LOUIS GRELET to the representative of the French Government, and the order was promptly complied with. GRELET'S Counsel getting wind of the affair, applied to Judge CLERKE for a writ of habeas corpus, which, after some hesitancy was granted at 11¼ o'clock, half an hour before the time announced for the sailing of the Arago, on which vessel it was understood GRELET would be put. But this writ was not served.

During the morning GRELET was conveyed down the Bay in a steam-tug, and on the coming of the Arago he was transferred to that vessel, in charge of Officers RAY and DEVOE, of the Chief's Office, who accompany him to France.

Marshal RYNDERS distinguished himself upon this occasion also. Being forewarned that a habeas corpus to produce GRELET might be served, he answered in his usual emphatic manner—"Well, suppose there should, I shall pay no attention to it. I have my orders from the United States authorities, and I shall pay no more attention to any habeas corpus coming from the State than I would to a habeas corpus from the late and lamented "Forgie-Joe!"

To the Hon. Lewis Cass, Secretary of State:

I, George F. Betts, a Commissioner duly authorized by appointment of the United States Circuit Court for the Second Circuit, held in and for the Southern District of New York, to act under the law of the United States, passed August 12, 1848, entitled "An act for giving effect to certain treaty stipulations between this and foreign Governments, for the apprehension and delivering up of certain offenders," do hereby report and certify that on the 28th day of January last I issued my warrant for the apprehension of Charles Carpentier, Louis Grelet, Auguste Parot and Edouard David, charged with having committed in France the crimes of faux, (forgery,) effraction and other crimes, and that the accused were arrested under such warrant and brought before me for examination.

The circumstances of the alleged offences, as claimed by the prosecution, are briefly as follows: The Northern Railroad Company are a corperation in France, duly incorporated and controlling extensive lines of railway in that empire. They have offices in Paris, and at night a watchman named Guerin was employed by them to sleep in those offices to guard them against robbers. Their capital is 40,000 shares, (livres,) of 500 francs each. The certificates of stock are divided into series, each series into — numbers, and, unlike ours, are payable to bearer, and thus are transferred by mere manual delivery, without the necessity of any transfer on the books of the Company. To those certificates are annexed two classes of coupons—one an interest coupon of four per cent., payable each year on the 1st of January—the other a dividend conpon for an amount contingent upon the earnings of the year, and which is payable on the 1st of July each year.

It has been the custom of the Company, as a matter of accommodation to its stockholders, to receive their certificates of stock for safe-keeping, and those certificates were deposited in a safe in the cellar, of which one of the chief Directors (Administrateurs) of the Company always retained a padlock key, without which none of the officers could open the safe. At each half year, when payments of interest or dividends accrued, each stockholder who retained his certificates of stock prepared a schedule or statement, (called by them a Bordereau,) describing the series, and number in series, of each of his shares, and the amount due, headed with his name and the date of presentation. Upon presenting this Bordereau at the Company's office, a receipt was given for it to the stockholder, postponing him to a future day for payment, and the clerk, taking this bordereau, placed it in a cover or envelope, (called by them a dossier.) These dossiers were numbered consecutively, and the dossier number was put on the borderean, inclosed in it, to identify and connect the two. The Company has a blank-book prepared for each semi-annual payment, in which there is a blank square, corresponding to the series and number of each share of stock, which book is called the Livre de Passe. And ons of the clerks, taking each dossier, enters into each blank square of the Livre de Passe which corresponds to the series and numbers detailed on the bordersau, a reference to the number of the dossier under which payment of the interest and dividends upon those shares had been demanded. And the clerk draws with his pen a line under each number detailed in the bordereau, when the entry has been made from it into the corresponding blank square in the livre de passe. It is evident thus that if the Clerk, on taking up the dossier for examination, should find that the squares in the livre de passe, which corresponded to the numbers on its bordereau, had been filled with figures referring to other dossiers, he would detect at once mistake or fraud; and by turning to the dossier referred to in this square could discover who had received the former payment. It is also evident that the lines under the numbers on the bordereau indicate that such an examination had been made, and that there had been found no mistake or fraud, and that the bordereau should be paid. The Company kept also another book in connection with the half yearly payment, called the book of registry of dossiers ("Livre d' enregistrement de dossiers." In this, after payment was made of each bordereau, the Clerk entered the amount of the payment, the date, the name of the payee, and the number of the dossier inclosing the Bordereau. This entry occupied a line, and each entry was numbered consecutively, and these "order of registry numbers" were also put on the dossiers under the dossier number, from which they might vary greatly; as a stockholder who presented his Bordereau on the first day of payment of the interest, and who then would have it placed in a dossier, hearing a low number, might, from neglect or caprice not come for the payment of his interest for several months, and it would thus not be registered as paid in the Livre d'enregistrement, till after several thousand other dossiers. The Company relied on these two numbers of the dossier and of the order of Registry, both of which appeared on the dossier, to enable them to determine by their book when and to whom payment had been made and to what amount. By altering then the number of order of registry on a dossier to a later number, an officer of the Company could procure its insertion twice in the Company books as paid, and could thus cover a deficiency in the cash account to that extent.

The foregoing is the manner in which a stockholder who retained his own certificates would procure the payment of his coupons. As to those which were deposited for safe-keeping with the Company, the clerks made out the Bordereaux and dossiers, bringing up the certificates for that purpose from the safe in the cellar; and thus it happened that, for a few days at each half-yearly payment, these certificates were placed temporarily in the wooden desk (armoire) of the Cashier.

Mr. Robert was cashier up to May, 1853, when he died. Carpentier, who had been sub cashier, was thereupon made cashier, and Louis Grelet, who had been chief clerk in the department of the deposited certificates, was made sub cashier, but did not change his duties. Parot was not an employée of the Company, but was a stock-broker in Paris. In August, 1856, Carpentier fled. Before his flight was known to the Company, Louis Grelet fled also, and finally Parot fled, coming to America in company with Grelet, all under assumed names. After the flight of these parties, on examination it was discovered that 5,752 shares had been abstracted from the Company, and as the market value of the shares had risen from 400 francs to over 1,000 francs, it results that the loss was over a million of dollars. There were also found upon the armoire or desk occupied by Mr Robert, when cashier, lever marks indicating that it had been forced.

It is alleged that the accused, either as principals or accomplices, stole these shares by breaking this armorie, or by entering the large safe in the cellar with false keys; that the thefts were concealed by the fraud of marking Bordereaux in such manner as to induce the clerks to consider them duly registered, without examination, and by other frauds; and that thus double payments were made on these abstracted shares, first to the stockholder who had deposited them, and seconly, to the persons to whom they had been sold or pledged by the accused. Parot is charged with being the chief agent in selling or pledging the stolen shares, for which his occupation of broker gave him peculiar facilities. It is also alleged that, in two instances, Carpentier and Grelet falsely altered dossiers in cases where the shares had not been abstracted, to cover up a deficiency in the cash account, or to take from the cash account a sum equal to that demanded by the Bordereaux inclosed in these dossiers.

Charles Carpentier has plead guilty to the charge, and has voluntarily returned to France. Under the act of 1848, it then becomes my duty to determine whether, upon the hearing, there is such evidence of criminality on the part of the accused, in crimes provided for by our treaties with France, as would warrant their commitment for trial under our laws if the crimes had been committed here. (Act 1848, sec. 1; Treaty of 1843, art. 1, proviso.)

A preliminary objection is raised on the part of the defence that the prisoners have not been accusés under the laws of France, and therefore are not the subject of extradition. The word accusé has in its popular use the same meaning as our word "accused" or "charged," but in criminal proceedings it has acquired in the law a technical sense analogous to "indicted" in our law. It is only after proceedings instituted against a suspected person, having been commenced before the Judge d'Instruction, have been carried thence before the "Chambre de Conseil," and thence to the "Chambre de Mise en Accusation," that he is called "accusé," in all the previous stages of the proceedings he is called "inculpé," or "prévenu." (Code d'Instruction Criminelle Courts 127, 133, 218, 231, Dictionaire de l'Academie.)

But this objection is based on the erroneous idea that the treaty has employed technical terms instead of popular language. The rule of interpretation, on the contrary, is that the words of a treaty are to be taken in their common and popular signification, unless some other meaning must necessarily be given to carry out the intent of the parties. (Phil. Int. Law vol. 2, p. 38.)

The English side of the treaty uses indifferently the words "accused" or "charged" as equivalents to "accusé," and it would appear improbable that a technical term should be used in the French translation, and a popular term in the English. Such a interpretation would preclude entire reciprocity in the action of the treaty, if it were necessary that all these preliminary steps should be taken in France before a demand could be made for a fugitive from that country, while the United States could demand a fugitive from this country on a mere complaint before a magistrate. This objection was discussed and decided in Metzger's case, (5 Leg. Obs., p. 84,) and the authority of that decision concurs with the reasons above stated in leading me to the conclusion that the objection cannot be sustained.

The first question, then, to be determined is, What are the crimes provided for by the treaties with France? As to the treaty of 1843 (U. S. Stat. at Large, vol. 8, p. 590) there seems to be no difference of opinion, the crime of forgery and its corresponding crime of "faux," when punishable with a "peine infamante," fall clearly within its provisions. There is, however, more uncertainty as to the proper construction of the article added to this treaty by the Convention of 1845 (U. S. Stat. at Large, vol. 8, p. 617), and different views have been urged, with great earnestness, by the prosecution and defense, as to the classes of offences for which it provides. This uncertainty results from the circumstance that the latter clauses of the English and French articles of 1845 are not translations, nor attempted translations, of each other—but in each are employed terms and phrases for which no equivalent can be found in the other. We are bound to consider that each meant to express and convey exactly the same idea as the other; but as those who framed the treaty have not adopted similar modes of expression in each, it introduces a difficulty in ascertaining with precision what was the agreement between the contracting parties.

The rule of construction in such cases is well settled, that if possible the whole is to be reconciled and effect given to every clause (U. S. vs. Percheman, 7 Pet. 88); and there does not seem to me to be any discrepancy between the articles in the two languages that cannot be fairly and rightfully adjusted under this rule.

The English article provides that there shall be added to the crimes before provided for, under the treaty of 1843, robbery (defining it) and burglary (defining it) and the corresponding crimes included under the French law in the words "Vols qualifié crimes." The grammatical construction of the sentence is simple and unambiguous; there are no other words to which "corresponding" can refer than robbery and burglary. There are no other words with which it can serve to connect the word "crimes;" and this second clause, if fully written out according to grammatical rules, would read: "And the crimes corresponding to robbery and burglary, which are included under the French law, in the words 'vols qualifié crimes.'" I am at a loss for any reason to distort the sentence from its proper and grammatical construction, or to interpolate into it words which the parties have not themselves employed. Moreover, when we consider that robbery and burglary are technical English terms, which cannot be translated into French except by paraphrase, and which have no equivalent words in the French penal code, and that this article in English is meant to be entire in itself, independently of the French article, and to provide for crimes committed in France, and to enable French magistrates to specify under it what crimes they charge to have been committed, (Code Penal, Art. 1, and 379 et seq.,) it seems to be the proper construction of the article that its second clause is intended to provide for crimes committed in France, describing them as those crimes which correspond to robbery and burglary as previously defined, and which fall in the French law under the general classification of "thefts defined as crimes," that is thefts punishable "d'une peine afflictive, ou infamente." The view is strengthed by the consideration that robbery and burglary are each of them such crimes as are included in the French law under the description of "thefts defined as crimes;" their corresponding crimes then would be found in the French law under that description. But if it had been intended to stipulate that all "vols qualifié crimes" should be the objects of the Treaty, why are only two of the entire class enumerated, and why are they thus carefully defined, and why was not the article made to provide for ALL OTHER crimes included under "vols qualifié crimes," which would appear to be the only mode of expression that would mark such an intention? This appears, then, to be the proper construction of the English article, even if it stood alone; but when we examine the French article in connection with it this seems the only construction whereby the two can be reconciled and made to stand together. The first part of the French article is an exact translation of the first part of the English, retaining the words robbery and burglary, as not susceptible of being rendered into French, and translating faithfully their definitions as contained in the English article. Then the French article in its latter clause gives a paraphrase of those definitions in such terms as are employed in their code penal, and are familiar to the French lawyers. The words "vols qualifié crimes" which are inserted in the English article, do not appear at all. I am, therefore, of opinion that under the additional article of 1845 the crimes of robbery and burglary, as specifically defined in that article, are the only crimes intended to be added to the list enumerated in the original treaty. It may be true that there are other crimes equally heinous and equally dangerous to the interests of society which have been left unprovided for; yet that will not authorize the extension of the treaty beyond its just limits, any more than would the heinous nature of the crime of robbery have authorized its being construed within the covenants of the treaty of 1843, before the article of 1845 was added.

I proceed then to examine the charge of forgery, (faux,) as made against Louis Grelet. It appears that the Marquis de Leutilhac had 240 shares on deposit with the Company—that the dossiers for these shares of January, 1855, (ex. 49,) is in the handwriting of Louis Grelet, and incloses the Bordereau of the Marquis (ex. 48)—that on that Bordereau are drawn lines purporting that this Bordereau had been duly entered in the Livre de Passe, while, in truth, it had not been thus entered—and that this might operate to the injury of the Company by enabling any party holding coupons of the same shares to draw another dividend; or, if that other dividend had been drawn, would, by concealing the fact, facilitate the repetition of the fraud on the succeeding year. The deposition of the Marquis Didon, and the confessions of Louis Grelet to Mslin, show that Louis Grelet, in November, 1853, had abstracted these 240 shares of the Marquis de De Lutilhac, and had employed a broker named Asolant to raise money upon them by their deposit, in pledge, with the Bank of Franco.

I consider this evidence sufficient to charge Louis Grelet with the making, or causing to be made, these false marks on the Bordereau to the injury or possible injury of the Company.

It is also in proof that two dossiers, one of Mr. Mercie (Ex. 78,) one of Mr. Maugrane (Ex. 89, were altered in their dossier numbers, and in that of Mr. Maugrano in its date; that they were entered twice in the Livre d'Enregistrement of dossiers—once under other numbers. That such an alteration would serve to conceal an abstraction of cash to the amount of the dividends payable by the Bordereaux in those dossiers; that Grelet was in a situation to have made those alterations; that Carpentier was in a situation to have taken the money, and that Grelet and Carpentier fled in such manner as to indicate a consciousness of guilt. I consider these circumstances sufficient to charge Louis Grelet with the alteration of these two dossiers by erasures and insertion of new numbers, and of a new date in the Maugrane dossier.

The question that remains to be considered on this branch of the case is, whether the Bordereau and dossiers are papers wherein forgery can be committed. I am of opinion that they are—under the Common Law, the matter seems free from doubt; the best treatises on Criminal Law speak in terms without limitation of all writings by the fabrication or alteration of which injury, or possible injury—may happen to another as the subjects of forgery. (East's P. C. Vol. 2, Cap 19, Sec. 47. Russ on Cr. B. 4, Cap 27, Sec. 2. Wharton's Am. Cr. Law. Lit. forgery B. 1, R. S. of New-York, Vol. 2, Part 4, Cap 1, Sec. 3. Art. 3, Sec. 23. Com. vs. Ayer, 3 Cush. R.—136—R. vs. Ward, 2 L. Raym, 1,461. Reg vs. Boult, 2 Car. & K. 604—Ames Case, 2 Greenl. R., 365. Carl vs. Chandler—Thacher's Crim. Cases, 188. Van Horne vs. State, 5 Ark. R., 350. U. S. vs. Turner, 7 Pet. R., 132.)

Under the French law there appears to be more doubt; yet I should be reluctant to determine a doubtful question of foreign law in such manner as to prevent its adjudication by the tribunals of that country, where alone it can be duly and properly decided; the more so where the point is purely technical and the rule of the common law is clear. But even under the French law there is such a case made out, that I should feel it to be my duty, as an examining Magistrate in that country, to commit the accused, and to send the matter before the higher Court for investigation. The Mandat d'Arrêt of December 21, 1855, (Ex. 83,) is for a Faux in "Ecriture de Commerce." I must infer that these papers were the subjects of the charge, as none others have been produced. And the opinion of the French Juge d' Instruction on a question of French law is entitled to great respect. If he has deemed these papers "Ecritures de Commerce," it would be prudent in me to treat with consideration his judgment on this point. And there is great force in the argument that the Company being a commercial association, its papers incident to the transaction of its business and the payment of its moneys are commercial papers. But if these are not "Ecritures de Commerce," they would certainly seem to be "ecritures privées." They fall within the popular meaning of those words; and the ingenuity and research of the counsel for the defence have not succeeded in pointing out any section of the Code which requires that the words shall be taken in any different or technical sense.

I conclude, then, that Louis Greiet is properly charged with the crime of forgery, and that the evidence shows a reasonable ground of suspecting him of being guilty of that crime. The crime of burglary is defined on the treaty. We need not, therefore, search the books to learn its significations; its essentials, as named in the treaty, are, (1) breaking (2) in the night time (3) in the mansion house (maison habitée) of another, (4,) with felonious intent.

There is evidence before me to warrant the inference that Grelet, with felonious intent, in the night time, entered the offices of the Railroad Company, and broke open, or aided in breaking open, an armoire or desk in those offices, and abstracted shares from the desk by those means.

The fact that shares have been stolen is testified to by Messrs. Dalen and Dalebocque, and confessed by Louis Greiet to Melin Tussandier and Matthiessen. It was proved that the desk bore marks of violence. Grelet admitted to Tussandier and Matthiessen that Guerin had broken open the desk, and he had followed him. This method of stealing having been proved, if the accused desired to establish that he had not resorted to it, but be employed other means, the burden of proving this devolved on him, and he has failed to furnish such proof. The circumstances that Mr. Robert lived till May, 1856, that Carpentier and Greiet were only subordinates up to that date, and that most, if not all the thefts were committed prior to that date, render more certain the inference that these thefts were committed in the night and under the circumstances above-mentioned.

But there is one essential of the crime of burglary which this evidence fails to establish, namely, that the place was a mansion house (maison habitée.) These offices were used by the Company solely for the transaction of their business, and at night, Guerin, as employee, slept there to watch; it was not his dwelling in any other sense than that, and has been clearly held not to render it a mansion house. Easts P. C., vol 2. Cap. 15 sections 8, 9, 11, Brown's case. Ib. R. vs. Smith, section 12, Fuller's case. Whart. Am. Cr. Law. Tit. Burglary, B 3, Flanagan's case. Russ and Ry., 187. If the crime do not amount to burglary within our law, then, under the treaty, the accused cannot be delivered up, whatever might be the French law on the subject, (Proviso to Art. 1 of Treaty of 1843.) But the same doctrine in regard to a maison habitée seems to be held in France. Cope Penal, Art. 390. Journal des Palais, vol. 12, p. 1,002, No. 557. Sirey. Jan. 9, 1824, p. 371.

This seemed clear in the mind of the prosecuting officers in France, for the mandat d'arrêt, in specifying the offences with which Louis Grelet is charged, uses the following language (Ex. 21, mandat d'arrêt, Nov. 6, 1856:) "Prévener d'avoir à Paris dans le courant de les présente année et des années précédentes soustrait frauduleusement conjointement avec les Nés Carpentier et Guérin, la nuit, à l'aide de fausses clés et d'effractions, un certain nombre d'actions de la Compagnie du Chemin de fer du Nord dans les bureaux et au préjndice de la dite Compagnie dont ils étarent les employés salariés."

While thus the officer who framed the warrant has specified the aggravating circumstances of the crimes charged with great particularity, as he is required to do by the marginal note of the warrant, "Bien specifier le crime ou delit dont ils sont prévenus," and by the Code d'Instruction, Art. 66, he has not charged that the offence was committed in a maison habitée. The French Code also requires that the warrant of arrest shall specify the articles of the Code Penal under which the crime falls (Code d'Instruction, Art. 95,) and in compliance with that law, this warrant of arrest cites Articles 386 and 384 of the Code Penal as defining the offences charged, which are articles providing for the case when the house is not inhabited.

On the ground, therefore, that he is not charged in France with having broken into a dwelling-house; that the nature of the charge shows the understanding of the prosecution as to the nature of the offence; that the cases in France support the same view, and that our adjudged cases in conformity with it are, I am of opinion that there is not any charge against Louis Grelet sustained by proper evidence to warrant his commitment for trial to answer for the crime of burglary.

We come next to consider the case of Auguste Parot. There was no charge made in France against him of complicity in the forgery. As one there seems to have entertained the opinion that he was implicated in that crime. Nor is there any evidence before me to cast suspicion on him in regard to this particular crime. He was not an employee of the Railroad Company, had never been seen in their office but once, and that four years ago, and was not by any evidence connected with these forgeries for which I hold Grelet accountable. His intimacy with Grelet in Paris, his flight with him under an assumed name, his having in his portfolio fifty-four coupons of railroad shares due since 1853, point to him clearly as an accomplice of Grelet in the thefts, and as a guilty instrument in disposing of the stolen shares; but as thefts do not come under the definition of burglary, it follows that Parot has not been guilty of that crime. I am therefore of opinion that Auguste Parot has not committed any crime that falls within the provisions of our treaties with France.

There is no evidence before me sufficient to charge Edouard David with any grave offence. The evidence against him consists solely of a letter alleged to have been written to him by Parot, in which he refers to having deposited some shares of the Railroad Company in the Bank of Parot, and asks what he shall answer if interrogated about the matter. This would only show that he had acted blindly as a tool of Parot in making this deposit, not knowing what object Parot had in using him. It was weak, but certainly not criminal, to let his friendship for, and trust in, Parot lead him thus far; but the fact that two years ago he came to this country, and lived here in destitution, resorting to every shift to earn a livelihood, that in his letter he asks, as a favor from Parot, a small loan; when, if he had been a guilty associate, or had even possessed knowledge of the commission of the crime, his conduct and tone would have been far different, taken in connection with the fact that when Parot and Grelet were arrested in New-York, David went openly to visit them, and repeated his visits to them, when flight or avoidance would have been the natural recourse of a guilty man, satisfies my judgment that David is innocent of the charge.

Upon the whole case my conclusion is, and I do so report, that there is sufficient evidence that Louis Grelet has been guilty in France of the crime of forgery (Faux, to which is affixed o peine infamante) to warrant his commitment for trial under our laws; that there is no sufficient evidence, that either Auguste Parot, or Edward David have committed in France any crime provided for by our treaties with that nation, to warrant their commitment for trial under our laws. All which is respectfully submitted. Dated New-York, May 28, 1857.

A Notable Walking Match for $1,000—Mickey Free walks 85 hours and wins over Charles Trainor.

About a month ago some of the leading sporting men of this City got up a walking match between the two widely-known walking champions, MICKEY FREE and CHARLES TRAINOR. The match was for $1,000 a side; the one that gave out first, went to sleep, sat down, or tumbled off the plank, to lose the money. The place selected for the match was a hall in Ninth-Avenue. A platform forty feet long and five feet wide was constructed along the hall. A partition ran through the centre of this platform, leaving for each contestant a plank of thirty inches width.

The walking commenced last Monday night at 7 o'clock, and was kept up till 8 A. M. last Friday—eighty-five hours in all—when TRAINOR jumped off the plank, and MICKEY FREE was declared victor. Hosts of sports visited the hall during the continuance of the match, and many bets were made and lost upon the result. During the last three hours that TRAINOR kept on the plank he was completely out of his head, and did not know where he was. He would walk a few steps, then jump up and down and laugh out violently. Finally, in one of his crazy jumps, he leaped off the plank and was declared the loser. MICKEY, too, was nearly crazy—at least so he confessed since. The contracted hall and low ceiling with the dense crowd in constant attendance, kept the air exceedingly impure and made it more trying for the contestants than it otherwise would have been.

MICKEY FREE is an Irishman, 38 years old, 5 feet 5 inches high, and weighing 128 pounds. He was dressed in cotton flannel drawers and undershirt, striped Nankin pants extending to the knees, white woolen stockings, large heavy shoes, and a jockey cap. MICKEY has been the champion of several walking matches. He walked 1,000 miles in 1,000 consecutive hours, in 1852, in Jersey City. At the Zoological Garden, in Dublin, he walked 1,100 miles in 1,100 consecutive hours.

CHARLES TRAINOR is an Englishman, 31 years old, 5 feet 6 inches high, and weighs 140 pounds. Over white flannel drawers and undershirt he wore short pants of a light blue, fringed with green, and Scottish plaid pants, heavy shoes, with several cuts to let the air in. He has lately walked in two matches in California, in both of which he came off victor. His last walk was 115 consecutive hours against time.

SMALL-POX AT QUARANTINE.—The ship Navigater, Captain BUCKHOLD, from Antwerp, arrived at Quarantine on Sunday last, bringing 200 passengers, seven of whom were sick with malignant small-pox. The vessel and passengers will be detained at Quarantine till the period for the appearance of new cases shall have passed. In the meantime the passengers will all be vaccinated, and the vessel will be thoroughly fumigated and otherwise cleansed. It is reported that small-pox prevails at many of the European ports, and the report is probably true from the frequent importation of cases lately.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

WASHINGTON, Saturday, May 30.

Surgeon CALDWELL, attached to the ship Independence, under date Panama Bay, May 8, has unofficially advised the Navy Department that he has been informed there is a practicable route for a ship canal from Gulf San Miguel, Rio Savana, to Puerto del Principe, a few miles above which place the tide ebbs, thence about north by east over a low ground to Caledonia Bay or a little north of it; that the whole country is low, well wooded and watered, and abounds in game, and that a small party can cross from the Savana to the Atlantic ocean and return, making a path or road as they go, in less than ten days, without fear of the Indians or disease. Dr. CALDWELL, having obtained leave of Commodore MERVINE, hastily explored the route and reports the summit level on the route from Principe northerly to the Atlantic, and that is within eight miles of the Savana, and would not prove insuperable to engineering skill in constructing a ship canal.

The net amount in the Treasury subject to draft is nearly twenty-three millions, of which at New-York there is over eleven millions, at New-Orleans three millions, at Philadelphia two millions, and at the Branch Mint in San Francisco one million and a half.

General WALKER has telegraphed from New-Orleans that he will be in Washington as soon as possible.

The Army Medical Board, recently convened at New-York, have reported to the War Department that the following were found qualified for appointment to the Medical Staff:—ROBERT BARTHOLOMEW, of Maryland; JOSEPH C. BAILEY, of Pennsylvania; J. COOPER MCKEE, of New-York; KIRTLY RYLAND, of Missouri; and WM. A. CARSWELL, of South Carolina.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, May 31, 1857.

Orders will be given at once by the Secretary of the Navy, for the building of the five additional screw propeller steam sloops-of-war, for which an appropriation of one million was made at the last Congress. Three of the sloops will probably be built at the Navy Yards of Washington, Philadelphia and New-York, respectively. The other two will be given to ship-builders of merchant vessels, as the act provides that they shall be built by contract, or otherwise. Mr. WEBB, of New-York, will, it is thought, receive an order for one.

Great opposition is made by the architects and engineers at the Navy Yards to giving contracts to outside merchantmen shipbuilders, on the plea that they cannot build ships-of-war with the same advantage or knowledge of the wants and requirements of the service. This is all bosh, and the Secretary is determined to act independently of the advice of the old decrepid officers of the Bureaus, who have already too long hampered the service.

There is also a great demand for small vessels of war, and an appropriation will be asked for them at the next session.

Mr. CROSWELL, of the Aspinwall Mail Steamship Line, had a long interview with the Secretary of the Navy yesterday, concerning the Pacific Mail contract. The article in the States, exposing the impositions of the Panama Steamship Company, has created a great heat with that Company, which has produced stew, and CROSWELL is here to make explanations and put the best face on matters.

The Postmaster-General is said to be giving his attention to schedules for carrying the mail to the Pacific by the Tehuantepec route, and the contract will be given to the Tehuantepec Company in case of any interruption with the Panama Company, or difficulty with New-Granada.

It is not thought improbable by many, that our difficulties in Central America may yet lead to an open rupture with England, as it is believed the Administration is in favor of carrying out the Monroe doctrine, and will not permit England to hold territory on this continent. With Russia for our ally on the one side, and Brother Jonathan on the other, we need have no fears of the combination of England and France.

One thing is certain that our foreign relations are such at present as to warrant the increase of our Navy. It is to be hoped, also, that the Secretary will institute additional Courts, so that all the suspended officers may meet with speedy trials, and the Navy be restored once more to a healthy and pristine state of purity and activity. There are now but four Courts established, and the trials proceed very slowly. With two additional Courts all the officers could be tried before next December, so that the action of Congress in confirming the restored officers could be had at once. The country and requirements of the service demand the establishment of additional Courts at once. There is no weight in the argument that officers cannot be spared from other duties to serve on these Courts of Inquiry. It is very easy to take the commanders and other executive officers from the different Navy-yards, and let the officer next in rank act for them, until these trials are ended. They are now most important to the country, especially at this critical time, when, if a rupture should take place, the greatest embarrassments and confusion would arise from the present dislocated state of our Navy.

A dispatch has been received here from Governor ROBT. J. WALKER, who was on his way from Fort Leavenworth. The news he was constantly receiving from Kansas was of the most cheering and flattering character.

There was an unusual large attendance at the music in the President's grounds yesterday evening. The weather had been so rainy during the previous week that no music was had, and consequently, yesterday, all the bright and blooming beauty of our city turned out in force. The President seemed to enjoy the scene very much, as he is famous for his gallantry and courtesy. He is now looking remarkably well, and says he never enjoyed better health. UNO.

The Minnesota Legislature.

CHICAGO, May 30, 1857.

The Minnesota Legislature adjourned on the 25th inst. The principal business done during the session has been the incorporation of railroads and new counties.

The election for delegates to the Constitutional Convention will take place on the first of June.

Adjournment of the Massachusetts Legislature.

BOSTON, Sunday, May 31.

The Massachusetts Legislature adjourned, sine die, on Saturday evening.

Disasters.

LOSS OF THE BARK MEDINA, OF WATERFORD.

QUEBEC, Saturday, May 30.

The steamer Saguenay, on her first trip to the River du Loup, ran into the bark Medina, of Waterford, 30 miles below this city, striking her amidships. She sunk in 10 minutes. No lives were lost. The bow of the Saguenay was knocked in, but she ran ashore, sustaining no other damage.

THE SCHOONER CAROLINE ASHORE.

OSWEGO, Saturday, May 30, 1857.

The schooner Caroline from this port for Montreal, with flour, went ashore on Duck Island on Wednesday night, in a fog. Seven hundred barrels of flour were thrown overboard.

NEWS FROM KANSAS.

Gov. Walker at Lecompton—Arrest of Gen. Lane—The Apportionment of the Territory, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

LECOMPTON, Thursday, May 28, 1857.
JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Saturday, May 30, 1857.

Gov. WALKER arrived here Monday. He makes no speeches to the Squatters, but gives them wine and whisky paid for by the City Government.

Gen. LANE was arrested on Tuesday, for assault and battery, with intent to kill—an old affair. He made a political speech in the evening, to 1,500 persons.

CHARLES FAGGETT, the murderer of HOPPES, last Summer, is in prison, and in chains, awaiting trial, which commences on Monday. Judge LECOMPTON refused to admit him to bail. SIGMA.

[FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.]

LECOMPTON, K. T., Thursday, May 28.

Governor WALKER arrived in Lecompton yesterday. He was received very quietly. He read his inaugural. It was a long paper, and declares that the Territorial laws shall be enforced. It criticises the action of the Free-State men, and declares that the position taken shall be maintained by the whole force of the Government.

A Convention was held here to nominate candidates for Constitutional Delegate and Surveyor-General. CALHOUN JONES, of the Union, and a man named BOLLINO—alleged Pro Slavery—were nominated.

Gov. WALKER passed through Lawrence on his way here, and assured the people there that everything should be fair.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

ST. LOUIS, Saturday, May 30.

The Lecompton correspondent of the Democrat says the apportionment will disfranchise one-half of Kansas, and that only twenty out of forty counties will be represented in the Convention. Some counties, where no census has been taken, are allowed a representation on the list of voters on the old election books, and other counties have written to acting Governor STANTON for election precincts. He replied that he could do nothing, there being no law to supply the omission.

A card has been published, signed by 62 prominent persons, urging the State Legislature to reassemble on the 9th of June and complete the State organization.

Correspondence St. Louis Republican.

Gen. HARNEY arrived at Fort Leavenworth on the 15th inst. Col. JOHNSON, with a strong command, started yesterday to run the southern boundary line of Kansas. Major SEDGWICK, I understand, with a portion of the cavalry regiment, will leave to-morrow for the Cheyenne country via the Arkansas River. Col. SUMNER, with another portion of this regiment, is expected to leave on the 20th for Fort Laramie. Their movements are directed against the Cheyenne Indians, who inhabit the country along the foot of the mountains between the Platte and Arkansas Rivers, and who, during the past year, have been committing many murders and outrages.

European Intelligence and Telegraphic Discourtesy.

BOSTON, Sunday, May 31.

The Canadian Steamship Company's screw steamship Canadian is due at Quebec with Liverpool dates of May 20—four days later. The Canadian lines were on Saturday requested to open on Sunday evening, but the Telegraph Company, which enjoys a monopoly of the wires in that Province, refused to comply with the request of the Agent of the Press, notwithstanding his offer to pay the operators extra for their services. The morning press of the whole country will therefore, perhaps, be deprived of important European news for twenty-four hours because of the obsence of a spirit of accommodation on the part of the managers of the Canadian lines.

BRITISH POLITICS AND NEWS.

Lord Palmerston on the New Granadian question—New British Consul at Baltimore—Applicants for vacant Consulships in the United States—The China Missions—American Consuls in Siberia—Disaffection in the British Indian Army—Parliamentary Intelligence, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LONDON, Friday night, May 15th, 1857.

As the season advances political stagnation deepens, and the only source of excitement is the presentiment that such stillness must have a blow-up somewhere, or a tumble down somshaw of somebody. PALMERSTON'S speech on Tuesday, in reference to the New Granada complication, is the final extinguisher of the hopes entertained by parties here, that the elements of embroilment, on the Isthmus, would be availed of by his pugnacious Lordship. It has taken everybody by surprise, and stricken not a few with consternation. The speech was apropos of nothing at all, and was spoken for the evident purpose of being carried out by the morning's mail. According to the forms of the House of Commons, Mr. Weld, the well-known seller of maps at Charing Cross, and whose map of Central America differs so materially from that published in the United States, asked, obviously by preconcerted arrangement, whether it was true that an expedition was being, or had been sent to the New-Granadian waters for the protection of British interests. A simple yes or no, or as few words as would have sufficed to give an answer or no answer, as the case might be, was all that the circumstances called for. But much to the surprise of everybody, the noble Lord, suddenly throwing off all the incrustations of red tapery, and getting rid of the last vestige of official reserve, went into a detail of the business at Panama, censured the New Granadians, not only for their bad acts towards the United States, but for their bad pecuniary faith towards other nations, of course meaning England, praised the past conduct and future intentions of the United States, and said that, for his part, he would, like HAWTHORNE, not your Liverpool Consul, but the gentleman in Love in a Village, "do the same thing with the same face." The rules of the House admitted of no observation being made by any other member, there being no question under discussion; but if the assembly had been in the middle of full debate, it is doubtful if a word would have been said on this topic, except by the panegyrical parrots of the treasury perch, whose function it is to cuckoo every Ministerial note with exaggerated emphasis.

Astonishment sat on every brow. Even DISRAELI, whose Arab eyebrows are forever arched in supercilious disdain and wondering pity of everybody and everything, condescended to look somewhat startled, and stretching over to his deaf neighbor, Sir E. L. BULWER LYTTON, said, or is said to have said, but as he spoke loud there was no great difficulty in overhearing that he did say "Why PALMERSTON has turned filibuster." Although the House rose before dinner time, as it has done almost every day since it sat this session, there being really nothing to do, or rather PALMERSTON allowing nothing to be done, not a syllable appeared next morning in the papers. The editors had not received what the Chevalier WIKOFF would call the mot de order in time, and did not know what to say.

The day after, however, instructions seem to have been received, and accordingly, the Post, the Premier's own organ, which had always been preëminent for its anti American spirit, and has done a vast deal in encouraging the belief that PALMERSTON, however fickle in every other respect, was immutable in his antipathy to the stripes and stars, came out with a first leading article, eating its leek with most exemplary meekness and unconsciousness, declaring that BUCHANAN and CASS were anything but aggressive individuals, that the Panama Railway was the most important line in the world, and that all the world having a direct interest in the security of those traversing it, there was the greatest necessity for backing up the action of the United States. In short, the article is an echo, professedly as well as ostensibly, of the speech of Lord NAPIER, who has taken his friends most agreeably by surprise, for he never got credit for having half so much in him as has now come out, though being of the NAPIER blood, the votaries of the theory of "race" always believed that, faithful to the motto of his house, he would be "ready, ay, ready," whenever the opportunity might arise.

While speaking of Isthmus matters, it may not be uninteresting to add, that Mr. MARK, the British Vice-Consul at Bogota, who has been nominated Consul at Baltimore, has filled the former office at the former place for upwards of ten years, and then acted for a considerable time as Consul General and Chargé de Affaires. He formerly served in the Consulate of Malaga, in Spain, where a relative of his, Mr. W. PENROSE MARK, is at present Consul. We hear nothing more about the filling up of the New York Consulate. The friends of Mr. BARCLAY are as energetic as ever; but so also are the friends of other people, and our foreign office functionaries here will do or say nothing to indicate what is to be the result, but allow fresh candidates to enter the field every day. The applicants are now understood to exceed four hundred! and the cry is still they come; and when that crisis is to cease, nobody can tell till everybody knows the result, which will be, it is to be presumed, some time or other. The story current here is, that our authorities are waiting till your President gives some sign of a desire that Mr. BARCLAY should be again recommended. It is reported that such a sign would be accepted as a very grateful and gracious overture by our ministry as a condonation and expiation of all ill-feeling accruing from that unfortunate enlistment affair. As there has been no official notice, or notification, of the Crompton removal in the sense that is understood to be of record in diplomatic archives, and the incident is as though it never were, so far as the interchange of dispatches on that point between the two Governments are concerned, it is thought that the expulsion of the Consuls might be allowed to pass over sub silentio, in the same way,—and in that case Mr. BARCLAY might be restored without diminished personal prestige, and without detriment to the amour propre of England, or the self respect of the Republic. That our Government desire the restoration of Mr. BARCLAY there is no doubt; but, beyond that, it is highly probable that you will learn the particulars regarding his disposal sooner from Washington than we shall here in London, where, indeed, the matter is altogether unthought of, save by those directly interested individually in the issue. The Consulship at Cincinnati, which was created expressly for the late eccentric Mr. ROWECROFT, of whose sudden death, on his voyage home to this country such a mystery was made, although it has long been believed that there was "nothing in it," is to be abolished. Several other Consulships are likely to share the same fate in different parts of the world, as the present holders die off, or can be advantageously transferred elsewhere. At the same time new Consulships are being created in various other places, especially in the East; the requirements in the candidates are becoming so rigorous that the corps will soon become very select indeed; for, in many respects, it is amenable to the objections you lately urged with such piquancy and force against the employés of America in or at certain foreign courts or ports. It should be observed, however, that nearly all the recommendations in our enormous Blue-book on our diplomatic service, the result of the investigations of a Parliamentary Committee that sat several years ago, have, to this hour, been a dead letter. That the improvement now introduced is at the wrong end, commencing at the base instead of the head, which is just the complaint made against our aristocratic temperance agitators, who will insist on shutting up all public houses, but will equally insist on keeping open, all days in the week, the clubs and conveniences of the upper classes.

The foreign news this week is very unimportant. Although there has been an arrival from the East, it has added nothing to our knowledge of the state of affairs in China, which indeed seem in statu quo, at least was so on the 29th of March at Hong Kong. It appears that Lord ELGIN is to await at Singapore the arrival of the French plenipotentiary, and perhaps both will then await the arrival of the American plenipotentiary; but whether these three will then await the arrival of the Russian plenipotentiary, who is also to be at the diplomatic gathering off the Celestial shores, it is yet impossible to conjecture.

As it may have escaped you notice in the papers by Wednesday's mail, it will be as well to add here that the latest news from Siberia, received this week through Berlin, states that two American Consuls had just arrived at Irkutsk, having reached that place by proceeding up the Amoor. Notwithstanding the bad odor into which Russian railway shares have fallen, a proposition has been made for a line along the banks of the river just mentioned, and another from Nishnei Novgorod to the shores of the Pacific. "Russia," say the proposers of this scheme, "once had a route of her own to Asia; why should it not now be revived by a railway to the Pacific! The object of such a His great activity drew from the Marquis of Belmont, means of communication would be the civilization and the introduction of China into the community of commercial nations; and this would thus be better attained than by American, French and English fleets. Japan, too, would by this means be brought into closer contact with Europe." This idea, it may be observed, is not a new one—one of the unexecuted projects of PETER the Great being the bringing of the Pacific into communication with Europe by means of a canal to unite the Amoor with the Neva. The cession of the Sound dues has been followed by a mitigation of the Russian quarantine laws, vessels with clean bills of health being now permitted to enter Russian ports without the formalities formerly required to be observed.

The spread of disaffection through our native Indian army is creating considerable alarm in the minds of the few amongst us here who are conversant with the disease of which this is the most dreaded, though the most unprecedented symptom; and it is held to be the greatest possible inducement to Russia to pursue her Machiavelic courses in that quarter, a further stimulant being the rejection, for so it is very confidently reported here, by the Shah of Persia of the treaty negotiated by FEROUK KHAN with England. If this be so, and some time must elapse before the confirmation or contradiction of the rumor, a very singular signification will be imparted to the recent passages at arms between the English and Persians, and the prophecies of URQUHART will receive another of those extraordinary corroborations which have so frequently entitled him to the appellation of the "historian of the future" bestowed upon him by the greatest living historian of the past, who is not MACAULAY.

Mr. RUSSELL, the Times' historian of the Crimean campaign, has this week been giving his personal recollections of incidents he did not describe in his written narrative. The new matter is not very remarkable, nor is it particularly well told, but the celebrity of the man draws a large muster, notwithstanding the immensely-high price—15s. per ticket—the most expensive tariff ever on individual levied since the time of PAGANINI, and he had to come down a peg before he could fiddle anything like that amount out of the pockets of Bull, prodigal as that personage is of his means, in behalf of particular pets, of whom RUSSELL is one. The series closes tomorrow, but probably will be resumed when CONSTANTINE comes over! Not only is the Russian Grand Duke to arrive, but so also are the two Austrian Archdukes—a most desirable addition to this capital just now, which, though unusually full, is declared by the shopkeepers to be miserably empty.

It has already been stated that the sittings of Parliament are brief beyond all precedent. The session seems more in the last stage of Autumn than the first of early Summer. So completely paralyzed is all agitation of the ordinary kind, that the Marquis of BLANDFORD the other day asked the Premier to adjourn for the Whitsun holidays, as there was nothing to do, and there was no use in pretending to take time to do it. The Premier, who has recovered the use of his limbs again, was rather startled at this practical test being applied to his omnipotence, and said he would wait awhile before he gave an answer. To-night he has brought in his bill for the admission of the Jews, but it is premature to say with what success, as all depends on the means, whatever they are, he has taken to make things pleasant in the Upper House, where the real difficulty lies. Particular interest attaches to the question now, because, if the bill is not carried, ROTHSCHILD is pledged to give up his seat immediately for the City of London, and the cause of religious liberty as represented in this question, may be taken as lost for the present generation, as it is impossible that equally favorable circumstances could again be produced for many years to come, considering all that had been done in four consecutive elections and the potent appliances of every kind so long kept at work. If this bill were carried it would be an immense lever in the hands of PALMERSTON for working the promised Reform Bill of last year, that is, not for giving all that is asked, but as little as possible, which is of course what he means to give. Could he point to the liberation of the Jews, it would be a great triumph, and, as being so much more recent, would far outweigh the recollections of the more remote services of Lord JOHN RUSSELL, who has not shown himself in Parliament this week, but has been down to Manchester, which is the focus of attraction at present, in consequence of the daily increasing fame of its art-treasures collection.

Mr. STANLEY, as Chairman, commences his Committee labors respecting the Atlantic Telegraph Company, in the course of the ensuing week, and if the proceedings have advanced in any way worth reporting, you shall have details this day week. Mr. ROEBUCK having been snuffed out as a Reformer, by the promise of the Ministerial bill, as indeed LOCKHART and several minor agitators have also been, has turned his attention to extraneous selections, and for this purpose has called for a committee to inquire into our politico commercial position with Brazil—a subject well deserving of American attention. Time was when the honorable gentleman would have created an immense hubbub about the Newfoundland Fishery question, which has been ventilated here so ardently for the last few weeks, but has now quietly subsided, as Mr. ROEBUCK has also; and from the coolness of such a combustible you may judge of the general frigidity of the British public for all things pertaining to politics, past, present, or to come.

INTERESTING FROM FRANCE.

Prince Napoleon at Berlin—The Grand Duke Constantine's Visit—Festivities at Fontainebleau—Approaching Legislative Elections—The French Army, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Thursday, May 14, 1857.

The political world is not a little intrigued over the visit of the Prince NAPOLEON to Berlin. Since the Prince stands in a precisely similar relation in point of rank to the Emperor of France, as does the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE to the Emperor of Russia, ordinary etiquette requires that during the visit of CONSTANTINE to this country, the Prince NAPOLEON should not only not absent himself, but should show particular attention to the visitor. Instead of that, the Prince neither shows especial attention to CONSTANTINE, nor does he remain in the country to the end of his short visit. Many people, therefore, have construed this sudden departure of the Prince for the Prussian capital into a ruse to avoid an association with the Grand Duke, which is known to be disagreeable to him.

But although there is not much doubt that the Prince was glad of an occasion to avoid further association with his cousin's guest, it is quite evident that the mission to Berlin was suddenly decided upon in a long conference with the Emperor only thirty-six hours before he started, and that the mission is connected principally, perhaps entirely, with the new difficulties which have arisen in the Neufchatel question. At first it was supposed that the voyage was in view of a project of marriage; but this hypothesis was rejected when the Moniteur announced that the Prince had delivered to the King of Prussia an autograph letter from NAPOLEON on the Neufchatel affair. This incident, in fact, throws a flood of light on this interminable question, which stands thus: Switzerland has accepted the conditions drawn up by the mediating powers; they were not very satisfactory to Prussia; Switzerland made a false step in publishing the treaty before it was signed; Prussia seized on this circumstance to show her discontent, and was on the point of bringing forward new propositions, which would seriously compromise, or at least very much prolong the negotiation. NAPOLEON was tired of the question, and addressed a letter directly to the King of Prussia on the subject, in the hope of obtaining his signature to the treaty as it stands without further delay, and paid him the compliment of sending this letter by his cousin, the Prince NAPOLEON. It is expected that the Prince will bring back with him to Paris the King's consent. It remains none the less true, however, that any other member of the Imperial family, the Prince MURAT, for example, could just as well have filled the Berlin mission, and thus have allowed the Prince, whose duty it was, to accompany the Russian Prince in his visits about Paris. And it may also be true that the Prince is seeking a wife in the person of a Princess of Prussia, a relative of the Beauharnais family; but on this point we are not so well informed.

Whether it is by inclination or imitation, I am unable to say, but the young descendant of PETER the Great is pursuing very much the same round of observation and of fêtes, as were pursued by his distinguished relative more than a hundred years ago and subsequently by PAUL. If he does not stop as did PETER to lay hold himself of the carpenter's tools, he none the less examines with the scrutiny of a master workman the various objects of a practical nature presented to him. In the museums of art his visits are rapid and superficial; in the workshops they are long and scrutinizing. He moves from point to point to obtain information with an indefatigability that astonishes the methodical, slow moving Frenchmen. One of the Emperor's Chamberlains, a corpulent gentleman, who serves as the Grand Duke's guide, "The Grand Duke is a capital fellow. He has only one default—his indefatigability."

For three days the Grand Duke has been with the Court at Fontainebleau. A ball at the Palace, a grand hunt in the forest, and the torch-light feast of the bounds, were the principal features of the visit. The Emperor, Empress and Grand Duke led the hunting party; but the day was warm, the dogs lazy and the pack separated, after a short run, into several divisions, each one led off by new game. The hunt, however, in traditional language, was brilliant and exciting, and ended with the death of several deer. The Grand Duke returns to town to-day, goes to the Opera to night, visits more workshops to morrow, and Saturday leaves on a visit to the Government manufactory at Creuzot. From there he returns to Paris, and immediately sets out to visit the naval establishments at Bordeaux. From Bordeaux he goes, with the same object to Rochefort, then to the workshops of Indret, then to Lorient, then to Cherbourg, and from there he will pass over the Isle of Wight, to pay a visit of one day to the Queen of England—at her Majesty's request. From thence he will return through Belgium and Holland to St. Petersburg.

A good deal has been said in France about the jealousy of England in regard to the visit of CONSTANTINE to this country, and the attentions that are here paid him. The conduct of the English in Paris shows so clearly that this ill feeling really exists. I have heard English people say that if CONSTANTINE were now to go to London he would be hissed in the streets, and perhaps this is the very reason why he does not wish to go there. He certainly would not have ventured even as far as the Isle of Wight, unless he had been invited there by Her Majesty—an act which constitutes him the nation's guest, and imposes upon the people the same outward respect as is due their sovereign.

You may have remarked in the Queen's speech at the opening of the new Parliament the absence of any allusion to the French alliance. The Russians here are obliging enough to explain this omission by a desire of the English Cabinet not to wound the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE's feelings at the moment he is about to pay a visit to the Queen, by a reference to that alliance. This is very kind of the English Cabinet, if the hypothesis be true, but as diplomatic courtesy is not one of Lord PALMERSTON's failings, it would be well, perhaps, to receive it "under reserve." The omission, however, can hardly be attributed to a coolness between the two countries, since there is no evidence in support of such a supposition. There are those, nevertheless, who have placed this construction upon it.

On a late occasion the Minister of the Interior was called before the Emperor for a consultation on the subject of the coming legislative elections. The Minister desired his Majesty to indicate to him, in order that he, in turn, might indicate to the Prefects of the various departments where elections were to be held, who, among the old members, were to be eliminated, and what new candidates to be proposed. NAPOLEON drew from his pocket a complete list of all the candidates he desired elected, called by the law of the country "government candidates," and on this list there were but two eliminations from the Legislature as it is now constituted. One of these two names rejected by his Majesty is that of the Count DE MONTALEMBERT, who has lately more than ever made himself obnoxious to the Government by his writings on religious questions in connection with the State. The reader may ask, how is it known that the government list was thus furnished? He has only to recollect that in the act of the Emperor there was nothing that was not constitutional, that the law of the Empire confers on the chief of State the right to name a government candidate in every department, and gives him the power to enforce the election of that candidate. In the last legislature, that which expires this month, there were two gentlemen of title, talent and influence, who opposed the present régime and exposed the defects of the bills they were asked to vote for. So Napoleon is determined they shall not sit again, and he has placed two of his friends in opposition to them, with orders, no doubt, to the Prefects of Police, that these two men must be elected. But Napoleon is only exercising a right he was cautious to have secured to him in the law which re-enacted the Empire and named him Emperor, and the manner in which he exercised that right was not a secret that the Minister need guard for himself.

The standing army of France is hereafter to number a little over 600,000 men. A bill has just been presented to the Legislature, coming from the government, and which is therefore the same as a law, since it must necessarily pass, which calls for a conscription of 100,000 men on the class of 1857. From 1830 till 1849 the annual contingent demanded by the Government of the country was fixed at the invariable figure of 80,000 men. For each of the years 1853, 1854 and 1855, the necessities of the war obliged the Government to carry the annual contingent to 140,000 men. In 1856, however, the establishment of peace permitted a provisional diminution to 100,000 conscripts. By the provisions of the bill just read before the Legislature the Government proposes to adopt and to render permanent this figure of 100,000 men as the normal and definitive number of the annual conscription. The motives of this measure, already summarily indicated in the discourse of the Emperor at the opening of the session, are developed in the preamble which precedes the bill. Experience has demonstrated, according to this preamble, that, an annual contingent of only 80,000 men, with the aid of the volunteer engagements, (which are very limited in France,) do not produce, at most, but an effective force of 500,000 men. Experience has also demonstrated, according to the report, that this force of 500,000 men is insufficient in moments of crisis to insure the interior order and security of the country. The augmentation of 20,000 men now demanded by the Government, ought to produce a total effective force of 600,000 men, or more, and they hope, they say, to find in this force the elements of a permanent security to the country.

At this rate, it will be seen, that the levies of 1853, 1854 and 1855, must have given an effective of 800,000 men, or an extra force for the three years of 600,000 men. Now, what has become of these 600,000 extra men? 140,000 have been discharged since the war, and the official report of the killed and missing during the war is, if I recollect right, 70,000. Add this figure to the 140,000 of the extra force discharged, and there still remains 390,000 men to be disposed of. Where are they?

The King of Bavaria arrived at Marseilles yesterday, and will arrive at Fontainebleau, on a visit to the Court of France, to morrow, the day after the departure of the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE. The stay of the King in France will not be attended with as much display as was that of the Grand Duke, but honors to his Bavarian Majesty will not be wanting. After a grand hunt and a ball at Fontainebleau, the imperial and royal parties will come to Paris, where several fêtes will be given in honor of the visit. On the departure of the King, the Court will take up its Summer residence at St. Cloud. MALAKOFF.

Letter from Henry J. Raymond.

From the Syracuse Journal, May 27.

NEW-YORK, May 24, 1857.

To the Editor of the Syracuse Daily Journal:

DEAR SIR: I observe that in your paper of yesterday you attribute certain proceedings of the TIMES, which do not meet your approbation, to "the fact" that I, as its Editor, "was refused the position of U. S. Senator when PRESTON KING was elected to that office."

I beg to assure you that you were never more mistaken in your life. I never expected, sought, or desired to be elected U. S. Senator. When I first saw my name mentioned in connection with that office, being in Albany, I requested Mr. WEED to state that I was not a candidate for it, and should not permit my name to be used as such, under any circumstances. This he did in the editorial columns of the Evening Journal, as you may satisfy yourself by referring to them.

I do not wish to be understood as professing any disposition to disparage, or as affecting any indifference to the dignity and influence of that high office. Still less shall I express any dissent from your estimate of my qualifications for it. But I cannot afford to hold any office which diverts my time and attention from my private and professional pursuits. This was the reason which led me early last year to decline being a candidate for any political office whatever.

Permit me to add that I concurred heartily, with the great body of Republicans, in believing that it was due to the party, as well as to Mr. KING himself, that he should receive that appointment. Any other nomination under the circumstances would have been grossly unjust and unwise.

As this is merely a personal matter, not necessarily connected with any matter of newspaper controversy between us, I trust you will do me the justice to publish this note.

Very truly, your obedient servant,
HENRY J. RAYMOND.

AFFAIRS AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Foreign Appointments—Diplomatic Hospitals and Nurseries—Utah Affairs—No Demonstration Against the Mormons to be Made—The Case of Consul Jenkins—Curious Documents, &c.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

The Summer weather of the last few days has relaxed the energies and modified the "vim" of all sojourners at Washington, save the unfortunate applicants for the few good places still remaining in the gift of the Administration. Despite the season and the elevated temperature, the eagerness and assiduity of the latter class increase in an inverse ratio to the diminution in the number of places unappropriated. The foreign appointments now occupy the undivided attention of candidates for preferment, and their name is legion. We have here sick men who would like to travel in foreign lands for the benefit of their health; men with families, who wish to educate their children abroad; merchants who have retired from business a little too soon; landed proprietors, whose states are rather small for absolute reliance, and real or pretended millionaires, solicitous of opportunity to gild a European tour with the pomp, circumstance and tinsel of diplomacy.

Each feels that his claim for consideration is based upon reasons indisputable. It is the general impression, however, that Mr. BUCHANAN entertains some singular notions on this subject, and is not disposed to convert the corps diplomatique into either an infirmary for invalids, or a nursery for children. Nor has he any more sympathy with the project of swelling small incomes by diplomatic appointments to a rotundity justifying foreign travel for the sake of applicants, nor with the ambition to array ostentatious vulgarity in official costume. The President appreciates and respects the notion that American agents abroad should be active, zealous, industrious and capable men, qualified in all respects to discharge the practical duties devolving upon the representatives of an industrious, practical and commercial people—and that when their services are required, they should be selected and sent "on purpose."

Who shall be Governor of Utah is a question which has excited a good deal of interest of late, but within the last few days I have heard little on the subject. The old hackneys have "shied" shamefully at this appointment. They are all abundantly willing to sacrifice themselves for the good of the State, but each man is particularly desirous to select the place at which the offering shall be made. The decided probability is that BRIGHAM YOUNG will be left to pursue his career of terror and oppression for some time longer, as the impression is prevalent that nothing can be accomplished against him without a military force, and that it is now too late to send one out this season. We are still in the month of May, and thousands of men, women and children, annually, make the trip after the 1st of August, with limited means of transportation, lean purses from which to provide necessaries for the journey, and with all the arrangements for sheltering themselves during the coming Winter to be made after their arrival in the Territory. The emigration of last season, four-fifths of which consisted of women and children, started out in August, and made the entire trip on foot, hauling their bedding and provisions in hand-carts. If Uncle Sam's war men can't compete with women and children in their marches, and in ability to take care of themselves in a new and rude country, with all their advantages, appointments and ample means of transportation, surely they deserve the finger of scorn pointed at their puerile effeminacy.

If a well-authenticated report should reach the States, at any season of the year, that gold in abundance was to be had in the mountains of "Zion" for the digging, who doubts that within an hundred days an army of ten thousand men would occupy the mines, having traversed the plain in search of the root of all evil? Had we followed the extraordinary example of prudence now set us by the Administration in reference to Utah affairs, we should still be wondering what was on the other side of the Alleghanies, and Salt Lake and the golden shores of California would be to us sealed books.

Another objection made to a present move against BRIGHAM is the difficulty of concentrating a sufficient force for the purpose! There is one consolation,—to wit,—that bye and bye, when we get our growth, we may be able to lift the audacious Mormon rebel "out of his boots." We number only thirty millions now against his fifty thousand; but when we get as strong again, we may hope to hold him in check, unless with the aid of Polygamy, his people grow faster than we do. We have a reputation for being pretty good fighters,—what few there are of us,—and when fighting has to be done do it cheerfully. If my memory serves, Government never within twenty-five years past called for a thousand men for warlike purposes, that five times the number of muskets did not leap from their stocks into as many sturdy hands. What has become, so suddenly, of this readiness to serve in a good cause, that Mr. BUCHANAN dare not trust it for aid to maintain the Constitution and the laws. Be assured that there is no sincerity in the abundant promise of the administration to apply an immediate corrective to the terrible abuses now progressing in Utah. The task is an arduous one, the responsibility weighty and procrastination—that villainous thief of time—is likely to rob Mr. BUCHANAN of the laurels which a prompt and vigorous vindication of his oath to maintain the Constitution would justly attract to his brow. In future years, when he looks back upon the direful consequences of his perjury, if his conscience is not conveniently seared, his own remorse will be as bitter as the curses of the widows and orphans made by his neglect. J.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

The President says to some of his friends that he will not make any diplomatic appointments this week. He has also spoken freely of his disgust at the wearisome importunities to which he has been subjected on this score. Sometimes, he says, he will not appoint any of those persons who have worried and bored him. He has certainly informed some of his friends that all the diplomatic appointments which he intends to make, at present, are already agreed upon. I have no doubt that names are designated for St. Petersburg and Berlin.

The President has been too much and too long subjected to the nuisance of office-hunting importunities. His kindness and politeness, under the infliction, encourages this aggression. The public, to which he owes his energies, ought to interpose their opinion in his behalf, and thus shield him from further and perpetual annoyance.

The practice of personal solicitation for office, in a country so vast as this is, ought to be discountenanced, at least so far as the President is concerned. It is quite enough for him to perform his Constitutional duties. His Executive chiefs ought to be considered as competent to decide upon applications for office within their respective departments.

In regard to the principal diplomatic appointments the selection of proper men is a matter which concerns the President very deeply, inasmuch as it involves the success of his Administration, and the main object for which the Government was instituted. In regard to such appointments, he ought, for this reason, to be left to his unbiossed discretion. Recommendations and solicitations, from whatever source, are out of place, in regard to such appointments.

Mr. MORSE, late Special Minister to Bogota, is here. He thinks that the new Government of New-Granada will come to some reasonable terms. There are many influential Englishmen in the State, who desire tranquility, and who use their influence in favor of an adjustment. The British Government also favors it. The Government and the country of New-Granada are poor, and could not, Mr. MORSE says, pay the demand of four hundred thousand dollars, as an indemnity, in money. They must make some other concession. X. Y. Z.

[FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 29, 1857.

The NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES of the past two days, containing the account of the Piracy case, has been eagerly sought after, and at 10 o'clock on Wednesday not one was to be had for love or money.

The citizens of the United States will be shocked to hear that the District Attorney, KEY, came into Court and stated that the Government declined to prosecute the case, but upon being pressed by Mr. BRADLEY, VAN CAMP's counsel, who contended that no such power existed, and that the law of the land could not be so outraged, it was agreed that a hearing should be had at 10 o'clock to day.

I know not what there is behind the curtain to induce the Government to arrive at the determination, but if there be any just or other cause for such a course, I will find it out and furnish you with the full details. An impression prevails that JENKINS received authority from the State Department to hold the Court. There has been some double dealing and foul play somewhere, for I believe that neither Mr. MASON nor Mr. PIERCE ever knew aught of the matter, but that VAN CAMP was superseded without any orders from either of them.

It is not denied that the Court was held and the goods all confiscated and sold, but the plea is that Consul JENKINS had full authority for his acts. Yet this will not avail. The Nantucket folks are fully satisfied that VAN CAMP was representing their interests properly when he acted under Commodore MARVINE's advice in shipping their property on the Bodowe, and although CHAPIN swore that the sperm and whale oil with the bone was not VAN CAMP's, yet JENKINS insisted on selling it.

The case of CONWAY is a fair sample of the proceedings which I furnish you. I copy them from an official document, under the Consular seal and signature of J. S. JENKINS. It is as follows:

COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

CONSULATE APIA,
NAVIGATOR'S ISLANDS.

JONATHAN S. JENKINS, U. S. Consul, Presiding Judge in Admiralty.

In the case J. M. CONWAY vs. AARON VAN CAMP. In Rem. The undersigned Associate Judges of this Court, after a patient hearing, and upon a careful examination of the testimony offered in the case of J. M. CONWAY vs. AARON VAN CAMP, relating to the alleged seizure and sale of the New-Granadian bark Elvira, which said alleged seizure and sale transpired within the jurisdiction of the Consular Court of this place, have come to, and can give no other opinion, or give other decision, than the following:

First—It will be seen, by reference to the testimony, all of which was offered on behalf and on the part of the said plaintiff, and may therefore be supposed to be the most favorable to his, the said plaintiff's, interest, that the evidence of many of the witnesses conflicts upon many essential points of time of occurrences, and of modes of procedure and action of many of the parties interested, or said to be interested in the transaction connected with the complaint.

Second—That no testimony has established the fact that the Captain of the said bark was forced to deliver up the possession of the said vessel, or that he did so.

Third—That according to the testimony of the mate, Mr. ATWOOD and others, the Captain of the said bark willfully neglected to take the necessary steps to insure the completion of his voyage, all of which we believe to have been purposely and willfully neglected by him.

Fourth—That the testimony shows that the said Captain was acknowledged and obeyed by his crew of said Elvira for at least two months after his arrival at this port, and that bills for supplies furnished to said vessel, and for labor done on said vessel, for some time after her arrival, were refused payment by AARON VAN CAMP, unless they were properly certified to by Captain E. ALLEY, the master of the said Elvira, upon whose indorsement they were paid by AARON VAN CAMP.

Fifth—That the vessel was under a foreign flag; and that, therefore, AARON VAN CAMP, as United States Commercial Agent, had no control of the bark Elvira in his official capacity, and could not, therefore, compel her sale or give proper title.

Sixth—That from the testimony, the Captain of the bark Elvira appears to have willfully misrepresented that a Mr. COLBY was her owner, and by his general conduct in the matter appears to have been the principal in the alleged fraud.

Seventh—That it appears, from the testimony, that Capt. ALLEY had the papers of the Elvira in his possession for a considerable time after his arrival, amply sufficient to have refitted and sent her to sea.

Eighth—That the said AARON VAN CAMP did pay bills for expenses on account of the bark Elvira, such as seamen's wages and other claims, and that the amount realized from the alleged sale was so small as to leave a fair inference that the amount alleged to have been paid by the purchaser was little, if any more than said charges, no moneys, however, having been certified to as having been received at the sale.

Ninth—That from the testimony taken as a whole, the alleged fraud connected with the said vessel in Apia appears to have been committed by and with the consent of Captain ALLEY, who, as master of the Elvira, represented and acted as agent for her owners, and that by his act he has committed barratry, and is, therefore, personally answerable.

Tenth—That the said bark Elvira is liable to seizure by her lawful owners wherever found, and such proceedings would be upheld in any civilized country.

Therefore, in accordance with the before stated reasons we the undersigned Associate Judges of the United States Consular Court, can come to no, and can form no other decision than the following, viz: That the offence was barratry of the master, and that no just cause of complaint can lay against the said AARON VAN CAMP, and that therefore no damages can be given to J. M. CONWAY, plaintiff, to be paid from the property of the aforesaid AARON VAN CAMP.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and the seal of the Consulate of Apia, on this, 31st day of May, 1856.

HORACE D. DUNN,
JOSIAS B. LEEDS,
HENRY SEAMAN,
Associate Judges of the U. S. Consular Court of Apia.

UNITED STATES CONSULAR COURT,
APIA, Navigator Islands.

JONATHAN S. JENKINS, U. S. Consul, Presiding Judge.

In ADMIRALTY.—In the cause of J. M. Conway vs. Aaron Van Camp—In Rem.—I, JONATHAN JENKINS, United States Consul for the Consulate of Apia, believing the testimony in the above cause fully proves that AARON VAN CAMP, knowingly and willfully acting as the United States Commercial Agent for this port of Apia, did wrongfully, on or about the 2d day of July, 1855, sell and hold from the possession of said J. M. CONWAY, the bark Elvira; I therefore grant the said J. M. CONWAY $6,585 damages and the costs of the case; but as the Associate Judges in the case have differed with me in opinion, I shall hold this judgment as subject to the confirmation of the United States Government. The property of the said AARON VAN CAMP shall be sold, and the proceeds held in my hands, awaiting the action of the Government of the United States in the matter.

Given under my hand and the seal of my Consulate, this 31st day of May, 1856.

COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

CONSULATE OF APIA,
Navigator Islands.

To the U. S. Marshal of this Consulate—Greeting:

You are ordered to proceed on board the schooner Eudores, now lying detained in this port by virtue of an order of the U. S. Consul here, and taking such force as you may require, break open the hatches and sell and deliver the aforesaid cargo, according to the judgment and monitions to you issued from the U. S. Consular Court of this Consulate, dated the 29th day of May, 1856.

Given under my hand and seal of the Consulate, this 2d day of June, 1856.

[SEAL.] JONATHAN S. JENKINS,
U. S. Consul, and Presiding Judge of the Consulate Court.

This is a fair sample of a pile of the ridiculous mockery of JENKINS' great Court, which would swell too much for your columns; but this below is too good to omit:

UNITED STATES CONSULAR COURT,
APIA, Navigator Islands.

The President of the United States of America, to the Marshal of the United States for the Consulate of Apia, his Deputies, or any other—Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to take possession of the cargo of the brigantine Eudores, now lying in this harbor, and hold the same in safe custody, subject to the order of the Court, and also to deter the said schooner from leaving port.

Given under my hand and seal this 16th day of May, 1856, and the year of our independence the eighteith.

[SEAL.] JONATHAN S. JENKINS,
U. S. Consul, &c.

The Irish in Canada.

The New Era—THOMAS D'ARCY MCGEE's new paper, at Montreal—says of the Irish in Canada, that during the past eight years, the number of arrivals of that race has been 132,427, and adds:

"We believe the Irish in Canada to be sincerely attached to the present form of government, and to be daily growing in constitutional knowledge. This is the most desirable species of progress, and we will do our best, whatever it may be, to augment and confirm it. At home an Irishman's sympathies were often against the law, because law and justice were long and widely divorced in Ireland."

NEW PAPER IN SAN FRANCISCO.—The Evening Ledger is the name of a sprightly, vigorous and well edited newspaper, recently started in San Francisco, by PORTER & Co. It claims to be entirely independent in politics, and promises to deal frankly and freely with public abuses. It seems to deserve success, but how so many papers as San Francisco boasts, can be supported by a population of sixty or eighty thousand, we never could divine.

FROM FLORIDA.—We learn from an officer just arrived from Southern Florida, that Gen. HARNEY, with part of his staff, left Tampa on the U. S. Steamer Fashion, on the 20th, and was succeeded in the command of the Department by Col. LOOMIS, of the Fifth Infantry. Troops were still actively engaged in the field, and no orders had been received for their withdrawal. The scouts in the vicinity of Istopoga and Tohopocoliga had recently met with some success, capturing and killing several Indians. It is believed that Gen. HARNEY, upon his arrival at Fort Leavenworth, will be ordered to command a large force to proceed to Utah. The general health of the troops was good.—Charleston Mercury.

THE RUSSIAN CHURCH.—The established religion of the Russian Empire is that of the Greek Church, which is estimated to comprise 49,000,000 of the population: Roman Catholics, 7,300,000; Protestants, 3,500,000; Mahommedan, 2,400,000; Jews, 1,500,000; Armenians, 1,000,000; and Idolators, 600,000.

Mormonism in New-York.

A CHARGE OF HEAD OVER THE CHURCH—CURIOUS PROCLAMATIONS—HOW THE TIDINGS OF ELDER PRATT'S DEATH ARE RECEIVED.

The New-York Mormon for this week is peculiarly spicy. It contains the Valedictory of President JOHN TAYLOR, who is on his way to Utah, by command of BRIGHAM YOUNG, and follows it with the Greeting of the new President, Elder APPLEBY, who gives counsel to the Saints; and then comes a fierce article on the "assassination" of Elder PRATT.

President TAYLOR was a popular gentleman in his dealings with Saints and Gentiles, of suasive manners and imposing presence. His age is about 58, and he has been a Mormon for many years; once edited a Mormon paper in Paris, and established one afterwards in London, and has published several works. Since its commencement, he has conducted the Mormon with considerable ability and tact. That paper is not remarkable for its use of elegant language on occasions when it is called to speak of attacks upon "the Church," nor is it chary of its words at any time. The flash papers can hardly match it for "strong writing." It is, however, a faithful exponent of Mormon doctrine, and goes at its work with remarkable earnestness. Its new Editor is President APPLEBY, and in his hand it will lose none of its vitriolic properties, if we may judge from a communication under the signature of that individual, in which Judge DRUMMOND is abused roundly. There must be a growth of Mormonism hereabouts, that New-York knows very little about, if its aid suffices to give life to a weekly paper like this, published in New-York, and appearing to possess the elements of a healthy existence. It is useless to deny that Mormonism is spreading, and this fact renders it an important matter to know what the leaders are devising.

In his valedictory President TAYLOR states that he arrived in this City two and a half years ago—that his object in coming was, "to build up and strengthen the scattered Saints, and to defend the people of God," by the publication of a newspaper. He has directed the emigration of foreign Mormons, setting it in the right road to Utah,—has made arrangements with railroad companies for the transit of parties of Mormons; and with the aid of President RICHARDS and ORSON PRATT, who labored to that end in Liverpool, has been enabled to effect a complete organization, order and discipline on board of emigrant vessels containing Mormons. After a recital of what he and the Mormon brethren generally have done in the space of two years and a-half, the Ex-President indulges in a bit of pleasant writing, in reference to the attacks upon the Saints. He amiably remarks:

"Our arguments and facts have only been met by a continuation of abuse, falsehood, calumny and vituperation, and no man has been found who dared to meet Mormonism fairly on its issues. We have proved over and over again by positive, uncontrovertable testimony the falsity of their statements, the inaccuracy of their information, and the worthless and unreliable character of their correspondence: like a pack of hounds they still yelp and howl without any definite object. If their pens are dipped in wormwood and gall, their mouths filled with falsehood and abuse, and their sheets teem with vituperation and calumny, it is because of their nature."

Since President TAYLOR came into office, two Mormon Conferences have been organized in New-York and Pennsylvania, each with a presiding officer, and each holding stated sessions—the plan of operations being similar to that of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The conferences are free from debt, and are in a flourishing condition. The Saints in the East are happy. Their paper abuses everybody who is not a Mormon, and is read with gusto. Their book-shop, not far from the offices of all the leading dailies of the City, is thronged constantly by Saints, who drop in to get light and wisdom from headquarters, the prospect of affairs is exceedingly encouraging, and the hearts of the faithful are strengthened,—and yet President TAYLOR declares that he is glad to get away, and bids good-bye to New-York in this triumphant way:

"With very great pleasure we turn our back upon this Babel of confusion, corruption and abomination, and bend our steps towards the valley of the mountains, the Zion of our God, where truth reigns, where virtue is not only a name, but is in reality respected—where dwell the upright and honorable of the earth; where existeth the oracles of God, and where reside an honorable family circle who, with anxious eyes and throbbing hearts, are waiting to greet us on our return."

Brother BRIGHAM, who appears to bear rule over New-York Mormonism in a fashion as autocratic as that with which he governs the faithful under his own sway, has ordered TAYLOR to put APPLEBY in his place, and accordingly Mr. GEORGE J. TAYLOR, who had been delegated to fill his father's place, is summarily ousted, and APPLEBY, who had been ordered to Utah, receives counter orders, stays here, edits the Mormon, and keeps an eye to things generally. His proclamation is published at full length. The first counsel he gives the Saints is to subscribe for the Mormon, and then follows a homily on religious observances. APPLEBY's title, like that of his predecessor, is "President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in the Eastern and Middle States." Proselytism is urged as a duty, and the Elders are commanded to preach in every place they can find, and "every night in the week if possible."

The comments of the Mormon on the death of PRATT are very characteristic. PRATT, it will be remembered, was lately shot in Arkansas by an outraged husband, whose wife the exemplary Elder had seduced, and with whose children he was making his way back to Utah. The Mormon relieves its feelings as follows:

"Many of our cotemporaries are rejoicing over the bloody deed, justifying the murderer and spitting out their vengeance with the fury of hell that nestles in their corrupt hearts.

Though we deeply deplore the loss to the Church of such a great and upright man, and the bereavement to his family, yet we mourn not. His life has been one of honor and faithfulness; his days have been well spent in the service of his God; his name is revered by thousands and tens of thousands, and will be honored by millions yet unborn, when that of his cowardly assassin and those who have cheered him on to his damning deed, and who now rejoice over their crime, will be loathsome and a stink in the nostrils of God and good men.

This is forcible, if not elegant; but it is a very fair specimen of the performances of our interesting cotemporary.

The Mormon Tragedy in Arkansas.

INTERESTING DETAILS OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF ELDER PRATT'S DEATH.

From the St. Louis Republican, May 26.

Being in possession of all the particulars in the case of the Mormon Apostle, Elder PARLEY PARKER PRATT, I submit the following facts in addition to what you have already published. The following article from the New-Orleans Bulletin of December 19, 1856, is, with the exception of a few unimportant items, a correct statement of the case as far as it goes:

AN ILLUSTRATION OF MORMONISM.

We became acquainted a few days since with a short history of certain transactions, partly in this city and partly out of it, which affords a very fair illustration of the practical effect of their beautiful system of imposture which is shedding its lights and shadows upon the tops of the Western mountains. Possibly our readers may be interested in it—especially if they should ever, in the mutations of the future, be thrown within the valley where the Upas shoots its poison and reveals the ghastly carcasses which strow the ground, they may perhaps be enabled to turn it to a practical use.

With this object in view, we will briefly state the circumstances to which we allude, suppressing names for the reason that some of those affected, and most grievously affected, by those circumstances are of our own citizens, and to whom we would tender our profoundest sympathies. A few years since, a gentleman, his wife and three infant children, like thousands of others, left this city for the golden shores of the Pacific, the husband and wife dreaming doubtless that in the lands of the shining ore they should soon realize a fortune for themselves and their children. The lady, we may premise, possessed more than an ordinary share of intellect, which had been cultivated in a highly respectable degree by the care of fond and doting parents, who little thought of the use to which that intellect would, in after years, be devoted, or how their devotion would be repaid. Alas! they can feel how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child," or one that brings them only sorrow instead of joy.

The family is settled in San Francisco. Soon it the afterward the gentleman and his wife, in connection with a brother of the latter, chanced to step in on a Sunday to hear a Mormon missionary from Utah, who was holding forth in San Francisco. They were prevented by the bad weather and walking from attending their usual place of worship, and as the house where the Mormon was speaking happened to be in their way, they concluded after leaving home, and from mere curiosity, to go in and hear him. Fatal curiosity! Inauspicious day! What the particular subject of his discourse was which they heard we are not advised. After coming out, the husband and brother expressed themselves very freely upon the merits of what they had heard, and pronounced some of it little, if any, short of blasphemy. To the utter astonishment of both, however, the wife and sister expressed herself highly pleased with it. As a probable solution of such a mystery, we may say before proceeding further, that it subsequently turned out that she had heard a Mormon missionary while a young lady residing in one of the river towns in Mississippi. Polygamy was at that time carefully concealed from the outside Gentiles by the apostles of Jo SMITH, and stoutly denied. Probably the young lady was fascinated by the romance which the Mormon may have skillfully woven into the discourse, and seeds of blasting ruin thus lodged in her mind sprung up, forcibly, and bear apples of Sodom to turn to ashes in the tasting many days after. Be this as it may, the lady soon became strongly attached to the Mormon faith, and went frequently if not constantly to hear its apostle. In a short time he had acquired sufficient influence over her to cause her to resolve to quit her husband—if he would not accompany her—and repair to the grand rendezvous of the Latter Day Saints, as they style themselves, at Salt Lake City.

The determination once taken, nothing could dissuade her from her purpose. But the children, what was to become of them? The mother was devotedly, passionately attached to them, and she was determined to take them with her. The father and brother of course became alarmed. To prevent her from going, they knew well would be impossible, but they resolved to save the children from the yawning gulf which was about opening to receive them; and in pursuance of this resolution they determined to send them to their grand parents in this city. They were therefore taken when the mother was absent, placed on board a steamer, and safely reached New Orleans, were soon under the loving care and hospitable roof of their grand parents.

Who, however, can baffle or circumvent a determined woman, fanatic though she be, when her feelings, her pride and her affection all combine to spur her on to the accomplishment of her object? The very next steamer that sailed brought that mother to this city, chafing like an enraged tigress, whose young have been taken from her! Her parents, who had been made aware of the circumstances, now determined that she should not take her children from them, and that if she was bent upon dooming herself to destruction, she should not drag her innocent babes down into the foul abyss with her.

We pass over the struggles, the watchings that ensued in this city a little more than one year ago on the part of the grand parents of these beautiful children of some ten or twelve summers, to keep the mother from taking them to Utah, and of her efforts to obtain possession of them for that purpose. Suffice it to say for the time being she failed. How completely her whole soul had become wrapped up in the arnes and disgusting deception which had seized upon her like a giant, the reader can judge when we tell him that rather than relinquish joining the vile horde which contaminate the air of Great Salt Lake by their abominations, she actually tore herself from the children of her heart and went without them.

She did not, however, abandon her purpose. Finding herself baffled for the time being, she determined to change her tactics, the more certain to secure at a future day what she could not then effect. She went to Salt Lake City via St. Louis, and her parents had the melancholy satisfaction to know that if she was lost to them, her children were at least safe. There brother and sister, under the bountiful and fostering care which they received, budded like the opening rose beneath the sweet and genial influences of the Southern Spring.

They heard nothing more of her till one day last week, when they were struck almost dumb with amazement by her entrance into the family mansion. We pass over what followed, as the reader can much better imagine than we describe it. She had been to Utah, had been a teacher there, had boarded at Gov. BRIGHAM YOUNG's—only boarded—had seen much suffering there from famine, and had seen also the error of her ways. Said she had been mad, had now left the Mormons, and had come to live with her people and children, and to do what she could to make them happy. She asked them to restore to her once more their confidence.

Of course the delight of her parents was boundless. She did not profess, however, to have renounced Mormonism, but wished not to return to Utah, and still insisted that the Mormons were good people, and BRIGHAM and his associates in office true prophets. If these drawbacks upon the value of her repentance created a regret or a lingering suspicion in the minds of her parents, they did not express it, grateful and happy that she had done so much as she had, and made even a quasi confession as to the impropriety of her past conduct, and hoping doubtless that time would accomplish what was lacking in her complete recovery from her horrible delusion.

On last Saturday morning she requested permission to take her children into town—her parents live in the suburbs—to go shopping, and promising to return by five, or at most by six o'clock in the evening. The permission was readily granted, and they have seen neither her nor children since. She has accomplished her purpose; and she is of course on her way back to Utah with her children, to be thrust into the open throat of the grim visaged and horrible monster who sits midway upon the Rocky Mountains, lapping his repulsive jaws and eager to devour new victims as they become entangled in his foul, leprous coils. Her dissimulation was profound, was perfect. So much for Mormonism.

Mrs. MCLEAN's brother arrived in New-Orleans the next morning after her departure, wrote Mr. MCLEAN informing him of her proceedings, and started at once in pursuit of her. Having obtained what he supposed to be good evidence of her having come to St. Louis, he came on here, bringing letters from respectable parties, certifying to the high respectability of MCLEAN, and also of the family of Mrs. MCLEAN, all of whom were equally interested with the unfortunate father in rescuing the children from the destruction that awaited them.

But her plans of operation were deep laid and well matured in Mormon council, both in Salt Lake City and in St. Louis. And I speak advisedly when I say it, for I have the best evidence of the fact that the Mormon leaders, then and now in this city, were busily engaged in aiding and abetting those parties in their nefarious work. And although the most diligent search was made in every direction, we were unable to ascertain with any degree of certainty the whereabouts of the woman and children until the 9th of March, when we received information of their being in Houston, Texas. Mr. MCLEAN, the father of the children, had arrived in this city a few days previously. PRATT was then here, but on being informed of LCLEAN's arrival he concealed himself. A warrant was obtained for him, and diligent search made; but, with the aid of his fellow apostles, he succeeded in making his escape.

MCLEAN proceeded at once to Texas, but on his arrival there found that they had been gone some three weeks; but fortunately he obtained a list of fictitious names which she bore, and found a letter from PRATT, of which I herewith furnish you a copy, directed to her as Mrs. LUCY R. PARKER:

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 3, 1857.

DEAR MADAM: I am well, except colds. I have just received yours of Feb. 15. Your correspondence with Mrs. Holmes, of New Orleans, has probably betrayed me before this, as the Post-Office will be watched, and your handwriting known. If you and yours are safe when this reaches you, cease corresponding with N. O. Fly instantly from your present vicinity, Northward. Cover up your track behind you; do not look back or write back, or know any person back, neither in Houston nor elsewhere. Take stage or private conveyance, or any way you can get to northward in safety and with speed. I shall direct no more letters to you at Houston. My next letter will be directed to you at Fort Gibson, on the Arkansas River, Cherokee Nation, Indian Territory. Marvel not if I meet the same place myself before you get there. If not, you can stop there until I come or you hear from me. My name is Mr. P. Parker, or, if it cannot be otherwise, the next name can be added. You need not be a Mormon, or bound for Utah, nor need anybody know your business. You will only have to stay in Fort Gibson a week or two, and can hire your board or earn it, as the case may be. Only be reconciled.

If Brother GRINNELL or Brother HOODY, the Elders in Texas, wish to assist you, let it be in money or in ready and speedy conveyance, or in a boy or carriage, or some means or another to get you to Fort Gibson, Arkansas River.

My carriage will await you there, if the Lord will. As to your clothing from New-Orleans, I have not the most distant idea your father will send you one rag. But if he should, it is a mere chance if BOARDMAN ever hears from it; there may be fifty BOARDMANS in the city. It is a pity you did not give some certain address, such, for instance, as Brother E. SNOW, Box No. 333. It will not do, however, for you to write (back) to your father, because the postmark will put him on the Texas track. You can, however, write to your father, and request him to forward them to E. SNOW, basement of church, corner of Fourth-street and Washington avenue, St. Louis, Mo. Date said letter to St. Louis, Mo., and indorse it to E. SNOW, and he can mail it here to the old gentleman. You can indorse in a separate note to Brother SNOW his address, and a request to forward to him, or in case your father has forwarded them to some house in St. Louis. You can ask him to send a letter to E. SNOW, Box No. 333, St. Louis, Mo., containing an order and directions to get them.

Brother SNOW can then forward them to you this season. Do not make any effort to get your clothing unless you think there is some reason to hope they would be sent, because it will be giving them too much of a clue to your relationship, &c., &c.

I think I shall not start from here for Fort Gibson till I hear from you, say the 1st of April.

Miss SAYERS is well. She has sent the $100. I paid it to Mr. ——.

My money prospects are as usual. Debt yet due in St. Louis, still. Uncle and BETSEY are well and have written me well.

Latest news from home, Dec. 5. Our folks all well. AGATHA sends her love to you. All the family united and full of the spirit of the "reformation." Nothing else thought of in Utah. All the trains in: much sacrifice among the Hatch's.

Prest. J. M. GRANT died very suddenly on the last day of November last. It is a heavy blow to all. But he is gone to rest and is called to a wider and more useful field of labor.

Now cheer up, trust in God, seek his spirit, and may he bless and preserve you and yours, henceforth and for ever; and may you be delivered from the hand of the enemy and gathered home, is my earnest prayer and blessing in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Should Providence order it so that you came on the Mississippi, avoid landing in St. Louis; land in some neighboring town, and write to E. SNOW or to me.

The foregoing letter, together with other information received at Houston, afforded MCLEAN a clue to the whereabouts of the whole party. He started at once for Fort Gibson, when, on presenting his letters, he met with the warmest reception from the United States officers and soldiers, and from the entire community, and every possible assistance was rendered him until he met the Mormon party and recaptured his children. There being no law in that country by which the arch fiend could be brought to justice, MCLEAN had only the alternative left him of being exposed to his tormentings the remainder of his life, or of administering justice to him in a summary way. He chose the latter course and shot down the distinguished polygamist, and departed with his children to place them in security, when he will come out before the world to receive whatever the consequences of his act may be. Whether his action can be justified upon Christian principles or not I do not undertake to say, but if a case can be imagined in which the taking of human life is justifiable, this in my opinion is one. Imagine an artful polygamist stealthily insinuating himself into the affections of the wife of an honorable and high-minded gentleman, influencing her to despise and abandon her own husband and friends, and smuggle off his goods to the Mormon Church, and when their nefarious plans for running off his innocent and beautiful children were discovered, and the heart-broken father compelled to part with them for their safety, the villian takes his wife and the mother of his babes to his own licentious embraces, thus breaking up and destroying the happiness of a family forever—(as he had done in no less than four instances before)—bringing sorrow upon the gray hairs of parental affection. And not even content to stop there, but must come over the mountains, and by stealth rob the injured husband and father of his last remaining jewels of affection—to doom them to a life of infamy and prostitution! And tell me, where is the husband and father with the heart and spirit of a man, who would longer forbear and suffer such a fiend to live!

The public and the press of the country in which MCLEAN put an end to the tormenter of his life, unanimously sustained him in the act. A correspondent, writing from the scene of action, says: "No jail could have held him in Arkansas, had he been arrested."

I have other instances of Mormon outrages equally revolting, which have been perpetrated here in St. Louis, and in other places, which I will give you in another article. C. G. WARD, City Missionary.

The Murder of Elder Pratt.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

EDITORS COMMERCIAL: Your paper of the 27th inst. contained an erroneous statement concerning myself. I am not a brother-in-law of Mr. H. H. MCLEAN, who is reported to have killed PARLEY P. PRATT, a polygamous Mormon apostle. The mistake originated out of the fact that Mr. A. W. BARRITT, late Secretary of Utah, who was murdered, as is believed, by B. YOUNG's Danite band, was my brother-in-law. The information that I communicated to Mr. MCCOMB, (the father of the deluded victim of P. P. PRATT,) was solely intended to enable him to recover the children, and to enter into legal measures against PRATT. The fatal termination of this affair was altogether unexpected and unsought for by me, and it is with pungent grief that I contemplate the fact that P. P. PRATT, who was once an exalted apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, should thus fall by the judgment of God for having "given heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." ISAAC SHARON.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets—Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, May 30, 1857—6 P. M.

ASHES—Are unaltered. Pearls, $7 12½@$7 25; Pots, $7 12½@100 the Stock in the Inspection Ware-houses, 805 bbls., including 607 bbls Pearls,—and 298 bbls Pots.

COFFEE—The demand is limited,—but holders claim full prices. Java, 15½c.@15¾c.; Laguayra, 12c.@12¾c.; Maracaibo, 12c.@13c.; Rio, 9¾c.@11¼c; Jamaica, 11¾c.@12c.; St. Domingo, 11 5-16c.@11¾c.; Bahia, 10¾c., ₰ lb.

COTTON—Is heavy and languid, to-day, with more inclination to sell, than to buy.

NEW-YORK CLASSIFICATION.

Middling	14	14½	14¾	14¾
Middling Fair	14¾	14¾	14¾	15
Fair	14¾	14¾	15¼	15½

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour is quiet and somewhat depressed. Sales, 6,000 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$6 75@	$6 80
Straight State	6 80@	6 85
Extra State	6 85@	7 15
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	6 75@	7 05
Common to Good Superfine Ohio	6 80@	7 00

Extra Ohio	7 35@	8 75
Fancy Genesee	7 40@	7 60
Extra Genesee	7 75@	8 00
Extra Missouri	8 00@	10 00

Canadian continues heavy and languid. Sales have been reported of about 700 bbls., in lots, at from $6 75@$6 75 for superfine to choice extra, ₰ bbl. Southern is in demand, and is firm. The transactions since our last, comprise about 2,000 bbls very low Mixed to choice Extra, at $7 50@$9 50 ₰ bbl. Rye Flour is scarce, and worth $4 00@$6 for Fine to Superfine, ₰ bbl. Corn Meal is also rare and wanted at $4 25 for Jersey, and $4 50 for Brandywine, ₰ bbl.

GRAIN—Wheat, of prime quality, is scarce and stiffly held, but is not actively dealt in. Other kinds are plenty, heavy, and irregular. Sales, 13,000 bushels, including fair to good Canadian white at $1 50@$1 55; and inferior to very good Canadian club at $1 50@$1 62 ₰ bushel. Rye is very sparingly offered and purchased at from $1 25@$1 30 ₰ bushel. Barley ranges from $1 45@$1 65 ₰ bushel. Barley Malt, $1 70@$1 80 ₰ bushel. Oats are in less request and are heavy at 69c.@71c., for Western; 66c.@69c. for State, and 64c@68c. for Jersey, ₰ bushel. Corn is dull and drooping. Sales 21,000 bushels, at $1@$1 01 for mixed, in store; $1 02@$1 03 for yellow, and $1 01@$1 03 for white, ₰ bushel.

LEATHER—Mr. HULL states that "the demand for Sole continues good, but as many of the trade still manifest a disposition to realize at any sacrifice, there is no improvement to be noticed in prices, which continue to favor buyers. With our present light stock, both in the hands of dealers and manufacturers, were the trade to manifest any firmness, the market could soon resume its vigor and prices again be steady; I see no reason to change my opinion, that there is no more Leather in the process of tanning than is absolutely needed to supply the wants of the country, as the whole Western country, as well as the East and North, are mainly dependent on New-York for their supply of Sole Leather. The receipts this week have been liberal, and about equal to the sales. Oak is in fair request at former rates. The market is well supplied with Upper in rough."

A. Damaged, all weights, 21c.@23c. Hemlock, Orinoco, and B. A. Poor, all weights, 15c.@18c.; Hemlock, Slaughter, in rough, 2c.@20c., on 6 months' credit.

MOLASSES—Is dull and declining. Porto Rico, in hhds., at 30c @33c.; Cuba Muscavado, 30c @33c.; Clayed Cuba, 28c @31c., and New-Orleans, 35c. ₰ gallon.

NAVAL STORES—Crude Turpentine is very scarce and quiet, as before quoted. Spirits Turpentine is in demand at 50c., with several lots reported sold thereat, but the general asking rates are 51c.@52c. ₰ gallon. Tar is plenty and heavy. Resin finds ready purchasers at full prices.

PROVISIONS—Pork is depressed and tending downwards. Sales: 1,400 bbls., in lots, at $23 87½@$23 90 for Mess, and $19 37½@$19 40 for Prime, ₰ bbl. Cut Meats are in fair demand and are up to 11½c. for Hams, and 9¾c.@10c. for Shoulders, ₰ lb. Bacon is saleable and worth 11½c @13½c. ₰ lb. Lard is unaltered. The transactions since our last reach about 300 hds. and tierces, mostly fair to prime, at 14¾c.@14¾c. ₰ lb. Beef is in fair request at full prices. The transactions since our last consist of 820 bbls., at $14@$15 for Country Mess; $16 50@$17 for repacked Western Mess, and $17 50@$18 for extra Western do., ₰ bbl. New Prime Beef is dull. Beef $29@$31 ₰ tc. Beef Hams $23 50@$24 ₰ bbl. Butter is plenty, and in but moderate demand at 17c.@22c. for new Ohio; 18c @23c. for common to very good new State, and 24c.@26c. for prime to choice do., ₰ lb. Cheese is dull and heavy at 7c @11c. ₰ lb.

RICE—Continues in fair request, at former rates, @4 37½@$5 37½ for common to choice ₰ 100 lbs.

SKINS—Mr. HULL sums up the week's business thus: "DEER—The demand is quite active for the season, but as the stock in first hands is light, transactions are restricted. Sales have been: 6,000 lbs. Texas at 22½c.; 1,800 Florida at 27c., cash. GOAT—The demand is light; manufacturers are holding off in anticipation of a decline in the price of heavy stock, but holders of Mexican Skins show no disposition to force sales. Curacoa are selling in small parcels to manufacturers. Sales are 12,800 Curacoa at 63c @64c., 6@8 months."

SUGARS—Are plenty, heavy, and some what nominal in value. No important sales transpired to day. The month's receipts having been much more extensive than the sales, the accumulation of stock has been very decided, yet the parties owning the bulk of the available supply are not eager to sell unless at full prices. Refined Sugars are in demand at buoyant prices. We now quote STUART'S varieties thus: Loaf, 14¾c.; Crushed, 14¼c.; Ground 13¾c.; and Circle A. Crushed, 14¼c. ₰ lb.

WHISKY—There have been 470 bbls. Ohio and Prison sold at 36c.@36¾c. ₰ gallon.

FREIGHTS—Were quite dull, and rates were, for the most part, nominal. For Liverpool—Cotton, 3a.@3s. 6d. ₰ bale; Flour, 6d.@9d. ₰ bbl; Grain, 3d. ₰ bushel; Beef, 6d.@1s. ₰ tierce; Resin, 3d @9d. ₰ bbl.; and Heavy Goods, 10s.@12s. 6d. ₰ ton. For other ports, proportionate quotations. The latest charters have been: A ship from City Point to Venice, Tobacco, at 40s.; one from Bic, to London, Deals, 82s. 6d.; a bark from Richibucto to Bristol Channel, 80s.; a ship from Quebec to Liverpool, on private terms; one hence to Liverpool, heavy Pipe Staves, $55, and Rosin, 65s.; a bark to Turk's Island and back, Salt, 11c.; a brig from an Eastern port to Port au-Prince, $10, and back to New York, Wood, $5 ₰ ton; one to Trinidad Cuba and back, Sugar, 37½c., and Molasses $2 50; a schooner to Hunnacos, P. E., and back, 40c., and $3; one, 171 tons, to Nassau, N. P. and Eleuthera and back, $700; one, 140 tons, to Eleuthera and back, $625; one, 160 tons, same voyage, $500.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

United States Deputy Marshal CHURCHILL and his assistants, under arrest at Springfield, Ohio, for resisting the State authorities, were brought before a Justice on Saturday morning. CHURCHILL and ELLIOTT were arraigned on two charges—one for assaulting the Sheriff and the other for assaulting the Deputy Sheriff, with intent to murder—and held to bail in $2,500 each. The rest of the party, eight in number, refused to give bail, and were committed to jail.

Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER, the new Governor of Kansas, arrived at Lecompton on Wednesday last. He immediately delivered his Inaugural Address, in which he criticises the action of the Free-State men, and declares that the Territorial laws must be enforced.

The screw-steamship Canadian is now fully due at Quebec, from Liverpool, with advices to May 20—four days later—but, owing to the discourtesy of those having control of the Canadian lines o telegraph, in refusing to open the offices on Sunday, we are not advised of her arrival or otherwise.

In conformity to the decision of Commissioner BETTS, and orders from the State Department at Washington, LOUIS GRELET, one of the parties arrested here in January last for defrauding the Northern Railway of France, was, on Saturday, surrendered to the representative of the French Government in this City, who caused him to be placed on board the Arago, for France, in charge of officer DEVOE, one of the alds of the Chief of Police of this City. A writ of habeas corpus, returnable immediately, to produce GRELET, was issued by Judge CLERKE, half an hour before the sailing of the Arago, but it was not served, as, at an earlier hour, GRELET was conveyed down the Bay in a steam-tug, on which he remained until the coming of the Arago.

The amount in the U. S. Treasury subject to draft at the present time is in the neighborhood of twenty-three millions.

A few out houses that survived the first conflagration at Seguine's Point were, on Saturday night, burned to the ground by an incendiary. The trouble is only beginning.

Yesterday, seven passengers, sick with small pox, were taken ashore at Quarantine from the Ship Navigator, just arrived from Antwerp.

It is rumored that LOT C. CLARK is to apply for a new injunction against the Quarantine Commissioners, to restrain them from their duty, because, as he alleges, they have placed four buoys in the bay, in such a manner as to obstruct navigation and interfere with the oystermen. The writ had not been granted on Saturday afternoon. Still another injunction was applied for by a Seguine's Point oysterman on Friday, but it was not granted.

The Mayor versus The State.

We suppose there are very few people in the State of New-York, or any other State, who have any doubt about the way in which the controversy pending between the Mayor and the New Police Commissioners will end. If the Court of Appeals decide against him he will be forced to submit; if it decide for him his adversaries will submit; in any case the law will triumph, and the triumph of the law over individual wants and wishes is the thing which we have all most at heart.

We may safely assert, therefore, that our readers are not now so solicitous to the chances of the struggle in favor of either Democrat or Republican, the victory of the New Police or the Old. The feature in this disgraceful conflict which most affects our welfare, through the influence it will have upon our future, is the demoralization which it must unquestionably work, and has worked, amongst our "dangerous classes." We have borrowed this expressive term from the French, but we think we may give it a much wider signification in New-York than it can be made to bear in Paris. There it applies to the thousands whom competition drives into want, and want flings back on communism, to the thousands who, pursued from month to month, and day to day, by the attacks of a relentless enemy, fly in sheer despair to the wildest visions, and the least desperate enterprises. Our dangerous classes are not those who suffer from want, so much as those who confound the right of sharing in the government with the right to set all law at defiance. In common with all the great cities of the world, and in a greater degree than most of them, we suffer from the accumulation of the ignorant and disorderly in our streets and alleys. In other countries these men are wild beasts whom the government surrounds with a cordon of bayonets, and extirpates, without mercy, upon the slightest symptoms of disturbance. In this country they are our fellow-citizens, go with us to the polls, and may any day sit in judgment over us. In Europe they can be kept in order by fear and force. Here we must endeavor to restrain them by some moral power, or not at all. A French rowdy is terrible only behind a barricade, with a musket in his hands. Our rowdies become Aldermen, Common Councilmen, and Policemen, lead parties, sit in caucuses, vote away our money and divide our taxes between them. They collect together from the four corners of the earth, offcasts upon us, as upon so much carrion. Everybody, whose observations, mental, moral or political, have made other countries too hot for him, comes to New-York, and sets to work, might and main, to govern the City. Men too bad for California can here rise to eminence without ever mending their ways, without "taking a drink" or giving a stab the less. In municipal politics, a man's chances of success are in inverse ratio to his respectability. The Wilsons, and Woods, and Connerys, rise to power and place, not upon the shoulders of the citizens, but upon the shoulders of the waifs and strays of society, whom fortune has cast into our bye-ways, and who, for any interest they have in our municipal welfare, or any knowledge they have of the working of civic government, might as well have been born in Kamschatka and fed on blubber or train oil.

The only defence which the true citizens of this City, the men who build and beautify its streets, who toil in it, make their homes in it, and are really interested in its growth and prosperity, have hitherto had against the vagaries and excesses of these people, has been the sanctity of the law, and the general and profound conviction, pervading all classes and conditions, that its dicta must be obeyed, and that no men, or set of men in the community were powerful enough to disregard them. We have been allowing Mayor WOOD now, for some weeks, to prove by his example, that any bold, bad man, who finds himself clothed in a little brief authority, may not simply set at defiance the acts of the Legislature, but the decisions of the Judges; and if he cannot hope for success, may at least feel assured of impunity. What will be the effect of a precedent of this sort upon the minds of the unstable hordes who now shout in the Mayor's train, may be much more readily imagined than described. A certain weakness in the executive is one of the prices we pay for, and perhaps, we should add, one of the unavoidable incidents of the liberty we enjoy. We are forced to content ourselves with the minimum of Government, to leave as little as possible to the authorities, and as much as possible to the good sense of the community. When manners were simple and primitive, towns small, and the restraints of custom and religion and public opinion were strong, this laissez faire system worked reasonably well. But the times are changing, and we are changing with them. There is growing up about us a large and increasing mass for whom the schoolmaster has done very little, and for whom the pulpit does nothing at all. In dealing with them neither the traditions of puritanism, nor the self-sacrifice of patriotism, nor the discipline of education, render us any aid. The Courts of Justice and the acts of the Legislature have the great and only sure barrier we have had to oppose to their passions, their turbulence, or their rapacity. The Corporation has been hewing a breach in it, which we, in our life-time may never see repaired. We are allowing them to establish the principle, dangerous anywhere, but doubly dangerous in this country, that laws passed by one party legally qualified to legislate, are not binding upon another party which happens to find itself in a minority. We shall soon have every law submitted, before being carried into execution, to the examination of a caucus, and the final decision of courts of law reviewed by commission of delegates. No doctrine could be more agreeable to the majority of the rowdies of this City than the doctrine that their first allegiance was due to their party, and not to the State, and nothing could be more agreeable to the demagogues who earn a subsistence by groping in the mire of politics than to be exalted into the position of a Court of Last Resort. As soon as it is fairly established that "NED MORRISSEY" is not bound to obey any law upon which he has not had an opportunity of taking the sense of FERNANNO WOOD or "BILL WILSON," this State will be no longer a fit place for any man to reside in who has a coat on his back or a dollar in his pocket.

Pleasant Anticipations.

If cholera or yellow fever fail to pay us a disastrous visit during the approaching Summer months, there's no use of having epidemics to punish violations of the well-known laws of health. New-York is in an abominably filthy condition, and there seems to be little probability of permanent improvement. True, the mud in Broadway is rather under than over two inches deep, and in some of the uptown streets the same danger of exposing the pavement to public view exists. But in West Broadway, Church, Varick, Spring and a host in addition of side and cross streets, are as destitute of all suspicion of decency as our City authorities are of conscience. Change the contract system as we may, provide for ever so many new checks upon peculation, and penalties for failure to execute engagements, and pour out money like water, still the filth accumulates, as its horrible consequences approach their most malignant development. The ordinance against casting garbage in the streets is disregarded and the gutters reek with decaying vegetation, and putrifying animal substances. The garbage carts in some quarters have disappeared altogether since the warm term commenced, and as a consequence innumerable boxes and dilapidated barrels grace the sidewalks, filled to overflowing with slops and refuse vegetables, sending out their pestilential malaria with the industry of death.

Where shall we turn for relief? City Inspector MORTON seems disposed to essay it, and if he succeeds in the Herculean task will deserve the hearty thanks of the community. In the light of past experience we cannot but fear that some quibble of law may be interposed to prevent fulfillment of his benevolent intentions. What then? Certain pestilence may be anticipated unless some remedy is speedily found,—and it behooves all citizens to turn the question over and see what can be done. In Paris dirty streets are never tolerated. Before 9 o'clock in the morning every householder is compelled to have the pavement fronting his premises thoroughly swept, and the garbage and dirt-carts appear to carry off the collections by the same hour. These regulations are enforced with the clock-work regularity which despotism ever gives to all routine duties. Years ago a somewhat similar plan was in vogue in New-York,—and it becomes a worthy question for consideration whether it would not be better to progress back again to the system of that day. Already we see that the Beaver-street merchants have been constrained to resort to it on their own behalf; and unless some better plan can be devised which is just as simple and practicable, the City would be greatly the gainer by its general adoption and its enforcement by law. There is no use of talking about Quarantine to prevent contagious infection from abroad, while we continue to breed pestilence in our very midst.

EASTWARD, Ho.—The tide of travel sets strongly this season across the Atlantic. Never before was there so large a number of passengers taking a run across to Europe. The Asia, which sailed on Wednesday last for Liverpool, took 172 passengers; the Queen of the South, which sailed on the same day for Southampton and Bremen, took 164 passengers; the City of Manchester, which sailed on Thursday for Liverpool, took 240 passengers; and the Arago, which sailed on Saturday for Southampton and Havre, took 307 passengers—a larger number, we believe, than was ever carried from this port in an Atlantic steamer. During the present month fifteen steamers are announced to leave New-York for Europe, making an average departure on every other day. Four of these steamers will leave during the present week, and we understand that each will carry a large number of travelers, whose passages are already engaged.

The number of American travelers annually visiting Europe has greatly increased of late years. Prior to 1850 the number never exceeded 7,500 in any one year, and the average number for the ten years previous was not more than 5,000. In 1850, the Collins steamers commenced running, and 29,362 Americans crossed the Atlantic during that year. In 1856, the number of American travelers returning from Europe that landed at this port alone was 39,319. In 1855, the number landed at all our ports was 29,599; but in 1854 it reached 32,641.

This great increase of European travel indicates a general prosperity at home, but part of it is owing to the natural increase of the business and social relations of the Old and the New Worlds, and part to the increased facilities for travel offered by our steam-packets. But, if the number of Americans going to Europe increases, so does the number of Europeans coming to this country, for a few months' travel, yearly increase. At every adjournment of Parliament there are a score or two of members who run over here to take a look at the practical working of our institutions, instead of going on the Continent, or to the moors to shoot grouse.

Inventors and Inventions.

While we are unwilling even to seem to disregard the claims of inventors to respect for their genius, and gratitude for their services as the pioneers of civilization and progress, we should be neglecting the interests of our readers if we failed to remind them that the immense fortunes understood to have been made by the patents of WOODWORTH, COLT, GOODYEAR, WILDER, SHARPE, MCCORMICK and others, have brought into the field swarms of quacks and "confidence men," who, claiming to have made important and pecuniarily valuable discoveries, swindle the community out of an annual aggregate of millions. These "confidence inventors" have a set of slang phrases about the conservatism of the age, the indifference with which men of mechanical genius are treated, &c., and excite the sympathy of those who forget, or have never known, that what is true of past generations is not so of this one, especially in Great Britain, France and the United States, in which countries, so far from conservatism in material progress being the rule, enterprise and speculation, not only in inventions but in all sorts of novelties, have, on several occasions within thirty years, maddened the people into excesses which neither the warnings of the press, nor, in some cases, even the laws of the land could repress. In our own country, it is only necessary to refer back to the silk-worm, merino sheep, western land, Shanghae fowl, gold mining, and similar manias, to show that there is always to be found among us a large number of persons who, far from being unwilling to approve anything that promises to be useful, because it is new, are, on the contrary, too speculative, and too much inclined to believe, without sufficient investigation, that every new project has in it the elements of success. The facts would rather seem to be that the tendency to run into extremes, and after novelties, is so strongly marked a trait of the American character, that there is an over-anxiety to supply the demand which keeps the market constantly glutted with "notions." There has not been a week, during the last ten years, during which there have not been presented to capitalists more projects than could be carried out remuneratively, if backed by a capital equal to the entire specie circulation of the United States; and for every one feasible project offered there have been a half dozen worthless ones. But as society is now organized, it is simply impossible even for every good thing to be made to pay immediately. There is not money enough to carry them all through at once. Some things must "wait a little longer."

But to go back to inventors. The intelligent student of the industrial history of Christendom can not fail to have remarked that the time between the announcement of a useful invention, and its practical application to the purposes of life has been gradually growing less. We had hardly heard that the electric telegraph had been demonstrated to be practicable, before the news came that it was in operation between Baltimore and Washington; and while yet waiting to see how it would work, we heard that the building of some ten thousand miles of telegraph had been contracted for and commenced. It is, of course, unnecessary to state that this great invention is now in general use on both sides of the Atlantic, although it is only thirteen years since the world saw the first practical working line—that to which we have just referred. In like manner, railroads came into immediate use, immediately after their practicability was demonstrated. The same may be said of steam-presses, threshing machines, reapers, planing, and turning machines, and many other inventions, all of which would have been even much more readily adopted, were it not that Governments and private individuals had been robbed of so much time and money by pretenders that they considered it prudent to look with more or less suspicion upon every man who approached them with a novelty.

It sometimes appears, after listening to the story of a "poor inventor," that he is vainly struggling to convince a stupid world of the importance of a really valuable invention; and you sympathise with him, wish you had to spare the capital he requires, as much for your own sake as for his, and wonder that some men of means uninvested do not see it to be to their interest to furnish him with what may be necessary to place his invention before the public in a useable and salable condition. Such is the impression that the inventor's "tale of woe" generally makes on kindly disposed persons, who take the truth of his story for granted, merely because they have not heard it contradicted, and because, perhaps, it is easier to believe it than to thoroughly investigate it. Few persons have the disposition to examine an invention thoroughly before they think of taking an interest in it. It is only then, when they are to be called upon to put their hands in their pockets, that they really take pains to sift the merits of what is brought before them, and to form an intelligent estimate of its probable pecuniary value. And when such an investigation is instituted, in forty-nine cases out of fifty, one of these things will appear:

Either that, although the general principles of the invention under consideration are susceptible of practical application, and will doubtless be usefully applied at some future time, the inventor has not yet succeeded, for some reason or other, in so applying them as to make his invention of any market value:

Or, that the inventor's vanity and avarice are so inordinate as to disgust every one with whom he comes in contact, impelling him to speak of his invention in the most extravagant terms, and to place upon it so high a pecuniary value, that it would take a large fortune to purchase the most fractional interest in it:

Or, that he has no capacity, himself, to explain the merits of his invention, or to interest in it persons of means and intelligence, and that, while he will acknowledge, theoretically, the rareness and indispensability to his success of the capacity he lacks, he is so mean as to be unwilling to pay liberally those who do possess it, either in money, or in a fair share of his invention:

Or, that he is, at bottom, a dishonest, worthless fellow. Such, at any rate, has been our experience.

Meritorious inventors have no reason to whine about being neglected. Special laws for their protection and encouragement have been passed in most countries, and Judges invariably charge that these laws are to be construed in favor of patentees. World's Fairs have been got up in England, Ireland, France and America, for the exhibition of inventions; annual State and County Fairs are also held in many countries on both sides of the Atlantic, at which medals are awarded to inventors; valuable presents are often made to them by Governments, and rewards are often offered by Governments, societies and private individuals, for certain inventions and discoveries. For example, Mr. BRONSON MURRAY, a celebrated agriculturist in Illinois, has offered to contribute $5,000 toward a sum of $50,000, to be presented to any man who invents a steam plow that will work—not for the invention or for any part of it, but simply as a bonus for the invention of such a plow, that he and his brother agriculturists may have the privilege of buying as many as they want, at the inventor's own price.

Let us, then, hear no more of this "boo-hooing" of inventors. They are much more liberally dealt with than the majority of their fellow-citizens. Where one inventor has a liberal claim on our sympathy, fifty other persons have quite as strong a claim upon it, for the losses, and sometimes the total ruin, they have sustained by inventions. The inventor's victims are of all kinds, classes, dispositions, and calibres; the generous, the avaricious, the intelligent, the ignorant, the cunning, the simple, the rich, and even the poor—men, for instance, who have worked hard, for fourteen or fifteen years, to save some $500, which they are inveigled into investing in some "wonderful discovery," that leaves them penniless in a few months, and without the smallest chance of ever recovering a single dollar of their hard earnings. Few men can be found, known to have even as little as $100 by them, who have not often been importuned to put it in some invention by which they would be sure to make a large and rapid fortune; and few of those who have been thus importuned have been able, at all times, to withstand the temptation to go in and—lose. There are few journalists who have not been asked a dozen times to use the editorial columns of the paper they own, or for which they write, to "crack up" some wonderful invention, worth, according to the patentee, at least a couple of millions, at a price less than the successive amounts of matter, sought to be inserted, would cost in the advertising columns. If these men deal, or rather attempt to deal—for of course no respectable journalist will permit such a conversation to be continued—in such a niggardly manner with the press, an institution without whose aid, it would take them twenty years to notify the people of a single State, even of their, the inventors' existence, some idea may be formed of their probable demeanor toward less influential persons.

To conclude: a man cannot well be too cautious in investing his money in patents, however apparently brilliant the prospects; and it should be borne in mind that the fact of the United States or any other Government having granted letters patent for an invention affords not a particle of evidence that it is worth one cent. We venture to say that not one patent in fifty taken out in this country earns money. Inventors may make something by selling "rights" and "territory," or stock companies may be got up and money made by selling shares; but the inventions themselves are not successfully and profitably applied to the uses specified in the patents issued—no, not one in fifty.

Overladen Cars in Brooklyn.

To-day, about 3 o'clock, I was riding in Car No. 63, Fulton Avenue Line, the conductor of which filled all the seats, and admitted so many afterwards, that seventeen were standing at one time! Fully fifteen of these were taken from the Long Island Railroad train at Classon Avenue, and from a stage on Lafayette Avenue; a part of whom might, ought, and would have waited for the next car, since the line is not usually crowded when coming down so late in the afternoon. One gentleman, so weak from recent illness that he could hardly stand, was driven from his seat by this influx of women, children, and burly, swearing countrymen, and was compelled to stand during three fourths of his ride. Is there no remedy for such an abuse? Yours, BROOKLYN.

The above complaint is only one of a great number of a similar complexion which we have received. As to the question of a remedy to the evil complained of, we suppose that it must be left to the Brooklyn Common Council to answer it. The traveling public are most shamefully imposed upon by the Consolidated Railroad Company, and the only way to put a stop to their impositions is for the Common Council to compel them to put on a sufficient number of cars to accommodate the public, and by limiting the number of passengers that shall be carried in a car. The rule with the Company now is, as we understand, at the end of every week, or month, to discharge the conductor who has the smallest amount of receipts to show. This, it will be readily seen, is offering the strongest possible inducement to the conductors to crowd as many passengers into a car as possible, wholly regardless of their comfort or convenience. A five-cent piece, more or less, may determine whether he will be dismissed or retained. He of course will always stop his car to pick up a passenger, and, if it is a woman he crowds her into the car and expects some man to give up his seat to her. It is an ungracious thing for a man to be sitting at his ease while he sees a lady standing up; he naturally enough thinks what his own feelings would be if he saw his wife or mother standing in a crowded car while there were men sitting at their ease. But however repugnant it may be to a man's feelings in such a case, a sense of duty should cause him to smother his feelings of gallantry and make him keep his seat. By so doing he might be instrumental in compelling the Company to put on a greater number of cars. Ladies will thoughtlessly waft to an omnibus to stop and take them up, when they see it is already overcrowded, and when they know that they will compel a man to vacate his seat. We carry our gallantry, sometimes, to a very inconvenient excess. It is possible that a man may be weary, or feeble, or much less able to stand than the lady to whom, as a matter of course, he resigns his seat. We would advise our Brooklyn friends who find themselves so inconvenienced by crowded cars not to get into one when they see it is already well filled; and, when they are seated, to keep their seats until they arrive at the end of their journey. Perhaps this course, if it were perserved in for a sufficient length of time, might produce a much needed change.

PUNISHMENT OF WITNESSES.—Two years ago a young man in an interior city was arrested upon the charge of outraging the person of a poor and friendless girl, filling an humble, though honest station. Her statement of the event was very explicit, carrying conviction of its truth. The accused, being of good family, and enjoying the troop of friends with which prosperity always surrounds one, furnished the required bail and passed out at once into free air, to try his prowess upon some new victim. The accuser, on the other hand, having no moneyed friends to protect her, was locked up as a witness. By dint of the various expedients to which culprits resort when fearful of meeting the charges filed against them while they are fresh, the trial was put off from time to time, until two years had elapsed; and finally the accused was acquitted altogether upon some quibble which saved him from the Penitentiary, but not from the scorn of all lovers of justice who had watched the proceedings. Meantime, during the two years in which the farce was pending, the victim of his crime languished in a prison. He became the hero of sympathizing friends, and she endured the only punishment resulting from the wrong.

This case presents a striking commentary upon the absurd injustice of imprisoning witnesses. A day or two since another and somewhat similar illustration was furnished us nearer home. A servant-girl made complaint against her employer for a successful felonious assault in the presence of his own daughter. The circumstances of the case appear to have been peculiarly aggravated,—for, not satisfied with the accomplishment of his hellish purpose, the accused beat and kicked her in a shocking manner, until she was rescued by his wife, a policeman and others, who burst open the door of his room and arrested him in the very act. The assailant was taken before a Magistrate and released at once upon bail; and the girl placed under lock and key as a witness,—the duration of her imprisonment, in all probability, depending upon the ability of the accused to clog and delay the wheels of justice.

Such facts as these, which transpire every day, are a disgrace to American civilization, and loudly demand a reform. There is no sense in thus punishing innocent victims of crime for the mere chance of convicting the guilty. Nor is there any necessity for so great a perversion of justice. If stringent measures are necessary to enforce attendance of witnesses, others are not difficult of devisal which will accomplish the desired end without libeling common sense. Among these we would suggest a law making wilful non-attendance of a witness prima facie evidence of complicity with the criminal to be affected by his testimony. Or such failures might be made contempt of Court punishable by fine and imprisonment. Forbid, if needs be, the departure of a witness from the City under heavy penalties, and visit even the attempt to do so with severity. In these, or in a dozen other ways, may witnesses be secured, without a perpetuation of the present system, which offers a premium to concealment of crime, lest the witness should be made to suffer for his knowledge.

AN OPENING FOR WALKER.—As the Administration has not yet succeeded in finding anybody courageous enough to accept the Governorship of Utah, perhaps while our fillibustering countryman, Gen. WALKER, is looking about for a new field for the exercise of his peculiar talent, he might be induced to accept the post of Governor of Utah. But, if the President should not think it advisable to avail himself of Gen. WALKER's services, the late President of Nicaragua might lead the remnant of his army out to Salt Lake and commence a rival settlement of monogamists in opposition to the polygamist disciples of Jo. SMITH. There is plenty of room in Utah for a new settlement, and a rival community, with Gen. WALKER for a leader, in opposition to BRIGHAM YOUNG, would make that isolated territory a decidedly interesting spot.

Society Library.

Owing to the resignation of Mr. MCMULLIN there will be an election, to-day, of a new Librarian, to fill his place. Among the candidates we notice that Mr. A. D. WHITE, of the Mercantile Library, offers himself. Mr. WHITE is in every way fitted for the post, and his long experience in the Mercantile Library renders him a peculiarly proper person.

WALKER'S FRIENDS IN NEW-YORK.—The Nicaraguan sympathizers here seem to exhibit a remarkable apathy in view of the fete closing events at Rivas, in which their admired friend and Chief took so melancholy a part. We had expected to see them already, if not fired up with indignation, eagerly passing round the hat for material aid, at least holding a great mass meeting in the Park or Constitution Hall, Canal-street, to denounce the Central American allies, and appointing a committee to make stupendous preparations for the reception of Gen. WALKER, when he arrives in New-York. But we hear nothing of such a movement, and cannot learn that any steps will be taken in this direction, except to honor Gen. HENNINGSEN with a serenade this evening.

Col. TITUS has remained in private quarters since he landed from the Illinois, and the story is that he will soon depart for the South.

Gen. WHEAT will visit North Carolina for a week, and on returning intends to apply for admission to the bar, and settle himself down to the practice of law.

The several officers of the Nicaraguan Army now in this City, are ready to join WALKER's proposed new expedition against the Central American States, but having seen the elephant, declare their unwillingness to stir a peg unless provided liberally with funds.

DEATH OF MR. THEODORE BANKS.—THEODORE BANKS, Esq., President of the New-York Corn Exchange, died at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning, aged 48 years, after a protracted illness. His loss will be severely felt by the mercantile community, among whom his energy, probity, and decision of character gave him a high standing. Mr. BANKS was a member of the first Arbitration Committee of the Corn Exchange, a tribunal recognized by law for the settlement of disputes among merchants, and whose decision is final. At the time of his death he was Director of the Market Bank and of the National Fire Insurance Company. He survived JOHN L. BUCKLEY, whom he succeeded as President of the Corn Exchange only two months, and his remarks on the occasion of Mr. B.'s death, seemed prophetic of his own end. A meeting will probably be called at the Corn Exchange to-day. The funeral will take place from his late residence, Seventh-street, corner of Second-avenue, at 2 o'clock on Tuesday.

NEW-YORK RUFFIANS.—The death of young QUINN, from injuries received [illegible] Sunday last during a fight on board a Staten Island ferry-boat, will, it is to be hoped, have a tendency to check the scenes of violence and ruffianism which [illegible] every Sunday enacted, not only upon the Staten Island boats, but upon all the boats plying to the [illegible] suburban resorts. New-York ruffians appear to be more ruffianly and more cowardly than those fellows elsewhere. They possess scarcely a [illegible] of manhood, and only attack when [illegible] there is neither the will nor ability to resist. They are only in their element when mutilating [illegible] upon some helpless by strong drink, or assaulting [illegible] foul language, if not with their fists, some helpless woman who may happen to be for the moment without a protector. These wretches make passage through some of our City avenues disagreeable, if not dangerous to decent folk, and have taken such entire possession of our suburban resorts and the ways leading to them—where for the time they are not within reach of the policemen's club—that decent people are reluctantly compelled to seek other and less desirable quarters for that recreation so necessary to denizens of a large city. This evil is growing, and has already become too great to bear with further patience.

On Sunday evening a number of ruffians such as we are speaking of came on board the Staten Island ferry-boat Josephine, as she was leaving her landing-place for this City. The boat was crowded with men and their wives and families, returning happily to their homes. Any common blackguard, it is to be presumed, would have been constrained to act with common decency in such a place and on such an occasion—would have refrained from giving too loudly vent to his brutal nature, or from betraying too plainly his innate debasement. But, as we have already remarked, a New-York blackguard knows no decency, and acknowledges no restraint save that made necessary by brute force. And so, the ruffians of whom we are speaking, acting up to their natures, took advantage of the occasion to create a disturbance, to knock down unoffending passengers, and insult and trample beneath their feet some helpless women. The majority of the passengers fled hither and thither in terror, while the drunken ruffians, rejoicing over the confusion which they had created, rushed wildly about, brandishing open knives, bidding defiance, and threatening to "take the boat," and declaring with oaths and profanity that their "party" could and would whip some other "party" that they believed to be aboard. A fight ensued, and several young men were stabbed, one of them in the abdomen, "and so badly," says the report, "that more than ten feet of his entrails hung from the wound!" The wounded man died, of course, and at the inquest held upon his body some facts were elicited which, were it not for the frequency of the scenes they depict, might well excite surprise and indignation.

Thomas Burns being sworn, said—I reside at No. 14 State-street; I was at the Staten Island Ferry gate at the leaving of the 6 o'clock boat, the Josephine; I saw Quinn, Donnelly and others go on the boat; they appeared to be intoxicated; I saw them attempt to trip up a man who was accompanied by a woman; I saw Donnelly put his knee in the back of a woman; they did this as they were passing along; when I was on the boat, I heard one of the party in which Quinn was say that they "Had party enough to take the boat and what was on it;" after the affray, I saw Donnelly and another, certain, insulting females and others on the boat; Donnelly did not appear to be very drunk while on the boat; I was somewhat acquainted with the deceased.

Matilda Murray, residing at No. 88 Greenwich-street, was sworn. She said: I went upon the promenade deck of the Josephine upon it leaving Staten Island; in a few moments I saw three young men chasing about the deck; soon after, saw them beating a boy about seventeen years of age; the boy was crying, and tried to get away; the next I saw was the prisoner, who was being attacked by the same party.

Now these scenes of ruffianism should be put down speedily. If the strong arm of the law be not long enough to reach a few rods down the Bay, or upon and about our surrounding waters, and protect life and limb, people will take means to protect themselves.

THE JUNE FASHIONS.—There has been a sharp conflict all through May between furs and muslins, in which the furs seemed for some time likely to come off the winners. But the muslins are now in the ascendant, and there is a reasonable prospect that they will remain so for a couple of months at least. Fans are in the market again, the shop-windows are filled with tempting displays of "thin goods," the bookmen are publishing Arctic explorations by way of refreshing summer reading, and the fashion seekers are spending their few last days in town in posting themselves on the summer styles.

These are light and airy; there is not so great a proclivity to the sombre colors as in the last season. Bright-colored, satin striped and figured barèges and grenadines, organdies, moires and China silks are favorite dress materials. Dinner and evening dresses are made with double skirts, flowers being worn for promenade. Dress skirts are very full and very long, and are still sustained by the powerful crinoline. It is hardly reasonable to suppose that, after surviving the trying ordeal of Winter, hoops will collapse in the Spring, when it is rather sensible to wear them. Sleeves are necessarily large and wide to harmonize with the skirt, and are flounced and trimmed to correspond with it. Long basques with bretelles are worn, as are also short, belted waists. Fringe, guipure lace, and drop-buttons are favorite trimmings. The brown and white China silks with a deep circular of the same material, are worn for traveling dresses, as are linen over-dresses, with deep, hooded circulars, with black trimmings.

The Summer bonnets are feathery compounds of chip, blonde, crape, and lace, with sloping crowns and low capes. Lilies of the valley, mixed with grass, lilac, myrtle, tulips, and magnolias are favorite flowers of the season. The new bonnets are less profusely trimmed than formerly.

The deep silk paletots are much worn, though they will probably give place to the lace mantillas as the season advances. These are of the shawl form, and are richly embroidered. Black lace shawls are novelties which are much admired. Some very pretty silk mantillas are made with a double cape, trimmed with ruches, and finished with a deep fall of lace.

The new coiffures are mostly of flowers, and are in bright colors. Wreaths of foliage, interspersed with red berries and sprays of gold flowers, are much in vogue.

Lace berthes, trimmed with ruches and flowers, and edged with lace, are worn with evening dresses, as are also fichus, which are still high in favor. Full undersleeves of tulle, with small puffings, ornamented with lace, are worn with full dress toilettes.

SPRING FESTIVAL OF THE GERMANS.—To day is the grand gala day of our German population. It is "Pfingst Montag," or, in English, Whitmonday, a day universally celebrated as a holiday on the continent of Europe, and by the Catholics in England, as immediately succeeding the festival of the Ascension of the Saviour. With the Germans, in their own country and in this, the land of their adoption, the festival assumes the poetic character of a "Welcome to the Spring." They hail it with flowers, banners, music, singing, dancing and lager bier. Of the latter "item" there is enough drank to set afloat a moderately sized vessel. Women, children, all participate.

The festival to-day promises to be one of the best of its kind held hitherto in this vicinity. Between twenty and thirty of the "Sängerhundes," or Singing Clubs, of this and adjoining cities, with their guests, will hold their revel at Conrad's Garden, Yorkville. The conveyance will be by the steamboats Washington, Splendid and Union, from the foot of Broome-street to Eighty-sixth-street, and by the Second and Third-avenue cars. Twice the usual number of cars will be run for their accommodation during the day. The programme of the concert contains some of the choicest airs from the most celebrated German operas.

At 8 o'clock in the morning the members of the "Sangerbund" will assemble at the Metropolitan rooms, in Hester-street, and will march along the Bowery to Chatham-street, thence through the Park, up Broadway to Broome-street, where they will embark on the above steamer for the ground at Yorkville.

The day will, also, be celebrated at other places with the same spirit. The "Turners" will keep the festival at Williamsburg, on some spacious grounds, about a mile from the ferries. Members from this "Bund" will attend from Morrisania, Strattenport, Staten Island, Jersey City, Newark, Patterson, Rahway and other places.

The Williamsburg City Horse Guard will, also, have a good time of their own, independent of other associations.

THE SPIRITS ON THE PYRAMIDS.—The spirits that made use of Mrs. CORA L. V. HATCH, at the Brooklyn Institute, on Friday night, enunciated the opinion that the Pyramids of Egypt were not thrown up by any mechanical power, but were "carved, fashioned and cemented from the rock of the earth—cut out of the solid rock."

Amusements.

The regular theatrical season draws to a close and in a fortnight a Summer campaign will have commenced at three or four of our up town theatres. This promises abundant amusement for our country friends, but we very much doubt if it is an amusement that will pay our managers. Heavy losses have been sustained during the past Winter, and it is with the sanguine hope of recovering themselves that this hazardous experiment is made.

A great number of benefits take place during the present week, some of which deserve more than passing mention. Foremost on the list is a complimentary Benefit to be given to Mr. E. A. MARSHALL at the Academy of Music, on Wednesday next. Mr. MARSHALL is the lessee of the Broadway Theatre. Owing to the vexatious proceedings of a neighbor, he had to shut up last year for a considerable period. He reopened his doors at a late period of the present season; but the prestige of the house was not an end; the patrons of the establishment had sought other places of amusement. Mr. MARSHALL is an injured man and deserving of sympathy. In addition to this fact, is another which will probably have a greater influence on the public. Mr. MARSHALL has provided one of the best bills ever offered to the public. MAX MARETZEK'S Italian Opera tronpe, with GAZZANIGA and PHILLIPS at its head, will give the "Trovatore" under the bâton of the redoubtable chef. BIGNOLI, AMODIO and COLLETTI sustain their original parts. Previous to the opera the comedy of "Simpson & Co." will be given, with Mr. BLAKE, Mr. DAVENPORT, Madame PONISI, and Mrs. LIZZIE WESTON DAVENPORT in the leading parts. After the opera a dramatic novelty, in the shape of the French Vaudeville company of New Orleans, will be presented. The members of this troupe will perform the one-act piece of "Edgard et sa Bonne." With a programme of such unquestionable excellence, it will be hard indeed if Mr. MARSHALL does not obtain a crowded house. Performances commence at seven.

On Friday, MAX MARETZEK takes his farewell benefit at the same establishment.

At WALLACK'S THEATRE to-night, Mr. STUART produces the popular comedy of the "Serious Family," with Mr. WALLACK in his original character of Captain Murphy Maguire. The caste in other respects is remarkably strong. Mr. LESTER is Charles Torrens; Mr. WALCOT, Aminadab Sleek; Mrs. VERNON, Lady Creamly; Miss GANNON, Mrs. Delmaine; Mrs. HOEY, Mrs. Torrens, (as first played by her in this country.) A new and eminently interesting reading of this popular work may be expected. The farce of "I'll tell your Wife" concludes the entertainments.

At LAURA KEEN'S Theatre, Mr. T. B. JOHNSTON takes his benefit to-night, and the present season closes The Theatre will be reopened on the 3d of June, by which time some additional means of ventilation will be introduced for the comfort of the audience. Mr. JOHNSTON'S bill is as follows: BUCKSTONE'S comedy of "Married Life," and the burlesque of "Variety."

At NIBLO'S Garden the Ravels produce an entirely new performance called "Bianco, or the Magic Sword." It has been in preparation for some time, and will be produced with the splendor and completeness for which this Theatre is greatly famous.

At BURTON'S Theatre, Mr. MARK SMITH, a very deserving and excellent stock actor, takes his benefit. A new farce called "The Coroner's Inquisition," "The Unprotected Female," "The Stage-Struck Tailor," and "The Rules of the House," will be played on the occasion.

At the NATIONAL THEATRE three popular pieces are presented: "O'Neil the Great," "Salmagundi," and "The People's Lawyer."

At BARNUM'S MUSEUM the new and successful Drama, called 'Fraud and its Victims," enters on its second week, and will be played every evening. In the afternoons a variety of entertainments.

At BUCKLEY'S the new Burlesque of "Aladdin, or the Wonderful Lamp" is still the feature, with minstrelsy, &c.

ACADEMY HALL.—A dramatic entertainment will be given at this place this evening, as a complimentary testimonial to T. C. FAULKNER, Esq., a gentleman well known as one of the leading members of the Burton Dramatic Association. Four pieces will be given, in three of which Mr. FAULKNER will sustain the leading characters.

Marine Matters.

GOING BACK.—The ship Wyoming, which sailed from Philadelphia for Liverpool on Saturday morning, carried away 12 cabin and 118 forward cabin and steerage passengers.

Steamship Delaware, COPES, at Philadelphia 26th, 24 hours from New-York, saw a schooner of about 100 tons, loaded with fresh fish, capsized on Joe Flogger Shoal, with two boats alongside, stripping her.

Capt. EVANS, of the whale-ship Arctic, of Fairhaven, was accidently killed at sea on the 23th of October last. Capt. E. had fallen overboard while the ship was going fast through the water, but caught hold of a rope thrown to him, and was being drawn on board, when, as he was opposite the ship's quarter, she settled down suddenly, striking him on the head and breast, and breaking his collar bone. He died soon after being taken on board, and was buried at Mongonui, where he was married eight months before. He was a native of New-Hampshire, and 29 years of age.

The steamship Arago, LINES, which left at noon on Saturday, for Havre and Southampton, carried 307 passengers, said to be the largest number that ever crossed the ocean in one steamer. She carried $1,053,000 in specie.

Ship Sultan, at Quebec, reports having seen a ship on fire 30th April. The Affghan, of Bristol, sent a boat to her, but found she was abandoned—afterwards learned they were taken off by the Ocean Queen, of London.

A Russian war-ship, of 4,000 tons, 320 feet long, and 52 feet in breadth of beam, is to be constructed by WILLIAM H. WEBB, of this City. She is to be a screw steamer, and the engines will be built at the West Point Foundry, under the superintendance of Russian officers. She is to resemble the new Frigate Niagara.

It is said that a steamer is also to be built for the navigation of the Amoor River in Northeastern Asia, forming the boundary between the Russian and Chinese Empires.

The naval contract for "small stores" has been awarded to WILLIAM MATHEWS, of New-York; the contract for salt water soap to E. & N. WINCHESTER, of Boston; and that for candles to H. B. WILLIAMS, of Boston.

NEW-YORK YACHT CLUB REGATTA.—The annual Regatta of this Club, which will take place on Thursday next, promises to be the most brilliant affair of the kind that has been witnessed in our waters. On Saturday, at the special meeting for that purpose, held at No. 4 Pine-street, a large number of new members were enrolled, and it was anticipated that before the closing of the books to-morrow night, there would be more yachts entered for competition than on any previous occasion. As arrangemsuts have been made for steamers to accompany the yachts to the Lower Bay, those who desire it will have ample opportunity of witnessing the race. The steamar Erie is engaged for the exclusive use of members of the Club.

☞ Counterfeit new cent pieces are in circulation, intended, no doubt, to mix with the genuine in large quantities; they will easily deceive persons at a casual glance, but being a pewter like all that kind of coin, a greasy feel and a slumpy sound that any boy will recognize.

The Metropolitan Police.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners have put a new and large sign upon their office in Whitestreet. It reads, "Office of the Metropolitan Police Commission." At their meeting on Saturday, the following draft of precinct divisions was submitted, and laid over for consideration to-day:

The Metropolitan Police District is hereby divided into 25 precincts. There shall be seven districts in the City of Brooklyn and County of Kings, and seven Inspectors or Captains and 28 Sergeants assigned therein, and said precincts shall be laid out and bounded forthwith by the Deputy Superintendent doing duty in Brooklyn, and said precincts from one to six respectively, with two sub-stations.

There shall be 19 precincts for the Counties of New-York, Richmond and Westchester, numbered from 8 to 26, respectively, and bounded and comprehended as follows:

That part of New-York County by and comprehended within Chambers-street, Broadway and Whitehall-street, to North River, and round the North River to Chambers-street, shall be one precinct, and shall include the bay, harbor, and Richmond County, and be numbered 8.

That part of New-York County bounded by Chambers, Centre, Nassau, Spruce and Ferry streets, Peckslip and the East River to Whitehall-street, and through Broadway to Park-row, and thence to Spruce and Nassau streets, and including the Park, shall be another precinct, and be numbered 9.

That part of New-York County lying between Chambers street and Centre street, Broadway and the North River, shall be another precinct, and be numbered 10.

That part of New-York County lying between Peckslip Ferry and Spruce, Nassau, Centre and Chambers streets, Broadway, Canal street, Bowery, Catharine-street and the East River, shall be precinct No. 11.

That part of New-York County lying between Catharine-street, Bowery, Grand-street and the East River, shall be precinct No. 12.

Between Grand-street, the East River, Houston-street and the Bowery, shall be precinct No. 13.

Between the Bowery, from Canal to Houston-street, and between Houston, Canal and Wooster streets, shall be precinct No. 14.

Between Canal and Houston streets, Bedford and Leroy streets, North River and Wooster street, shall be precinct No. 15.

Between Houston, Bedford and Carmine streets, Sixth-avenue, Fourteenth-street and Broadway, shall be precinct No. 16.

Between the North River, Fourteenth-street, Sixth-avenue, Carmine, Bedford and Leroy streets, shall be precinct No. 17.

Between Houston-street, East River, Fourteenth-street and First-avenue, shall be precinct No. 19.

The present Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-first Wards, shall each be precincts, numbered respectively, Nos. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24 and 25.

The present Twelfth Ward and Westchester County, shall be precinct No. 26.

Some private matters were then talked over, after which the Board adjourned.

The old Police Commissioners did not have a meeting on Saturday.

There have been no further accessions to the ranks of the new Commissioners, nor any further change in the direction of the returns or reports from the different Station-houses.

THE BROOKLYN POLICE.—The Deputy Superintendent of Police in Brooklyn, decided on Saturday last to no longer recognize any person as connected with the Department who refused to obey his orders. In accordance with this determination, the returns from the four Districts to the "Chief of Police," were refused on Saturday morning when brought in. The Captains of these Districts were not a little taken aback by this proceeding, and as each had his returns refused, each sought the Mayor for advice. The Mayor, after consultiog his advisers, informed the Captains that he could not receive the returns, but advised that the returns be left at the office of the Deputy Superintendent. This they did, and the returns were at once destroyed.

The Excise Commissioners—Card from Mr. Haskett.

NEW-YORK, Friday, May 29, 1857.

To the Editor New-York Daily Times.

DEAR SIR: Your reporter, under the article "Our New Liquor Law," in Saturday's edition, has not correctly stated my views in relation to the sum to be charged for a licen e. The mistake, I think, occurs in the omission of the prefix "dis" to the word "agrees." He has been so very accurate hitherto, that I think the error lies in the printer, not in the reporter. The paragraph alluded to, says "He says that Mr. HOLMES and myself agree 'that the large hotels should pay the maximum $280, and the small fry the minimum sum of $30.' As this may mislead the applicants for a license, I beg leave to offer this correction, with my views in relation to this question. I look upon this point in this law as the greatest of its many errors. The genius of a free government is to make every member equally bear its burthens and enjoy its benefits. This law, however, proposes to tax a citizen in one business more than another in the same business, and then to follow up this wrong by taxing one member of this class more than another of the same class. I cannot think that the Legislature ever intended to establish a sliding scale, and thus propounce a doctrine of unequal taxation, and leave the sacred rights of the citizen to the caprice of the Commissioners of Excise.

I have no doubt that the intelligent portion of the Legislature contemplated a fixed sum. Now, as I am desirous to fairly interpret and administer the law in a liberal and impartial manner, according to the necessities of a great commercial emporium, I think that a fixed sum of thirty dollars, and no more, should be charged, and I shall vote for this, and no other sum. I am opposed to the doctrine of raising a revenue from one class of our citizens, under the name of "license;" yet, for the sake of the public tranquility, I will sign a license when the smallest sum is charged. If my brethren in the Board outvote me, and propose to establish a sliding scale, they will exclusively enjoy the felicity of signing such licenses. I never sought an office but for the purpose of establishing a principle, and cannot unite in the administration of one, when it forces me to concur in the violation of one of the cardinal principles of our free Government—equal taxation. I am, with profound respect, your obedient servant,

WM. JAY HASKETT, Com. of Excise.

Cleaning the Streets.

On Saturday, at noon, pursuant to advertisement, the Committee on Street cleaning met in the City Hall to hear avidence.

Only one person appeared, namely, Doctor WINNE, who afforded the Committee soma alahorate statements as to tha modes of street cleaning in Great Britain, and on the Continent of Europe. After a rapid sketch of the existing and much better arrangements as to street cleaning in England, France and Germany—especially in Paris, Vienna, Berlin and other large cities—he alluded to Turin.

In that city the streets are cleaned each day; in Summer at night, in Winter early in the morning. Garbage carts pass around at stated intervals, and remove the refuse from the houses. Genoa is cleaned much in the sama way as Turin.

In all the cities to which attention had been directed, it is not common to feel the annoyance of dirty streets, except in England. The continental cities are exceedingly clean. As to the condition of the American streets, with those of the Old World, the speaker said: "I t compares badly; England is now aroused to the subject by the high mortality among the poorer classes. America is slowly becoming similarly aroused. In Baltimore the streets are cleaned once a week; but there, Nature furnishes an excellent scavenger, and in Summer by frequent and violent showers of rain. But in no city, at home or abroad, have I found such perfect and absolute neglect as in the City of New-York." "I think the facilities for cleaning quite as great here as in any spot on earth. Each of the populous cities of Europe is situated in the midst of a highly cultivated surrounding country; hence the value of city manure. But I make no doubt that even here, street manure will come to be immensely valuable, and will be demanded and recognized as the demand for market stuff comes to be increased, possibly for some years it will not pay the entire expense."

"In one case near Glasgow twenty thousand pounds was expended for machinery to use sewer water, and the plan was found extremely profitable and economical."

"As to the connection of the matter with public health, New-York is confessedly in a very wretched state. In examining the hills of mortality I find that in 1810 the annual City deaths was 1 in 46; in 1815, 1 in 41; in 1820, 1 in 37; in 1825, 1 in 34; in 1830, 1 in 39; in 1835, 1 in 41; in 1840, 1 in 39; in 1845, 1 in 37; in 1850, 1 in 33. If we assume the population in 1856 to be 800,000, (a large estimate) there will be 1 death in every 34. Now from 1810 to 1855, although all the elements of superior healthfulness have existed, the rate of mortality has constantly been increasing. In other cities it is found that in exact proportion as public health is attended to, mortality is diminished. Those who reside in the City must pay the penality, New-York is skirted on either side by a majestic river and a fine substratum for draining, gneiss rock; in addition to this, the Croton water has been introduced, so that so far as air and water go, none of the other cities of the Union will compare with ours. And yet, spite of these natural advantages the rate of mortality has been steadily on the increase. The reason is the entire absence of municipal regulations in reference to health. This is further exemplified by the immense infantile mortality of New-York. In 1845, the number of deaths under 10 years of age was 44 per cent. on the whole number of deaths; in 1850, it was 45; in 1855, it was 52 per cent. I cannot determine the precise localities where mortality makes its heaviest demands. No donbt it is in the filthiest and most crowded places. In Boston, the deaths in three localities were one in 73; in another, one in 53; in another, one in 17. From various circumstances, it may be inferred that the mortality a susceptible of reduction, perhaps not solely by street cleaning, nevertheless it is one of the most important Departments of the City Government. In that way not only mortality might be reduced, but also the amount of sickness always on hand. The amount and cost of sickness, in a pecuniary point of view, is important, inasmuch as a population unable to sustain itself is a charge upon the public purse. The miasm from decaying animal and vegetable matter, is an absolute provocative of fever, dysentery, cholera infantum, and similar acute and dangerous diseases. Personal uncleanliness also very largely tends to increase pauperism and crime; the greater the elevation of character, the more the stimulus to become respectable. But if you place the poor in unclean tenements, they lose their self respect and are in a direct way to become paupers and criminals. The subject has attracted much attention in England. It has been found there, that there is a very direct relation between filth and crime. The speaker presented to the Chairman a pamphlet—Sanatory Condition of New Orleans, by Dr. SIMMONS, from which several of the preceding tabulated statements had been taken. The following comparative list of annual mortality was also handed to the Chairman:

ENGLAND	1 in 46	SWEDEN.
Surry County	1 in 53	Country	1 in 44
London	1 in 41	Town	1 in 23
Liverpool	1 in 29	AMERICA.
Manchester	1 in 29	Lowell	1 in 50
BELGIUM.		Massachusetts	1 in 54
County	1 in 46	Baltimore	1 in 40
Town	1 in 36	Charleston	1 in 48
FRANCE.		Savannah	1 in 33
Country	1 in 40	New-York (City)	1 in 34
Paris	1 in 33
Berlin	1 in 32

Mr. ALEX. T. STEWART, of Broadway, addressed the Chairman as to the consequences and the fear of some inevitable pestilence. Warmth, moisture and filth would certainly produce sickness. The mischief to the material interests of the City, in such event, would only be estimated by millions of dollars. Strangers would be prevented from coming. Business would be at a stand, and neighboring cities would have the advantage to which we are entitled. No matter what it might cost, if done well and economically, it would be cheap at any price to keep the streets clean.

CRUELTY TO SEAMEN.—The subject of abuse and cruel treatment of seamen by ship officers has been presented for judicial action by the Grand Jury for the United States Circuit Court in this District.

On the 7th of last April, SAMUEL TAYLOR and SAMUEL OSBORNE, first and second mates of the Samuel Russell, were charged with the murder of one of their crew, who went by the name of "Dutch Bill," during a voyage from China to Hampton Roads, Va. The first mate was examined before Commissioner WHITE, and the complaint was dismissed for lack of confirmation. The same men were a few days after examined before U. S. Commissioner WHITE, charged with besting to death one of the crew named WILLIAMS. The testimony being conflicting, the complaint was dismissed.

WILLIAM STACY was examined before the same Commissioner (April 7) on a charge of "cruel and unjust punishment inflicted upon JAMES WM. GORDON," one of the crew of the Christiana, of which the accused was second mate. The Captain testified that "the second mate gave a general order to the complainant about fixing the vessel's tackling, and because he did not commence as the mate expected he would, the latter beat and kicked him, from the result of which he was laid up for a week." It is a well-established rule of law supported by decisions in England and in the United States, that the subordinate officers have no authority to punish seamen, when the master is on board, unless by his orders, (Abbott on Shipping, 180 n.,) or where immediate punishment is absolutely necessary.

C. BROOKMAN, the master of the American bark J. N. Brookman, was arrested on a charge of assaulting ENWIN WILSON, the second mate, with a belaying pin He was brought before Commissioner MORTON, April 22, and, after a brief examination, discharged.

Charges against Messrs. RUSSEL, GORDON, BURKE and HUBBARD, officers of the ship Cultivator, were investigated before Commissioner STILWELL, and during the early part of May the complaint was dismissed, for want of sufficient evidence.

FRANCIS SWIFT, mate of the ship Andrew Foster, was tried upon two indictments—one for cruel and unusual punishment, and one for assault with a dangerous weapon—before Judge INGERSOLL, in the United States Circuit Court. The Jury found a verdict of "Not Guilty," May 21.

In the case of the United States vs. GEORGE W. LYMAN, which was an indictment against tha first mate of the ship Middlesex, for an assault with a dangerous weapon, and for a cruel and unusual punishment, on motion of the defendant's counsel, Judge INGERSOLL, May 22, postponed the trial for the term. The case thus goes over to October. It is not, we are informed, the intention of the United States District Attorney to allow the charges to go unprosecuted. On the contrary he is determined to prosecute the case with vigor. LYMAN has been held to bail in $8,000 to appear at the United States Court for trial in the October term. The affidavits of the non-resident witnesses have been taken before the proper authorities, while those residing in the City have entered into bonds to appear.

Day before yesterday, CHARLES STEPHENS, second mate of the ship Mary E. Baulch, was tried upon an indictment for murdering a boy named Ross on the high seas about a year ago, by striking him on the head with a marlin-spike. The Jury found accused "Not Guilty."

The following extract from a law of the United States, approved March 3, 1835, if properly enforced, will protect the rights of seamen:

SEC. 3 And be it further enacted, that if any master or other officer, of any American ship or vessel on the high seas, or on any other waters within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, shall from malice, hatred, or revenge, and without justifiable cause, beat, wound, or imprison any one or more of the crew of such ship or vessel, or withhold from them suitable food and nourishment, or inflict upon them any cruel and unusual punishment, every such person so offending shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding five years, or by both, according to the nature and aggravation of the offence.

Southern District, Grand Jury Room of New-York, ss., May 26, 1857.—The Grand Jury for the United States Circuit Court, would respectfully call the attention of the Court to the number and frequency of the complaints by seamen of cruelty and abuse by ship officers.

Not only has the number of cases of this description, which have come before this Grand Jury been large, but it is striking to observe the high-handed coolness with which these barbarities are practiced. The sailor is beaten not only with the rope's end, but with the belaying pin, the marlinspike and handspike, and even with weapons deliberately provided before hand. Metallic knuckles seem to be a favorite instrument of cruelty. It need hardly be added that great injury, disfigurement, and sometimes death, result.

Humanity, as well as sound commercial policy, have long cried against this evil, yet it sadly prevails and increases.

The Grand Jury feel constrained, in view of these facts, to urge the most unsparing application of the laws for the protection of the sailor, and tha punishment of cruel masters and officers upon tha high seas.

The Vacancy on the Bench of the Superior Court.

The death of the late Hon. THOMAS J. OAKLEY left a vacancy on the bench of the Superior Court of this City. Such vacancy, by the provisions of the Constitution, must be filled by an appointment by the Governor, until the next general election of Judges. No appointment has as yet been made, although another Justice is very much needed to work up the business in that Court, which is well known to be sadly behind-hand, and I have been informed that the reason is, that the remaining Justices have requested the Governor to make no appointment. Is this so? If it be, it strikes me as a very high-handed measure. The people have a right that the places on the bench of every Court should all be filled, so that business may be transacted promptly, and it would seem much more appropriate that the people should have been left to decide this matter, than that its decision should be usurped by simply five men, even though they do wear the ermine. The names of several eminent members of the legal profession, any one of whom would be acceptable to the people, have been presented to the Governor, and it seems to me that no harrier should be interposed to an appointment.

LEX.

Mayor Wood's Friends.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Mr. Paul Pry presents his compliments to the Editor of the TIMES and begs to have his memory refreshed with the names of tha gentlemen who entreated Hon. FERNANDO WOOD to forego his predilections for private life and consent to be reelected Mayor of New-York.

NEW-YORK, Monday, June 1, 1857.

☞ On Sunday evening Mr. JOHN H. W. HAWKINS delivered an animated address on the subject of Temperance at the large room of the Museum Building, corner of Orange and Fulton streets, Brooklyn. The room was tolerably well filled, though not crowded, with a respectable audience.

Another Fire at Seguine's Point.

On Saturday night last somebody applied a torch to the only remaining structures on the Wolfe farm at Seguine's Point, which was purchased by the Quarantine Commissioners for the location of the temporary Quarantine. The structures were an old corn crib and a dilapidated farm-house, the only buildings which the previous "midnight torchers" had allowed to stand. It is reported that there is still much excitement in Westfield, in the vicinity of Seguine's Point, and in Northfield, where some of the most wealthy oystermen reside. This new demonstration is another sign to the Quarantine Commissioners that they are not over the trouble with the belligerent planters of the bivalves.

ANOTHER CHURCH-YARD DISTURBED.—The widening of Cliff-street, from Beekman through to Ferry-street, cuts up a portion of the old St. George's burying-ground, and brings to light the remains of many old citizens whose dust has reposed in silence and in peace for half a century. Last evening the coffins containing the dust of seven bodies were exhumed from the last of seven family vaults which have been destroyed by this movement. They belong to the families of WM. POST, JOHN POST, SAMUEL GIFFORD, JOHN THOMPSON, WM. DOUGHTY, JOHN H. GLOVER and JAMES H. TITUS. The vault of JOHN POST contained seven bodies, some of which have been deposited there for fifty and sixty years. The coffins, which were mostly of white wood, were in a good state of preservation. They have been mostly transferred to Trinity Cemetery, a small part only having been sent to Mount Olivet Cemetery. Some thirteen vaults next to the wall of the Church will be left undisturbed. St. George's Chapel is one of the few Churches that are still sustaining a precarious existence in the midst of the lower and business part of the City.

ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL,
Erected by Trinity Church, A. D. 1749; set off to a separate parish under the name of St. George's Church, A. D. 1812; burnt A. D. 1814, and restored by Trinity Church 1815.
KEPT FOR A PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH, through the intervention of the same
TRINITY CHURCH,
when the Corporation of St. George's Church erected another Parish in a distant part of the City A. D. 1850.

The chapel is now occupied by the Church of the Holy Evangelist, which formerly worshipped in Vandewater-street. They moved into it on the 13th of September, 1851. Rev. Mr. COOK officiated in this church after Dr. TYNG's congregation vacated it until the present occupants took possession. They have now no settled pastor, but Rev. Dr. WALTON officiates. The congregation is very small, averaging not over 150. The house is capable of seating about two thousand comfortably. There is a Sabbath School still in a flourishing condition maintained, and Trinity is going to build a new school-house and lecture-room on the premises. This is to be kept a church as long as Trinity remains a Corporation—so at least says Mr. HUNSON, the sexton.

SNAKES.—On Sunday, a little after 12 o'clock, a snake, three feet long, was seen in the gutter making his way up Duane street, past the corner of Hudson-street. A physician who was passing at the time killed the reptile, to the great satisfaction of a crowd of some 300 people. We have had mad dogs already, and now snakes! What next shall we expect if our streets are not cleaned?

MR. MURPHY GETS A SERVICE OF PLATE.—JOHN MCLEOD MURPHY, who flogged HON. DANIEL SICKLES in his night-shirt, is to have a service of plate worth $1,200 and a watch and chain marked $310, as a token. The inscription on the plate hints that it is a present from the Navy-Yard workmen, with whom Mr. MURPHY was, until lately, connected.

Fires.

IN CENTRE-STREET.—At 2½ o'clock Saturday morning a fire broke out on the third floor of the building No. 211 Centre-street, occupied by SAMUEL H. GIBSON, brass cock manufacturer, who sustained a loss of about $60;—no insurance. Some damage was also done in the lower portion of the building. On the 2d floor, occupied by JAS. T. SMITH, machinist, about $50 damage was done. Mr. SMITH has an insurance for $1,200 in the Hamilton Company of New York and $1,500 in the Merchants' Company of Philadelpoia. On the first floor occupied by A. YOULE dealer in white lead, chemicals, &c., about $600 damage was done.—insured for $2,000 in the Quaker City Company of Philadelphia. The building belongs to the Van Rensselaer estate, and was only slightly damaged. It is fully insured. The fire originated under a furnace.

IN FOURTEENTH STREET.—About 11½ o'clock Saturday night, a fire occurred in the Carpenter's Shop of JAMES HONOR, in Fourteenth-street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues. Loss about $300—Insured $400 on building and $200 on stock in the St. Nicholas Insurance Company.

IN THIRTEENTH-STREET.—The Pottery of CASE, SMITH & CO., in Thirteenth-street, near Tenth-avenue, was damaged by fire to the extent of $50, at 2¼ o'clock yesterday morning.

A STABLE BURNED.—An old stable on the corner of Thirty-eighth-street and First-avenue, was destroyed by fire about 8½ o'clock last evening. Damage $75. It was occupied by ELISHA MOTT.

Speech of Ex-President Pierce.

At the celebration of the Society of the Cincinnati, in Boston, on the 27th instant, Ex-President PIERCE made a speech in response to the following sentiment:

The Last Survivor of the Army of the Revolution.—May his eyes close upon an unbroken brotherhood of States, full of their original spirit, and destined to be perpetual.

Mr. PIERCE, on rising, was greeted with enthusiastic applause. He said:

GENTLEMEN: I have pertinaciously declined to occupy any of your time this evening by remarks that I might be inclined to submit, and until this moment I was not aware that anything could occur to make it absolutely indispensable. I have been deeply touched ever since I met the Society in the other room, and I am free to confess that the great leading thought in my mind has been that nearly all soldiers of the Revolution have passed away; and this thought is associated with others that will occur to all your minds. I can enjoy—have enjoyed—this delightful intercourse with you, and all that is so pleasant in association, and intrinsically, in the meetings of this Society. I have, I may say truly, felt more deeply than ever before that it is good to be in any place, in any association, whence one is conscious he is to go out with higher emotions and purposes than he went in; and I take that to be eminently true of every meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati.

Connected as I was for a long period with the Pension Committee, I saw the process by which that list passed away year by year. In the County in which I reside there is not a single revolutionary soldier surviving. I may mention as a fact, which has always struck me as a remarkable one, that the last survivor in the County of Merrimac was a man left for dead on the field of Stillwater, who remained there during the night and was carried seven miles the next morning before his wounds were dressed. I recollect seeing him at my father's house. He received two bullet wounds and five bayonet stabs, one shot carrying off a part of his tongue so that he could never speak plainly; but he was the last survivor in the County of Merrimac, not dying until within two or three years. They have all passed away; but their memory is left to us, and their deeds are left to us. And there are left to us not only the principles they laid down, the objects they declared when this society was established, but the order of those objects—as remarkable it seems to me as those objects themselves. Just at the time when the question was being discussed in Congress whether they should be permitted to retain possession of the trusty weapons which had been their companions through the Revolution, this Society was organized, its principles and objects announced; and if you will observe the order of those objects you will see that the loftiest patriotism controlled every step they took in that organization. It was not, what are we to do? what are our families to do? how are we to be provided for? but they declared them in this order: The institution was formed to preserve inviolate the rights and liberties for which they had contended. That was first, naturally first, in their minds, as it was the great object of the Revolution. What was the next? To promote and cherish the National honor—to cultivate UNION between these States. [Applause.] That was the second. Than to maintain brotherly kindness between the officers of the Revolution, and last, much as we honor it, to furnish relief to all such officers and their families as might need it. Now, who but officers of the revolution would have thought of that order of arrangement? First, the rights and liberties of this country; second, the union of these States; and after these themselves and their families. Truly noble and self sacrificing men were they! And it is a question with me whether we place quite stress enough upon this, while we are proud of what I call a noble genealogy. My friend says our history begins with the first gun of the revolution. I say no too. We have no coats of arms to fall back upon. We start at that point. There is not a gentlemen here to-night who had a revolutionary father who has not felt the benefit it has conferred upon him through life. In spite of the feeling which was attempted to be excited, and in spite of that pamphlet of MIRABEAU, and that pamphlet of the learned South Carolinian, there has been no feeling pervading the great masses of the community but that of a desire to honor the sons of revolutionary fathers. I do not propose, gentlemen, to detain you at all. It was not my purpose to speak; but an incident occurs to me in connection with the very eloquent remarks to which we have listened from the gentleman who last addressed us which ought to be remembered for the honor of Massachusetts and the honor of the race. Let me say at this point, sir, that I was very much struck by what Gov. PENNINGTON said, and if I had thought of preparing to make a speech anywhere, I certainly should not have brought it to Boston; where I should meet such men as WINTHROP, and HILLARD, and LEWIS, and other friends who have addressed us. The incident to which I allude is one familiar to you, where a sturdy man in humble life was noticed to be passing through a sparsely settled town not remote from Boston, and before whose door the next morning there stood more than thirty men. After a hasty repast, furnished by his wife, they left the house—that man to be borne back as the first martyr in the revolutionary cause. I refer to Capt. DAVIS. Although Capt. DAVIS fell at the very commencement of the revolution, no provision was made for his widow until I had the honor to introduce a bill in the Senate, as late as 1835. But when you compare the sufferings of the men of the revolution with the sufferings of the women, I say there is no parallel. They were at home struggling with want, struggling with that anxiety inseparable from their condition, with no no high impulse and emotion, such as bore up their husbands, sons and brothers. They were the heroines of the revolution, and they did as much to achieve the results of the revolution as did the men who left their bloody footprints all over the State of New-Jersey, to which the gentleman has referred.

Now, Sir, I propose to give you the memory of two men—the memory of Capt. DAVIS, who fell first in the revolution, and the memory of that great, gallant and heroic man, over the spot of whose fall I am told an appropriate monument is at last and speedily to be erected. General WARREN. [Loud and prolonged applause.]

CITY INSPECTOR'S DEPARTMENT,
NEW-YORK, May 20, 1857.
NOTICE.—CARTS HAVE BEEN EMPLOYED and are now engaged under the direction of this Department in the work of collecting ashes and garbage when placed on the sidewalks, or as required by ordinance, in any of the paved public streets or avenues in the City south of 40th-st. Carts under the authority of this Department are employed in the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st Wards, the work having been commenced on Friday morning, 29th inst. The contractors for the VIIth and XIIth Wards (Mr. Morrison and the XIIIth, (Keechleiser) XVIth, (Bush) XVIIth, (Keese) XIXth and XXIst Wards, (Ingoldsby) are to give faithful attention to this service.
No street cleaning can be commenced at present except in the 1st Ward, to make payment for which the Controller has consented.
I regret that no arrangement has been made for cleaning other Wards. It is hoped that a general and cheerful compliance will be given to the ordinances in relation to throwing ashes and garbage into the streets, and thus preventing further accumulation.
GEO. W. MORTON, City Inspector.

MEDICAL.

SANDS' SARSAPARILLA.

The original and genuine article! As a Spring and Fall purifier of the blood, and general tonic for the system, it stands unrivaled; acting simultaneously upon the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver, and the circulation, it determines and carries off the principles of unhealthy secretions, and gently stimulates, while it dilates and expels from the stomach and bowels all that is irritating, until they are cleansed and restored to a sound and healthy condition.

Prepared and sold by A. B. & D. SANDS, Druggists, No. 100 Fulton-st., New-York.

JOY TO THE AFFLICTED!

It cures diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, Dropsy, Obstructions, Female Complaints, Chronic Gonorrhœa, Strictures, Gleets, and all diseases arising from excesses and imprudencies in life, NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED SUFFERERS, and removes all improper discharges from the Bladder, Kidneys, or Sexual Organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause they may have originated, and gives health and vigor to the frame, and bloom to the pallid cheek. Debility, brought on by a burning or terrible disease, which has brought many of the human family to untimely graves, thus blasting the brilliant hopes of parents, and blighting in the bud the glorious ambition of many a noble youth can be cured by the use of THIS INFALLIBLE REMEDY, and as a medicine which must benefit every body, from the simply delicate to the confined and despairing invalid, no equal is to be found. If you have contracted the terrible disease, which when once seated in the system, undermines the constitution, sapping the very vital fluids of life, procure the remedy at once.

The Leprous distilment, whose effect
Holds such an amnity with blood of man,
That swift as quick-silver it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body,
Curding, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood.

BEWARE OF QUACK NOSTRUMS AND QUACK DOCTORS

HELMBOLD'S Highly Concentrated Compound FLUID EXTRACT OF BUCHU is prepared directly according to the rules of Pharmacy and Chemistry, with the greatest accuracy and chemical knowledge and care devoted to its combination. Its popularity has extended in all directions, and whether used in town, country, hospital, or private practice has invariably given the most decided and unequivocal satisfaction, and produced the most salutary and beneficial effects. It has been and is used in all the principal cities in the United States and British Provinces, in both public and private practice, with great success. Henceforth let it be understood, for the proofs are too overwhelming to be contradicted, that HELMBOLD'

☞ MICHAEL MURRAY, aged 8 years and 6 months, one of the boys on Randall's Island, was drowned on Wednesday, while bathing with some other boys. His body was found on Thursday.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

FATALLY STABBED.—A man named Thomas O'Brien, aged 28 years, was conveyed to the New-York Hospital about 3 o'clock yesterday, suffering from fatal stabs in the abdomen. O'Brien, who resides at No. 8 Caroline-street, explained his injuries, by saying that just after he had left a house near the corner of West and Duane streets, on Saturday night or Sunday morning, he was approached by a stranger, who, without saying a word, plunged a knife into his abdomen several times, and then as suddenly disappeared. No one was near at the time. O'Brien's intestines are badly lacerated in several places.

ATTACK IN THE STREET.—Mr. Pitman, keeper of a grocery store at the corner of Hudson and Harrison streets, (Fifth Ward,) was violantly assailed in the street while returning to his home on Saturday night, by a person who is now under arrest. It appears that early on Saturday evening Mr. Pitman was in his store receiving from a debtor some $400, when a strange man entered and asked for a cigar, for which he paid and then left. Mr. P. left his store shortly after 10 o'clock that evening, and started for home. When he had reached the corner of Hudson and Franklin street, he was accosted by the same man who had purchased the cigar some hours before. The stranger said—"Mr. Pitman, I believe." Mr. P. replied, "Yes, Sir," whereupon he was struck a powerful blow in the face by the stranger. Mr. P. drew his revolver and aimed at his assailant, but the pistol did not go off either time. The stranger, meantime, had drawn from beneath his coat a club, with which he dealt Mr. Pitman a blow on the head, which prostrated him. The assailant then ran off, but a number of people, who by this time had been attracted to the place, gave chase and captured the fellow, who was conveyed to the Fifth Ward station house, where he was recognized as a man named Lyon, foreman of 25 Hose Company. He was yesterday conveyed before Justice CONNOLLY, who held him to answer in the sum of $300.

CAPTURE OF A BURGLAR.—A man giving his name as Philip Wilson was committed to the Tombs on Saturday, by Justice CONNOLLY, in default of $1,000 bail, for a burglary on the store of Schardorff & Goupil, No. 141 Broadway. Peter Krupp, porter of the store, appeared as prosecutor. Krupp, it seems, went to open the store, as usual, about 8 o'clock Saturday morning, when to his great astonishment he found the door already unlocked. On entering he was attracted by footsteps on the second floor—whereupon he proceeded up stairs, where he saw a man (WILSON) overhauling some boxes of goods, and taking therefrom silks and shawls, which he was placing in a traveling bag. Wilson, on seeing Krupp, inquired what he wanted, and Krupp asked the intruder how he got in. Both then grappled, and a tussel ensued, but Krupp seeing Wilson place his hand on the hilt of a dagger, which he had beneath his coat, released his grasp, when Wilson suddenly pushed him, and he was precipitated down a flight of stairs. The burglar then rushed down rapidly himself, with a view to escape, but was met at the bottom of the stairs by Krupp, who was not much injured by his fall, who again grappled with him, and held him tightly until the arrival of Officer Stookley, of the First Ward, who was attracted by Krupp's outcry for help. Wilson said he was 28 years of age, was born in New-York, lived in Thirty-sixth-street, and a carpenter by trade.

GRAND LARCENY.—Henry Frosch, a porter in the hotel of No. 71 Courtlandt-street, was arrested yesterday morning charged with stealing various articles of jewelry and other property from the rooms of guests stopping at that hotel—a portion of the stolen property was found upon him. Four separate charges were made against him, and he was committed to answer in default of $300 upon each.

DR. CHEEVER'S Troubles and Friends.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your issue of yesterday, is an article under the head, "The Troubles in Dr. CHEEVER'S Church." In connection with some remarks upon the present position of affairs at that church, duly appears the correspondence which has lately taken place between Dr. CHEEVER and fifty-two young men of his congregation, presenting to the Doctor "Their compliments and assurances of sympathy in the shape of a handsome gold-headed cane."

The mere fact that the overflowing "affection, confidence, and gratitude" of the whole or of any number of the members of a religious congregation toward their "beloved pastor," should find their most natural and forcible expression in the particular manner adopted in the present instance, might ordinarily excite no other feelings, either on the part of the friends of the parties donating and receiving, or of the public in general, to whose attention the matter had been called, than that of admiration toward the donors for the liberality dictating the gift, and of congratulation toward the recipient, for the physical support and assistance thereby imparted to his efforts at locomotion through a world presenting so many "hard roads to travel."

But where, as in the present case, the gift is intended to furbish moral as well as physical support and assistance; when it is intended to be "wielded," as a "token of affection, confidence, and gratitude," on the part of fifty-two young men of a congregation, (which is unfortunately not entirely composed of young men,) for especial ability and faithfulness in "wielding" "the sword of the spirit," in a manner which has driven from the scene of the "wielding" numbers of a once flourishing congregation; when it is intended as an evidence of sympathy in a course which has contributed with other causes to render one of the best located and most eligible churches in the City, the scene, at its ordinary occasions of stated worship, of "beggarly accounts of empty" pews, it becomes a matter of some moment with many of the members of such a congregation, who not only do not sympathize with the course adopted by the object of the sympathy of the fifty-two sympathizing young men, but who even entertain grave doubts as to the existence of that number of young men as members of the congregation, including both sympathizers and non-sympathizers, to ascertain more concerning the exact amount and character of the sympathy which is intended to be demonstrated by the somewhat indefinite mention of the forty-eight young men who signed the letter of sympathy, but who have as yet no more local designation or name, as far as the public are concerned, than as "forty-eight others."

Will some one, therefore, of the four whose names have appeared, or of the "forty-eight others" whose names have not as yet appeared, be good enough to enlighten the rest of the congregation and the public upon this desirable point by giving a full list of the names appended to the letter of sympathy

A. THOMAS.

☞ J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR is a concentrated extract which is applied and inhaled; it is the only fluid that contains electro-magnetism, which it imparts to the system, increasing its vitality, enabling it to expel pain and disease. STAFFORD'S OINTMENT and POWDERS cure all diseases of impure blood. The Ointment is made of J. R. STAFFORD'S Olive Tar, diluted with mutton tallow. The Powders are a new combination of sulphur and iron with sugar of milk; the taste is agreeable; they do not sicken nor purge, but act directly upon the blood. The following are the names of a few well known persons who have used the above, and who commend their use as indicated, for diseases of the throat, lungs, nerves, muscles, joints, skin, &c.:

Fourth District—Ninth and Eleventh Wards.
Fifth District—Seventh, Nineteenth, Sixteenth and Fifteenth Wards.
Sixth District—Thirteenth and Fourtseenth Wards.
Seventh District—Seventeenth, Eighteenth and Eighth Wards, and County towns.

The minority members of the Committee propose to make the division as follows:

First District—First, Second and Fifth Wards.
Second District—Third, Sixth and Twelfth Wards.
Third District—Fourth and Tenth Wards.
Fourth District—Seventh and Eleventh Wards.
Fifth District—Thirteenth, Sixteenth and Nineteenth Wards.
Sixth District—Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth and Eighteenth Wards.
Seventh District—Eighth and Ninth Wards, and County towns.

ANOTHER BODY FOUND AT CONEY ISLAND.—Another body, (the sixth during the past week,) that of a female, was found in the water near Coney Island on Friday last. Deceased was apparently about 21 years of age, and had on a blue basque, red skirt, red riggolette with white tassels, dark cotton stockings and morocco boots. It is supposed that deceased was a German. Further particulars can be obtained of the Coroner at Gravesend.

RIOTERS CONVICTED.—JOHN BLAKEY and CHRISTOPHER RINKLE, two of a party concerned in a riot at a saloon on Fulton-avenue, Brooklyn, Sunday night last, were convicted before Justice CONWELL on Saturday, and sentenced each to 30 days in the Penitentiary.

SAD OCCURRENCE.—GERALD FITZGIBBONS, a boy 13 years of age, was drowned in Gowanus Creek, at the foot of Columbia street, Brooklyn, Friday evening. He was standing where the water was about four inches deep, when he was taken with a fit, fell forward and was drowned before his situation was discovered. The body was taken to the residence of his parents, No. 4 Tiffany-street.

MONDAY, June 1—A. M.

The Foreign Trade at the Port of New-York the week past was chiefly distinguished by the heavy entries of Sugar and Coffee, and the large export of Bullion. The receipts of Sugar have been important for some weeks past, but are now drawing toward a moderate movemsnt; being earlier by five or six weeks than last Summer. The annoyance, expense and wastage from the protracted quarantine of West India vessels last year have induced, in a considerable measure, the earlier receipts this season. The export of Bullion was made larger than it would have been, larger indeed than some of the bankers desired to make it, by the free supply from California, the ability of the Banks to spare it without inconvenience, and the dullness in the satisfactory employment of Money, as compared with the latest discount rates abroad. A partial reversal of this state of things is looked for in the course of a few weeks, as a decided turn to ease is anticipated from the London market—owing to the large accessions of Gold on the way from Australia and the United States, and the more favorable exchanges with the Continent—while here, some considerable degree of activity in money, without pressure however, is not improbable after the 1st of July. During the month upon which we are just entering the supply of Bullion outside the reserve which the Banks now show, will not be short of $6,500,000, from California and the reduction of the Sub-Treasury, to which at least $1,500,000 more may be added from the interior exchanges. These sums will supply, if need be, a further export demand of eight million dollars, or about half a million more than went from this port and Boston in May. A further importation of Spanish Doubloons from Europe is also looked for, to meet part of the requisition upon New-York from the West Indies.

Including the Dry Goods table in our last paper, the Import of Foreign Merchandize for the week past amounted to $4,340,889, against $1,022,275 the week ending May 31, last year. The Export of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods amounted to $1,102,735, against $1,475,628 same week last season. The Export of Bullion, including $1,053,388 by the Arago for Southampton and Havre, on Saturday, amounted to $2,714,001, against $1,268,149 the same week in 1856, and $2,189,567 the same week in 1855. The receipts from California by packet of May 5, were $1,658,072. The difference derived by the Banks from the disbursements over the receipts of the Sub-Treasury was $514,894, and $60,000 in Silver was received from Havana. These sums make $2,232,966, as against the above out-go to Europe and the West Indies, leaving an apparent deficit in the Bank reserve of $481,035, this total of which stood last Monday, $13,126,735.

Money rules easy at Bank at 7 ₱ cent., and strictly prime paper is comparatively scarce. The Discount Brokers pass first-rate indorsed signatures at 7¼@8 ₱ cent.; fair names, 9@10 ₱ cent. The classification is now pretty strict. On demand, the Stock and Money Brokers get loans at 7 ₱ cent., and in some instances deposits are tendered to them at 6 ₱ cent. The terms for Foreign bills went up to 109½@¾ for Wednesday's packet, an advance on the previous week of ¼ ₱ cent. The Stock Exchange was pretty active throughout the week, and closed the reverse of Saturday week, the tendency of prices being upward. The fluctuations, however, were frequent, and it was not until Friday that the Bears fairly lost the advantage on three or four of the leading speculatives. The business on Saturday was large, and the course of the transfers in New-York and Erie, Philadelphia and Reading, and Cleveland and Toledo decidedly against the Street. The recent large and unwarranted depreciation has not been brought about and persevered in by the speculators against the market, without awakening the attention of real holders to the folly and mischief of lending their Stocks to the Street, nor has it altogether failed, notwithstanding the unpromising look of the case for several successive months, to induce large outside purchases at the lowest rates. While this change has been quietly going on, and the amount of Stock at the convenience of the Brokers daily lessening at nearly every transfer desk, the Bulls in the Stock Board have gradually increased in number, and a more equal contest with the long ascendant opposite party, is evidently preparing for at least the first of the Summer months. The scarcity of some of the Stocks, and the abundance of Money subject to be loaned on others, are advantages on one side as against the continued spirit and ability (from recent gains) evinced on the other. The general market closed strong on Saturday afternoon. Early in the day, Southern Michigan fell off to 57@57¾ ₱ cent. on some rumor that the new administration were not pulling together harmoniously, but recovered in the afternoon, and was in demand at 58@58¼ ₱ cent. We have reason to hope that all foundation for the rumor referred to will soon be, if it is not already, removed. The most notable fluctuations in the speculative dealings of the week were as follows:

New-York and Erie.....34@32½@35@36¼@36¾@37¼
Southern Michigan.....61@60@56¾@57@58¾
Reading.....78¾@78¾@80¾@81¼@81¾
Toledo.....64@63@66@65@66¾@65¾
Pittsburg.....46@44½ a 50 @49@49¾
Illinois Central.....138¼@139¾@139¼@140@139¾

In State Stocks there was more business than the previous week, and Missouris and Virginias were ½@1 ₱ cent. higher. Railway Bonds, the issue of the prominent lines, were steady, without any speculative movement in any description. Illinois Centrals range about par.

Officials Speculating for a Fall.

From the United States Economist, May 30.

A minister whose personal fortune consists of $50,000 in its public funds, knows, from a certain source, that there exists between the Government of which he forms a part, and a foreign power, such a diplomatic difficulty as must inevitably lead to a declaration of war; he protects his own fortune by selling his own stock at 92, knowing that in a few weeks it must inevitably fall to 85. Such an act on the part of a minister is a rascality—a desertion. But he does more—not content to save his own capital by a felonious act, he operates for a fall, through the intermediate corer of a broker, and realizes in fifteen days many millions. This is a theft committed in the dark—a burglary with premeditation and design. But the secrecy of the broker is assured to him, and then, as said GILBERT, "he is powerful; the law is ignorant of his crime." The speculating world admits, tolerates, excuses, or pardons such acts. It is not called treason: it is called euphoniously "speculation."

This is not a fancy sketch, or peculiar to Paris; it is a portion of the 'perquisites,' according to usage, of the officers of corporations. Thus a company may have some thousand shares of its own stock on hand, to issue which is of doubtful legality; nevertheless, the company being pressed for funds decide to borrow on it. The treasurer, knowing that the lender of the money will sell the stock pledged to him, first sells his own stock through a broker, partner or otherwise, and then 'operates for a fall.' Meantime, the company's transaction leaks out, panic spreads, the stock falls heavily, a pack of hungry bears fall upon the stock, and the officer makes a large sum in the fall. Is that "treason" or "speculation?" Suppose such a circumstance

Riot and Bloodshed at the National Capital.

THE WASHINGTON MUNICIPAL ETECTION.

Collision Between the Baltimore "Plug-Uglies" and the U. S. Marines.

Six or Eight Persons Killed, and Twenty or Thirty Wounded.

THE FLYING ARTILLERY ORDERED OUT.

Special Dispatch to the N. Y Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 1.

Our city to-day has been the scene of the most intense excitement, riot and bloodshed.

A gang of organized desperate rowdies, some fifty in number, called the "Plug Uglies," arrived here this morning from Baltimore, for the purpose of defeating the Democratic ticket, and keeping naturalized citizens from the polls. They divided their forces; and part of them made a demonstration at the First Precinct of the Fourth Ward, and another at the Second Ward Polls. At the latter place their interference soon caused a row, and some 15 or 20shots were fired. A young man named JOHN OCONLEY was shot in the knee. The citizens of this Ward then turned out with arms, and drove the rioters off.

At this time a desperate row had commenced at the First Precinct of the Fourth Ward. The "Plugs" being reinforced by the "Rip-Raps" and "Chunkers" of the City, a terrible attack was made on the Anti-Know-Nothing voters with pistols, bowie-knives and stones, and they were driven from the polls.

R. B. OWENS, one of the Commissioners, had his hand shattered by a pistol shot.

A. KLOPPER received a spent ball in his forehead.

An Irishman was dreadfully beaten, so that his features could not be recognized, and several others received slight pistol-shot wounds.

Capt. GODDARD, of the Police, had a strong force on the ground, but was driven back.

The "Plug-Uglies" repaired to the engine-house of the Annacostia Company, near the Navy-Yard, procured a small cannon or swivel, and marched to the battle ground. They were passed by two companies of U. S. Marines, under Capt. TYLER, also marching to the scene of riot, who were hailed with hoots and yells.

The "Plug-Uglies" drew up with their cannon in front of the Market-house on K-street, fronting Seventh street. The Marines formed in on Seventh-street.

The Mayor addressed the crowd, and ordered it to disperse. Word was sent to him that if the Marines did not leave the ground, a difficulty would take place. An order was then given to charge, and the Marines took the cannon, amid a volley of pistol-shots from the "Plug Ugliss."

The Marines returned the fire, principally directed to the northwest corner of the Market-house. Five were killed and 17 were wounded.

Mr. ALSTON, a grocer, was shot dead.

THOS. WILLS, of Maryland, was mortally wounded.

A colored man, name unknown, was shot dead.

P. F. YELL was shot badly in the leg.

Col. WILLIAMS, of the Land Office, was shot in the arm.

Colonel DEEMS, of the Land Office, was mortally wounded.

An old man, name unknown, was shot through the head, and fell dead.

The cannon was captured, and the Marines then marched to the City Hall.

Some 25 musket shots of buck and ball were counted on the northeast corner of the building, and on the dry goods store adjoining, some as high as the second story. The stores were all closed on Seventh-street, for six squares.

Twenty or thirty of the "Plug-Uglies" escaped on the 3 P. M. train for Baltimore, and quiet was restored.

It was then rumored that the "Plug-Uglies" had telegraphed to their chief to send reinforcements, when Colonel COOPER, the Adjutant General, telegraphed for the Flying Artillery at Fort McHenry.

Eight o'clock P. M.—The Baltimore train is in. The Marines marched to the dépôt to receive the "Plug-Uglies," when it was ascertained that fifty had started, but none had arrived, owing to a want of finances. The Marines returned, and will remain under guard all night. The city is now quiet. UNO.

[FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.]

The election riot here was caused by the invasion of the Baltimore "Plug-Uglies," who endeavored to prevent the Irish from voting. They took possession of the Seventh street and Second-street polls.

After some fighting, the President, at the instance of the Mayor, ordered out the Marines. The reading of the riot act and proclamation had no effect.

The Know-Nothings had a cannon to oppose the Marines, and volleys were fired on both sides, but the Marines finally charged and took the cannon.

There were eight killed and thirty wounded—some badly, and mostly on the side of the mob.

The President is determined to preserve the peace.

The Avenue was unsafe for passers-by at noon to-day, near Twelfth-street.

Among the killed and wounded, as usual on such occasions, were several lookers-on.

Everything is quiet this evening.

[FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 1.

Hon. HENRY C. MURPHY, of Brooklyn, has definitely received the appointment of Minister to the Hague, and WAIGHT that of Minister to Berlin. The selection of MURPHY will be an eminently popular one, backed as he was by every one of note in the Democratic Party of your State. He has put the Secretaryship of his Legation at the disposal of his friend WM. B. MACLAY, of your City.

BAKER, of the firm of MCSPEDON & BAKER, is here looking out for the contract for stamped envelopes It is high time it was in other hands than those which supply the public at present. Whichever of the applicants for the job is successful, it is to be hoped that stringent conditions will be imposed, both as to the quality of the paper of which the envelopes are to be made, and the way in which they are to be folded.

The 5th and 10th regiments of Dragoons (twenty five hundred men) are to proceed directly to Utah, under the command of General HARNEY.

Collector SCHELL has just left here, after a sojourn of some days, connected with the business of his new office. If his intentions are properly understood here, there will be "such a time as never was," in the way of a clean sweep, after the 1st of July. The Cashier's and Auditor's departments will undergo a thorough overhauling, from Mr. OGDEN down Much dissatisfaction is undoubtedly felt by the Administration that individuals actively hostile to the Democratic Party have so long been permitted to profit by its patronage.

The difficulty between the Secretary of the Navy and HON. JOHN KELLY, grew out of Navy-Yard matters. There has been a controversy going on for some time between Messrs. KELLY and MACLAY on one hand, and Messrs. SICKLES, HNAKIN and TAYLOR on the other, in relation to the bestowal of office at Brooklyn. The first two gentlemen insisted that Mr. TOUCEY should either remove all of the master mechanics or none—that there should be, as they said, "no favoritism." The other gentlemen have represented, on the contrary, that there were certain individuals in the yard who were both politically unworthy, and otherwise incompetent, who deserved to be displaced. The latter view found more favor with the Secretary, and, on Friday last, a friend of Mr. KELLY'S by the name of SHARP, was notified of his dismissal. Mr. KELLY, who seems to have considered Mr. TOUCEY pledged to the non-removal policy, called upon him the next day, and remonstrated in very emphatic and energetic language. He ended by telling the Secretary that he had "forfeited his word," and that he "would never enter into his office again."

An unpleasant rencontre also took place on Saturday between Messrs. KELLY and TAYLOR, the member of Congress from Brooklyn. The latter had filed, or caused to be filed, in the Navy Department, an affidavit of a character offensive to Mr. KELLY, and of the injustice of which he must have become afterwards persuaded. They met, I believe, in the Avenue, where TAYLOR extended to KELLY his hand. The latter refused it, saying: "Sir, I wish to know whether you have withdrawn the affidavit?" TAYLOR said he had. "It is well for you," retorted KELLY, "for if you had not I would have cowskinned you wherever I could have found you. Now, do you never speak to me again." "Very well," replied TAYLOR, who was accompanied by Mr. CUTTS, the father-in-law of Senator DOUGLAS, and so the affair terminated.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 1, 1857.

Lieut. CRAVEN, of the Navy, has been appointed as the Chief of the surveying party to be sent in the U. S. ship Arctic, to the Isthmus of Darien, for the purpose of verifying Mr. KELLY'S survey for a ship canal, by the way of the Atazto and Truando Rivers. Two army officers are to be addsd to the party. Mr. KENNIEN, the Civil Engineer, who accompanied Mr. KELLY in the exploration, is to go out with the party as a guide.

The Arctic will be employed in a survey of the Caledonia Bay, which forms the harbor at the mouth of the Atrata, while Lieut. CRAVEN'S party crossing over to Panama, will thence take passage to Humboldt Bay, where they will commence their operations. It will be remembered that Congress appropriated $25,000 at the late session, to defray the expense of the expedition, and directed that it should by done by officers of the army and navy.

Mr. G. M. KELLY, of New-York, commenced an exploration of this route in 1852 at his own expense, and obtained for himself and Messrs. GOODRIDGE & Co., of New-Grenada, a concession from that State of the right of way across the Isthmus, with necessary privileges. They have not as yet formed any joint stock company, or asked the aid of any capitalists or governments in the prosecution of the proposed ship canal. The survey now undertaken will test the accuracy of Mr. KELLY'S report. Therefore, he does not propose to have anything to do with it, except to furnish a guide to the party. Had Lieut. STRAIN, in his courageous expedition in search of CULLEN and GIBBORNE'S route across the Isthmus of Darien, but furnished himself with a guide, the result might have been very different. Lieut. STRAIN was evidently misled, or missed his way, in his attempt to find GIBBORNE'S route. This is partly explained in the account of CALDWELL'S expedition, which I find in your papor.

The Atrato route, as proposed by Mr. KELLY, is very promising. It is recommended by the fact that at either end it has excellent harbors. Humboldt Bay and Caledonia Bay begin at the foot of the Isthmus. As I learn from Mr. KELLY'S survey, there is but one chain of the Cordilleras, whereas there are two ranges which oppose the passage across the Isthmus at higher points. Mr. KELLY'S scheme comprehends a tunnel of only three miles length, among the mountains near the Pacific side. Every other portion of the route is very easy and practicable through the valley of the Atrato.

Baron HUMBOLDT has never lost sight of the grand design of canalizing the Darien Isthmus, and he still takes a deep interest in the subject, as appears from his letters to Mr. KELLY, with whom he has been in correspondence.

Baron HUMBOLDT, half a century ago, suggested the Cupico route, by way of the Napipi, which empties into the Atrato. The route proposed by Mr. KELLY is more favorable than that.

The island ceded to England by the New-Grenadian Government is probably that which is known as Isla Del Rey, and it is an acquisition of vast importance as a naval depot or commercial haven. It affords means for the protection of the vast British trade passing from Australia to Panama, and will enable Great Britain to command the whole Isthmus region on the Pacific side, as completely as she now does those on the Atlantic side.

W. R. C. WEBSTER arrived here this morning, accompanied by the Special agent of Costa Rica, Mr. YOUNG. By some coincidence, C. K. GARRISON arrived at the same time.

Major BEN. MCCULLOCH arrived here yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 1.

The Government has no official account of the Ohio Fugitive Slave case.

The Secretary of the Interior has replied to the United States Marshal's telegraphic message as follows:

"Consult the District Attorney and execute the law. The President wants you to do your duty, and he will do his."

Major MCCULLOUGH, who is here, has again been tendered the Governorship of Utah.

The Court Martial convened in Texas has found Major GILES PORTER, in command of Fort Brown, guilty of the charge of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline by drunkenness," and sentenced him to be dismissed from the service; but taking into consideration his infirmity of age and forty years of honorable service, the President has, on recommendation of the Court, mitigated his sentence to a suspension of one year from rank and pay.

General SCOTT, with the approbation of the President, has just issued an order for the two companies of the Second Dragoons to move from Fort Randall for Fort Leavenworth; for the Colonel of the Second Infantry to detach three companies of that regiment to occupy Fort Snelling, and one for Fort Ridgeley; for the Fifth Regiment to be replaced in Florida by volunteers, to proceed to Jefferson Barrack and there await further orders, and for the Tenth Infantry to leave for Fort Leavenworth, eight companies at once, and the two left at Forts Snelling and Ridgely to leave for the same destination as soon as relieved by companies of the 2d Regiment. The above movements are to be made with the least possible delay. Military orders were sent by telegraph to-day both to New-York and Fort Lenvenworth.

Capt. ISAAC B. DILLON, of Illinois, was appointed Consul to Bremen to-day.

New-Orleans papers are to hand, by the arrival of the mail, as late as due, but they contain no news of importance.

The Bee this morning nominates Hon. N. P. BANKS for Governor of Massachusetts.

Governor GARDNER has declined to remove Judge LORING, in conformity with the address of the Massachusetts Legislature.

Lieutenant ALBERT ALLMAND, of the United States Navy, died suddenly of apoplexy, on board the frigate Cumberland, yesterday afternoon. He was about thirty years old and a native of Virginia.

NAHUM CAPEN says he has received no official news of his appointment as Postmaster of Boston, and doubts the truth of the telegraphic announcement to that effect published on Saturday morning.

TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ANCIENT AND HONORABLE ARTILLERY.

The two hundredth and nineteenth anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, Hon. MARSHALL P. WILDER commanding, was celebrated to-day with the usual military and social exercises.

At the dinner in Faneiul Hall a communication was read from Lord PALMERSTON, giving the history of the parent corps in London, of which Prince ALBERT is now commander.

Prince ALBERT was chosen an honorary member of the Boston Company amid much enthusiasm, the band playing "God Save the Queen," and winding up with "Yankee Doodle."

Speeches followed by Ex-President PIERCE, Gov. GARDNER, Mayor RICE, Collector AUSTIN, BEN PERLEY POOR, JOSIAH QUINCY, Jr.; Gen. JOHN S. TYLER, and other distinguished citizens.

The principal officers commissioned for the ensuing year are Col. THOMAS CHICKERING, Captain; Col. W. W. BULLOCK, First Lieutenant; and Capt. CHARLES A KIMBALL, Second Lieutenant.

New-Haven City Election.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Monday, June 1.

The Democrats have elected their Mayor by about 500 majority, and carried three of the six Wards, which secures the City Government to the Democrats.

Canal Navigation.

SANDUSKY, Monday, June 1.

The schooner Ruby, of the old Oswego line, arrived here, on Saturday, with a full cargo of merchandise. She is the first boat through by Canal from New York, this season, for this place and Cincinnati.

ALBANY, Monday, June 1.

The Canal is in good order for its entire length. No boats from Buffalo, coming East, passed Rochester on Saturday.

The United States Sloop-of-War Jamestown.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, June 1.

A private letter from Lewes, received yesterday, reports the United States sloop-of-war Jamestown at anchor off Reedy Island on Friday. The steamships Boston and Philadelphia, since arrived here, do not report her. It is stated that she is waiting in the Bay for the Minnesota to exchange a portion of her supplies.

Departure of the Circassian.

HALIFAX, Monday, June 1.

The steamship Circassian, from Portland on May 30, arrived here at 2 o'clock this morning, and will sail again at noon to-day for Liverpool, via St. Johns, N. F. The weather is calm.

From Kansas—Arrival of Gov. Walker.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial.

QUINDARO, Kansas, Sunday, May 24.

The long-expected Governor of Kansas, Mr. WALKER, arrived in the Territory this evening. He came up from Jefferson City in one of the lightning line steamers, New Lacy, which reached the wharf of Quindaro about 7 o'clock. Our little town was all quiet, the stillness of the Sabbath evening rested around us. This was broken by the firing of a cannon on the river. The cause suggested itself immediately, and by the time the boat arrived at the landing a large crowd had collected. A band of music on the steamer piped as loud as possible to drown the din of machinery and hustle of the crowd.

Gov. ROBINSON was conducted to the upper deck, and there introduced to Gov. WALKER. A few other citizens of Quindaro were also introduced. The crowd on shore gave three cheers, and called for some remarks from the new official. He excused himself from speaking, merely remarking that he was glad that peace prevailed in our borders, that he would soon lay before the people of Kansas an address exhibiting his policy, and that he hoped that Kansas would soon become a State, with such institutions as the majority of her resident citizens should choose to adopt. He then retired to the cabin.

The New Lucy laid at our wharf half an hour or more, so that after we went to the cabin, I had an opportunity to talk with Mr. WALKER a few minutes. He informed me that he has prepared a lengthy address, much longer than STANTON'S was; that he has discussed at length all the affairs of Kansas including the Slavery question, and that he has spoken frankly upon every subject, so that there shall be no ground for charging him with non-committalism, whatever may be brought in regard to his opinions. He expects to go to Lecompton immediately. He said that STANTON was anxious to see him, and I do not doubt it, for he went to Kansas City yesterday for the express purpose of meeting him. There can be little doubt of STANTON'S desire to be delivered from the Governorship as soon as possible, for the position he assumed has rendered the duties of that office to him not a little difficult.

I came up on the same boat with Mr. WALKER. He landed at Quindaro and will go back into the territory. No community could be more highly gratified than our citizen's seem to be by Mr. WILSON'S arrival. Every citizen here is a Free-State man, and every Free-State man admires the Senator—regards him as a defender of the rights of the liberty-loving citizens of Kansas.

[TELEGRAPHIC.]

ST. LOUIS, June 1, 1857.

Kansas letters to the Republican say that the Convention, which met at Lecompton on the 25th ult., resulted in the nomination of Messrs. CALHOUN, JONES and BALLEW as Delegates to represent Douglass County at the Constitutional Convention.

Resolutions prepared by Col. BREWERTON, a Southern Pro-Slavery man, were presented, taking strong Democratic grounds. These resolutions were adopted.

Gov. WALKER, Senator WILSON, Gov. ROBINSON and others spoke in Lawrence on Tuesday. Gov. WALKER'S remarks were applauded. He reached Lecompton on Wednesday, where he read his inaugural. The Governor pledged himself to use every endeavor to have the Constitution submitted to the people for ratification.

The Difficulty with New-Granada.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, May 29.

The remarks of Lord PALMERSTON in the House of Commons in explanation of the existing difficulties between the United States and New Granada, will not escape attention. They confirm the impression already existing that the British government in this affair takes part with the United States. It was known too, that the British government was in communication with that of the United States on the subject, and that it had expressed the opinion that this government was in the right on the question in controversy, and that the Granadian government ought to grant to the United States the indemnity and the security which we require.

The influence of the many British subjects to New-Granada is exerted, as we learn from Mr. MOORE, to the same end. The Granadian Government is too poor, as Mr. MOORE has stated, to pay the amount which we require as an indemnity for the outrages of the 14th of April, 1856; and, therefore, she must pay it by some concession such as we have proposed. The cession of the two or three small islands which the United States required, would answer the purpose both of security and indemnity. England has, no doubt, obtained the cession of the important Island of Del Rey, (Isla del Rey on the maps,) which will afford facilities for her navy and also for her commercial marine.

It is stated that the plan adopted by the United States for bringing New Granada to terms will be effectual, so far as it may tend to raise the price of beef and plantains. The presence of our naval force at Panama and Chagres, will be a god-send to the natives, especially as the British fleet, its object being effected, has been withdrawn. The cost of maintaining the fleet of seven ships of war is estimated at about one million and a half a year That no hostile purposes are in contemplation is evident from the recent publication to that effect by the Granadian authorities.

THE POLICE QUESTION.

Twenty-five Policemen for Quarantine—The Citizen Velocteers Rebuking General Wilson—Letter from Comptroller Flagg to the People.

The Commissioners of Police have acceded to the request of the Quarantine Commissioners for the detail of 25 policemen to protect the property at Quarantine. The men will be appointed to day.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners met yesterday morning, at their office in White-street, and tried Messrs. NORRIS, LETTS, KISSNER and ACKERMAN, four of the Captains accused of "insubordination," in consequence of their refusal to make their returns to Deputy Superintendent Carpenter. None of the parties tried were present. A decision will be given in each case to-day. First Lieutenant Martin of the Fifth Ward, who was last week tried and adjudged guilty of insubordination, on complaint of Mr. Carpenter, was dismissed from the Department. The emainder of the session was occupied in the discussion af private matters.

The Citizen Volunteers have disavowed the acts of General WILSON, and censure that officer in severe terms. A special meeting of the officers was held last evening at the Jefferson Market rooms, Capt HENRY WILSON presiding.

Mr. WILSON stated the object of the call, and felt that some immediate steps should be taken to show the public in what position the New-York Citizen Volunteers stood, and who was connected with the so called new organization.

The following resolutions were then read by the Secretary, Mr. THAYER, which were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Within the past two weeks, a vigorous, though unsuccessful effort has been made by certain unscrupulous politicians to pervert the organization of the New-York Citizen volunteers, and to render that body in place of being, as it is, a corpse of independent citizen soldiery, a political organization; and though that attempt has most signally failed, an impression has been formed in the public mind that the New-York Citizen Volunteers were in some measure controled by Alderman WILLIAM WILSON, and favored the course of action recommended by him; therefore, this meeting has been to-night called for the purpose of counteracting that impression, and clearly expressing to the citizens of New-York, the objects and purposes of this organization and showing the light in which the recent proceedings of WILLIAM WILSON and JOHN CREIGHTON are regarded by the New-York Citizen Volunteers and our independent companies; and in order fully so to do, it is hereby

Resolved, That Alderman WILLIAM WILSON and JOHN CREIGHTON, by the course they have pursued in calling meetings of the New-York Citizen Volunteers for political purposes, and by means of the positions that they held in that organization giving some reason for persons unacquainted with the transactions of those meetings to believe that the opinions of the New-York Citizen Volunteers were there expressed, and that body had pledged itself to offer armed resistance to the laws of the State, have grossly abused the trust reposed in them when they were elected to fill the position of Generals of Division, and that they are now declared to be and hereby are deposed from that position, and expelled from the New-York Citizen Volunteers, and rendered incapable hereafter of holding any office therein.

Resolved, That WILLIAM WILSON was guilty of a gross fraud in asserting, through the public prints, that he had been chosen to fill the position of Commander-in-Chief of the New-York Citizen Volunteers, and that such assertion is wholly and entirely false. That until this evening no meeting of the New-York Citizen Volunteers has been held since the parade of the 23d of April last, and that no authority was ever conferred upon WILLIAM WILSON or JOHN CREIGHTON to call meetings of their respective divisions under their command for any purposes other than those connected with the late parade. That should the election of a Commander-in-Chief be necessary, such election would be made in an open and public manner as heretofore by the captains of the companies composing the New-York Citizen Volunteers, and that the staff of WILLIAM WILSON have no more right or authority to vote on his election as Commander-in-Chief as they are said to have done, than he had to call a meeting of the Volunteers for the purpose of an election.

Resolved, That we, the Captains of the Companies composing the New-York Citizen Volunteers, do hereby explicitly declare that WILLIAM WILSON is not the Commander-in-Chief of this corps, and that, on the contrary, he is now removed from the position he once held. That the meeting at which he pretends to have been chosen to fill that office, was not held by the Citizen Volunteers, or by any responsible members of that body. That the New-York Citizen Volunteers expressly disavow and repudiate all the proceedings that have taken place at the meetings that have been called by WILLIAM WILSON and JOHN CREIGHTON and declare that those proceedings were wholly unauthorized by and without the consent of this body.

Resolved, That the card published by General HENRY WILSON, in the papers of the 25th of May, expresses the sentiment of this body and receives our unqualified approbation. That, as then stated, the New-York Citizen Volunteers are an organization of the independent military companies of this City for the purpose of military instruction and parade. That all political action is foreign and hostile to the purposes of the organization. That whatever may be the political opinions or predilections of any member of this organization he has no right or power to commit this body to their support, and that any officer so doing thereby forfeits his position, and shall immediately thereupon be deprived of his rights and privileges as a member of the New-York Citizen Volunteers.

Resolved, That the necessary steps be forthwith taken to perfect and complete the organization of the New-York Citizen Volunteers, so that the intent and meaning of the foregoing resolutions may be the more perfectly carried out, and that henceforth it shall be out of the power of any member of the organization to place it in a false position before the public, or divest it from its true sphere of duty and action.

A Card from Alderman Wilson.

NEW-YORK, Monday, June 1, 1857.

To the Editor New-York Daily Times:

To the communication signed HENRY WILSON, Commander in-Chief, I answer: HENRY WILSON does not know what he is talking about: he contradicts himself. I reaffirm every word I have spoken or written. He can parade for pastime and pleasure with whom he likes; he can be generalissimo of all the parades and shows in the City. Mr. WILSON cannot understand. The organization I command is for the express purpose of aiding and assisting the City authorities in any action they choose to take. We hold ourselves in readiness to obey all orders coming from the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City and County of New-York. Mr. WILSON, let me have no more of your military circus proclamations! I will not please you by answering them.

WM. WILSON,

Commander-in-Chief New York Citizen Volunteers.

Payment of the Police—Letter from Comptroller Flagg.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, NEW YORK, June 1, 1857.

By the old law, policemen were paid semi-monthly, on a certificate of service by the Chief of Police. Under the new law, they are required to be paid semi-monthly by the Treasurer of the Metropolitan Police District, on a certificate of the General Superintendent of Police.

The constitutionality of the new Police law has been questioned; the whole subject, however, has been submitted to the Supreme Court, and after being subjected to the scrutiny of able counsel on both sides, the Court has decided in favor of the validity of the Act. I therefore feel bound to execute the law in good faith, until the decision of the Supreme Court is set aside by the Court of Appeals.

As the estimate of the Police Commissioners, which they are required to make on or before the first of June, and which was shown to me on Saturday, may come before me for my official action, and as there are some practical difficulties in paying the police force until money is collected under the estimate of the Commissioners, I consider it proper to present such facts as will enable those who are immediately interested, to form a just estimate of the position in which the Finance Department is placed.

The last payment made to the Police was up to the 25th of April. On the same day the Comptroller received a notice from the Police Commissioners under the new law, informing him that they had organized on the 22d of April, and calling his attention to the 27th section of the act under which they were organized.

On the 18th of May the Board of Supervisors of the County of New-York adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That until the further action of the Board of Supervisors, the quota of patrolmen for this County allowed to the Board of Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police District, shall be five men, and no more.

The sixth section of the Metropolitan Police Act, after providing for the principal officers of the police force, empowers the Board of Supervisors of the County of New-York to determine the number of police patrolmen for said County.

It may be a legal use of the important discretion confided to the Board of Supervisors by this section, to reduce the patrol policemen of the County from a thousand men to five. But, as the forces were not disbanded, and have continued in the usual discharge of their duties, I consider that each individual has a legal claim on the Corporation for the sum fixed as his compensation.

The 27th section requires that any sum remaining in the Treasury from the collections for police expences in 1856 at the date of the organization of the Police Commissioners, shall be paid into the State Treasury for the use of the Police Commissioners. The entire sum contained in the tax levy of 1856, was expended for the service of that year. The amount paid on account of the police service of 1857, has been obtained by borrowing, in anticipation of the tax levy of 1857, on an estimate presented by the Comptroller to the Common Council in November, 1856. These payments extend from January 1 to April 25.

In regard to the police expenses of 1857, the 27th section provides that when the amount estimated by Commissioners is collected, the same shall be paid into the State Treasury. The tax books are not opened until the 1st of September in each year, when the collection of taxes for 1857 commences.

In regard to the pay of policemen, they are entitled by the new law to an increase of their pay equal to $100 per annum, amounting in the aggregate to more than $100,000. There is as yet no appropriation for this and other increased expenses, and will not be until the estimate of the new Commissioners is added to the tax levy of 1857.

The Commissioners have notified the Comptroller that they have removed the Chief of Police. As the law now stands, this presents a leading obstacle to paying on his certificate, the new law does not authorize the Comptroller to pay on the certificate of the Superintendent of Police.

By the Charter of 1849, and by that of 1857, it is provided that the finance department "shall settle and adjust all claims whatsoever by the Corporation or against them, and all accounts whatsoever in which the Corporation is concerned, either as debtor or creditor."

Under this provision and with the approbation of the Police Commissioners, it is proposed to settle with the individuals who have claims for their services at the old rates of compensation, for the two payments due on the 27th of May, leaving the additional compensation to be adjusted as soon as the same is provided for.

The tax law of 1857 providing for raising $325,500, "to be applied to ward defraying the expenses of police in said City and county." And the second section of the same act declares that "no portion of the said sum shall be expended or applied to any other purpose or object than said object and purpose for which the Board of Supervisors of said City and County of New-York are hereinbefore empowered to raise the same."

It is obvious from this that the appropriation for the police service of 1857 must be applied to the payment of policemen doing duty under the old or new police law, and not "to any other purpose or object."

I see no legal objection in continuing to pay the police force monthly, with the approbation of the Police Commissioners, until the decision of the Court of Appeals may reverse the law as it now stands. If the decision of the Supreme Court is sustained, the same method of payment might be continued until September, when moneys will be collected under the 27th section, and may be applied to the payment of the Police through the Treasurer appointed by the Commissioners.

A. C. FLAGG, Comptroller.

The Brooklyn Police—Necessary Appropriations, $816,275.

The Depnty Superintendent of Police still refusee to receive returns from the out-standing Captains of Police, and yesterday directed the Sergeants in the Third and Fourth Police Districts to send in daily returns as has been done before by the Captains.

On motion of Alderman WALSH, the communication was referred to the Joint Board of Aldermen and Supervisors.

THE NEWBURG AFFAIR.

Another Case of Mistaken Identity.

A CURIOUS COMPLICATION—THE NEGRO BROWN'S WIFE ALIVE AND WELL—THE BODY STILL UNRECOGNIZED—THE JURY DISCHARGED.

The Coroner's Jury in the murder case at Newburg had their final sitting yesterday, and were discharged upon rendering a verdict that the deceased came to her death at the hands of parties unknown. For another case of mistaken identity has grown out of this curious affair. The negro BROWN'S white wife proves to be alive, after all, and gave her testimony in Newburg yesterday.

We have already published a statement of the fact that the body was identified during the past week as that of CATHARINE ASHBELL, of Boston, the wife of a negro named BROWN. BROWN'S statement was corroborated by several circumstances. His evidence was so positive as to the identity of the corpse that people were glad to believe his statements, and so relieve their minds of painful suspense.

Officer CLARK, of Newburg, came to this City on Saturday for the purpose of procuring additional testimony, and his return on Saturday night was anxiously looked for. Saturday passed, however, without any word from him, and so did Sunday; but yesterday morning, all Newburg was taken by surprise, when the officer came in the morning train with the veritable CATHARINE BROWN, the supposed victim, and accompanied by MCLAUGHLIN, her paramour. Both were immediately taken to the Court House, when the Coroner summoned the Jury, when the following testimony was elicited.

TESTIMONY OF CATHERINE BROWN ALIAS ASHBELL.

Catharine Brown alias Ashbell, called and sworn—Question—What is your name? Answer—Catherine Ashbell.

Q.—Where were you born? A.—In St. John, New-Brunswick.

Q.—How old are you? A.—I am twenty-five years old.

Q.—Are you married? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—What is your husband's name? A.—His name is Thomas Brown.

Q.—How long have you been married? A.—Six years.

Q.—Where were you married? A.—In Boston.

Q.—By whom were you married? A.—By a Justice of the Peace.

Q.—Did you and your husband have any difficulties? A.—I have not lived peacefully with my husband; I lived peacefully with him for one week after we were married.

Q.—How long did you live together? A.—I acted towards him as a wife until one month after marriage, when I left him.

Q.—Where did you then go? A.—I still remained in Boston.

Q.—Did you not see him at times? A.—I had no communication with him.

Q.—At what time did you first leave Boston? A.—I do not recollect the exact time I left the first time, after my separation from him.

Q.—Who went with you from Boston to New-York? A.—I have been there with several persons.—I cannot mention any of them: I was under the protection of George Morse.

Q.—How long did you stay away at this time? A.—I returned in a few days to live with him again.

Q.—How long did you stay in New-York, any one second visit? A.—After I left him again, I staid in New-York two weeks, I then left New-York, not wishing to remain there.

Q.—Where did you go at that time? Did you go home to your husband? A.—I did not: I left him more than a dozen times, previous to my going to New-York.

Q.—When did you return? A.—I came back yesterday (Sunday) morning.

Q.—Whom did you stop with in Boston? A.—I staid with a friend in Charlestown, not my sister.

Q.—What day in March did you see your husband in New-York? A.—I do not recollect. I have not seen him since the 26th of January, and that was in New-York. I met him several times in the street, previous to that.

Q.—How soon after your marriage did Brown use you ill? A.—He used violence towards me the day after we were married, and often did; he frequently struck me with his feet.

Q.—Do you feel afraid of him when you meet him in the street? A.—I do not; he met me when I came out of a house in Laurens street, New York, and began to abuse me; a gentleman took my part, and I left my husband and went into an omnibus, but I saw no more of him after that day.

Q.—How long at one time have you lived with your husband since your marriage? A.—During the six years I have been married I have not lived with him more than two or three days at a time.

Q.—When did you go to New-York the last time? A.—On the 26th of January, 1857; I went under the protection of James Carney and Mary Staniels.

Q.—Did you see your husband about that time? A.—Not until about six weeks after that.

Q.—Where did you next see him? A.—I saw him on the corner of Canal and Orchard streets, New-York.

Q.—What were you doing there? A.—I was keeping house there—a private place.

Q.—Did you have visitors or boarders there? A.—I had no boarders or visitors; I hired my rooms furnished.

Q.—Did any of the furniture belong to Thomas Brown, your husband? A.—It did not. It all belonged to the lady I hired the room from.

Q.—How long did you remain there? A.—Until I went to Boston, but I do not remember how long that was.

Q.—Who paid the rent? A.—I paid the rent—nine dollars a month, when I left. I staid only three weeks.

Q.—Where did you go to then? A.—To Laurens-street.

Q.—What number? A.—I do not recollect the number.

Q.—How long did you stay there? A.—One night.

Q.—Where did you go next? A.—To a house in Spring-street, kept by a widow lady, where I staid one week.

Q.—What was the lady's name, and the number of the house? A.—I do not know the lady's name, nor the number of the house.

Q.—Where did you go next? A.—I then went back to Boston.

Q.—How long was this from the time you last left Boston? A.—I returned in about two months.

Q.—Whom did you stop with in Boston? A.—With my sister in Charlestown; I staid with her about a week, and then returned to New-York.

Q.—Did you see your husband during this time? A.—I did not; I did not go to No. 94 Lincoln-street (his place of business.)

Q.—What time did you leave for New-York? A.—I do not remember the date.

Q.—What did you go to New-York for at this time? A.—To attend to business—have nothing to tell.

Q.—Did you visit Boston again after this? A.—After my arrival in New York the last time I visited Boston once.

Q.—Where did you next go? A.—I then went back to Laurens-street after my things, and hired a carriage from a stand in the Bowery, and left the house.

Q.—Where did you go to? A.—I went to

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLIES.

OLD SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT LEXINGTON.

The Bible Question—Disabled Ministers—Church Extension.

Correspondence of the New-Yor Daily Times.

SEVENTH DAY.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Thursday, May 28, 1857.

Yesterday afternoon the Rev. Dr. BRECKINRIDGE continued his remarks interrupted by the recess, unimadverting upon the action of the Version Committee of the American Bible Society. According to a motion of Dr. HODGE, an opportunity was given to the Assembly of commencing to pay off the debt of the Board of Foreign Missions. A collection was taken up, resulting in the sum of $1,268 93.

DISABLED MINISTERS

Rev. Dr. JONES, of the Trustees of the Fund for the relief of disabled ministers, widows, and children, made a report which was put upon the docket.

Judge LEAVITT, Chairman of the Committee on this subject, read an extended report, urging the necessity of increased effort. The Committee knew of at least 26 ministers, 50 widows, and 75 children, entitled to the support of the Church. They discouraged any effort to establish a permanent fund, and thought that wants should be met by increasing the Trustees' Fund. On motion of Judge FINE the report was adopted.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

This being the order of the day, Rev. Mr. COX, Secretary of the Committee on Church Extension, submitted a report giving an account of the progress of the work, and wide extent of territory embraced in its operations. The receipts from all sources during the past year were $23,265 61, to which adding the balance in the treasury at the close of last year, the available resources of the year were $26,112 51.

The expenditures during the year were $17,477 93. The unpaid appropriations at the close of the year were $10,846.50. The liabilities of the Committee therefore on April 1, 1857, exceeded their means on hand $2,211 94. Appropriations have been made during the year to seventy eight churches.

Rev. J. GERRELEAR, Chairman of the Committee, presented a series of resolutions commending the course of the Extension Committee. One of the resolutions instructed the Committee to refuse appropriations to any church that goes out of its own bounds to collect funds from other churches. An animated debate ensued. Some of the gentlemen thought that churches should have liberty to raise money at any time and place where they desired, while others urged that the object of the Church Extension Committee was in a measure frustrated by individual churches making applications for aid, where the Committee looked for money for the treasury. The report was finally adopted with this resolution stricken out, and so amended as to require churches applying for aid to state the amount raised in their own bounds and from other sources, so that the Committee might have means of forming a judgment as to the claims of churches for additional aid.

NEW-SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT CLEVELAND.

EXCITING DISCUSSIONS ON SLAVERY.

Miscellaneous Business.

From the Cleveland Leader.

SEVENTH DAY—THURSDAY, May 28.

Dr. HATFIELD announced that ANDREW W. BLACK, D. D., who had been appointed to represent the Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America, was in the Assembly, and would make a statement. Mr. BLACK said that he was instructed to present to this Assembly of the Presbyterian Church the Christian salutations of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, and he would say to the Assembly that there was no body of Christians more Calvinistic than the Reformed Church. They are Calvinistic in the old acceptation of that term. They believe in the restriction of ecclesiastical communion to Evangelical Christians, and we regard all whom we invite to our communion as under our discipline.

The question which now agitates this Assembly, and other bodies political and religious, has no disturbing influence among us. Fifty years ago the Reformed Church took decisive ground that no Slaveholder could enjoy the privilege of Christian communion with their church. We believe Slaveholding to be as great a moral evil as any other, and its practice inconsistent with the Christian character. We say to the Slaveholder, you cannot enjoy the privileges of our Church. We do not say that all Slaveholders are wicked and sinful persons, but we do consider Slaveholding as an evil which precludes men from communion with us. He was instructed to tell this Assembly, that we accord to all other people and other bodies the unreserved and perfect right to act for themselves—but we hope they will be found as we are upon this great subject.

THE MISSISSIPPI SYNOD AND SLAVERY.

The report of the Synod of Mississippi being under consideration, the Committee came on exception that that part of their report which brought up the question of Slavery should be stricken out. Mr. DICKERSON, of Kentucky, said he did not want to discuss that question here, but would say that it was not the province of the General Assembly to say what was immorality in practice or error in doctrine. The Church alone could decide those points. If a Synod was charged with what had been decided by the Church to be immorality or bad doctrine, then the General Assembly would take the matter in hand; but they could not decide for the Church as to what constitutes immorality.

Mr. CLARK, of Coldwater, said the General Assembly had decided and the Church had decided that the Ten Commandments were acknowledged as a rule of action, and anything that trampled upon any of the Ten Commandments came under the action of the Assembly. Slavery, it was well known, systematically trampled upon and violated the Seventh Commandment; and when the Synod of Mississippi avowed the practice of slaveholding, they brought themselves in that respect under the action of the Assembly. It was well known there was nor could be any legal marriage among the slaves. He would make an explanation. He said in a previous discussion that there was no legal marriage at the South. He of course meant among the slaves.

Mr. BEEBY was in favor of striking out the exception—did not want to have the subject discussed then.

The vote was then taken on striking out the exception from the report, and carried.

The question then being on the acceptance of the report of the Committee on the Records of the Synod, of Mississippi, and the discharge of the Committee,

Mr. LOCKWOOD, of New York, objected to such action, and moved that the subject be postponed. The Slavery question must and would be discussed, and it had been hinted that disciplinary action would have to be resorted to. If that is the case, the most natural subject would be the Synod of Mississippi, and he did not wish to see such action taken as would estop the Assembly from taking up their case hereafter.

Mr. MCLANE, of Mississippi, rose to a point of order. There was no evidence that the Synod had done wrong.

Mr. LOCKWOOD said the Synod had avowed sentiments which the future action of this Assembly might characterize as deserving discipline. He believed the gentleman who raised the point of order was Rev. ROBERT MCLANE, of Mississippi Synod. Mr. MCLANE replied that he was right.

Mr. LOCKWOOD would read, then, an extract from that gentleman's speech made in the General Assembly of four years ago, at Buffalo, which he thought would satisfy the brethren that it would be well to postpone the action proposed.

Mr. LOCKWOOD resumed the floor and proceeded to read from Mr. MCLANE'S speech, in substance as follows: I am asked, Do the members of my church hold slaves?

I answer, Yes.

I am asked, How many? I answer, As many as they have the means to buy.

I am asked how many each one owns. I reply, as many as his money or credit will enable him to own.

And I am asked why they hold them. I reply, they hold their slaves as they hold all other property, for purposes of gain.

Mr. LOCKWOOD then read an extract from the Philadelphia Christian Observer, giving resolutions on the death of Rev. WM. E. HOLLEY, passed by the South Lexington Presbytery, April 11, 1851, a portion of which we copy as below. Further:

Whereas, Rev. WILLIAM E. HOLLEY, Commissioner of and from this Presbytery to the General Assembly which held its session in the City of New-York, May, 1856, did, on the floor of the Assembly, say that he held slaves of choice and from principle, and whereas the Synod of Western Reserve did, at its next meeting, prepare a memorial to be presented to the General Assembly, which is to convene at Cleveland, May, 1857, praying it to direct the Synod of Mississippi to order the Presbytery of South Lexington to try Mr. HOLLEY for holding slaves as aforesaid; and whereas, Mr. HOLLEY has been removed by death beyond the reach of an earthly Church Court; and whereas, it is desirable that said Synod and all others holding similar views should clearly understand the true position of the co-presbyters of the deceased, who hold slaves; and whereas, there are other ministers of said Presbytery who are slaveholders in the same way the deceased was—holding them under the belief that, according to the Bible, it is right; and also nearly all the Ruling Elders in the Churches, under the care of this Presbytery, are slaveholders, believing it to be according to the Old and New Testament Scriptures right; while a large majority of the members who are property-holders are slaveholders, believing that it is right; and whereas, if Mr. HOLLEY was guilty of an offence to be disciplined, the Presbytery is in the same condemnation s, and cannot try itself.

Be it Resolved, That the matured opinion of this Presbytery, as Mr. HOLLEY has been removed by death, and some as he living co-presbyters are open to the same charge as he, it is our duty to make known the above facts to said Synod, and all others, if there be any holding the same views, and to ask said Synod, through the Commissioners of its Presbyteries to the next Assembly, to transfer said charge from the dead to the living, and urge upon that Assembly, to direct the Synod of Mississippi to proceed against this Presbytery according to the Book of Discipline, if it believes it guilty of an offence."

Mr. HOWE said the words of Mr. MCLANE were not correctly given.

From the Philadelphia.

ANOTHER VOICE FROM TENNESSEE.

At the Afternoon Session Rev. GIDEON S. WHITE took the floor to speak on the motion pending at adjournment to postpone the report of the Committee on the Records of the Synod of Mississippi. He appreciated the remarks made by the Moderator. He had always been considered by his friends as of rather an ardent temperament. By the effective hand of Providence for a few years past he had been afflicted with a disease which perhaps rendered him more violent than he would otherwise be.

Mr. WHITE said he had been in many a tight place, but he had no fear of his brethren attempting to choke him down. He thought that when this matter was disposed of the sun would continue to rise and set. It was not so all-important a question as some others. But it has been thrust forward here. First by the report on Slavery, and then by the report on the Kentucky records, and that, too, in a spirit of unkindness and injustice. Then the poor sinners of Mississippi come up and are told they must be made subjects of discipline. He had not consulted with these brethren, but he knew they would not take the herald of the statute of limitation. They were ready for anything that might occur. He regretted this want of kindness and confidence. Has it come to this, that a Southern Synod dare not declare such an act oppressive and unjust? He was certain they would continue to express their views on such acts. They regarded the word of God as the supreme authority, and what it teaches as binding above everything else. Anything beyond that is not Southern theology, to say the least.

When they looked at the churches rent and torn with agitation, should they not come out and make expression of their sentiments in regard to the matter. He could see no reason why the postponement should carry. He would not see his brethren of Mississippi laid on the shelf for the first victims. He referred to personal reflections cast on himself. He was a Northern man with Southern principles. It had been said, and that a fat salary kept him there. He repelled the charges with indignation. For 10 years, his salary had not exceeded $200 per year. They had preached the gospel under adverse circumstances, amid trials and difficulties, and it was hard to have such taunts thrown in their teeth. He alluded to statements which had been produced from newspapers. He was in the General Assembly when that language was used. In regard to reporters he would say that not intentionally, perhaps, they had misrepresented public speakers, and his opinion seemed to be that the case of Mr. MCLANE was a case in point. From what source had the public learned that such and such were Mr. MCLANE'S views? From the Independent. That was enough. Uprising with that name—comes the name of the man—a preacher of the gospel—who on the Sabbath day stood up and collected money for Sharpe's rifles to shed innocent blood on the soil of poor Kansas. He had other objections to the motion, but he would not trespass further on the attention of the Assembly.

GAG LAW.

Rev. Mr. HASTINGS, of New York, moved that the previous question be put.

Rev. Mr. MCLANE—If this motion is carried, we may number it "Gag No. 1," imposed upon us by the North.

Judge ALLISON, of Philadelphia, hoped that if any one had anything more to say on the matter, the privilege might be accorded. Let all who desire it have an opportunity to be heard.

The Assembly decided by a large majority that "the previous question shall now be put," which was accordingly done, and the consideration of the report of the Committee on the Records of Mississippi Synod was postponed.

CONSIDERATION OF THE REPORT ON SLAVERY.

The Moderator announced the order of the day to be the Report on Slavery. A buzz of excitement ran through the church. Half a dozen motions, amendments and substitutes which clogged the original motion to adopt, were cleared away in short order, the Assembly evidently desiring to waste no more time in preliminaries, but to get right into the heart of the matter at once

ANOTHER SUBSTITUTE—A MOVING APPEAL.

The question before the house being the motion to adopt,

Rev. Mr. PAINTER, of Virginia, one of the patriarchs of the church, proposed the following substitute:

Resolved, That the General Assembly of the Constitutional Presbyterian Church, will not by any of her ministers preach the gospel in slaveholding States, without subjecting her ministers to the annual admonitions and rebukes of the General Assembly.

Mr. PAINTER proceeded to say that some of this Assembly in the providence of God had had their lots cast in the Southern States. They had been born and reared there, and some were very near the end of their earthly career. For the last 20 years they have been embarrassed by the constant admonitions that they live in the midst of an institution that involves more or less of guilt. They were not willing always to stand in that light. They wished the Assembly to say precisely what is the position of its Southern churches. They preach the truth of the Bible; they preach Christ and Him Crucified, and where God makes them instrumental in the conversion of a slaveholder from the paths of sin to the glorious light of the Gospel, they open the doors and admit him. They do not inquire whether he is a slaveholder or not. He did not believe the Apostles did so. The Church in her organization was in the family of a slaveholder. The "father of the faithful" was a slaveholder, and there were those in his family who were born slaves. They became members of the church; and the same was the case during the times of Paul. With such facts, he believed they were warranted in receiving slaveholders into the church. This, it seems, is contrary to the feelings of the people of the North. It seems to be the design to shut off every stream of benevolence that need to flow to the South—to send the Gospel everywhere but to the South. If the South must go out from the Church, it is fit and proper they should come to know what position they are to occupy. Whenever he had visited the North, he had been pained by a manner on the part of his Northern brethren that seemed to say: "I thank thee, God, that I am not as these Southern brethren are, but holier than these!" He went on to say that he loved the Presbyterian Church. It was his house as much as any one's, and no one had a right to turn him out. The simple act that he lived in a different latitude was no reason why he should be turned out. They, in the South, labor as Christians for the cause of Christ and the upbuilding and integrity of his Church, and it was for the North to say they should be turned out of the Church they loved so ardently. The old man spoke still further in a childlike and affectionate manner, winning the interest and occasionally the tears of portions of the whole audience. But he could not melt the Abolition rock.

Mr. HASTINGS, of Rochester, moved the resolution be postponed.

Mr. HAYNES moved an amendment that it be indefinitely postponed.

STILL ANOTHER SUBSTITUTE—STRANGER YET.

Hon. WM. P. CUTLER, of Ohio, presented the following:

The General Assembly, in view of the memorials presented, and under a deep sense of their responsibility to God and the church, feel called upon to take the following action:

We do hereby explicitly condemn the doctrine that Slavery is sanctioned by the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, as a fundamental error, with which we have no sympathy or fellowship.

And, we cause the Presbytery of Lexington, South, has forwarded to this Assembly a memorial containing the following words:

"There are ministers of this assembly who are slaveholders—holding slaves under the belief that according to the Bible it is right—and also nearly all the ruling elders in the churches under the care of the Presbytery are slaveholders, believing it to be according to the Old and New Testament Scriptures right; while a large majority of the members who are property holders are slaveholders, believing that it is right;" and while offering no qualifying explanations or their language, the Presbytery have assumed the responsibility of sustaining such ministers and elders in their position." Therefore

This Assembly is contrained in the exercise of the power of reproving, warning, and hearing testimony against error in doctrine or immortality in practice in any church, Presbytery or Synod, to disapprove and condemn the position which is assumed by the Presbytery of Lexington South, as one which is not only unscriptural, but utterly opposed to the long-established and often expressed convictions of our church, and calculated to mar its peace and seriously hinder its prosperity, as well as bring reproach upon our holy religion, and this Assembly does hereby call on the Presbytery of Lexington South to review and rectify their positions, and in case the Presbytery shall neglect to comply with the request, the Synod of Mississippi are directed to take cognizance of the case at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. CUTLER supported his substitute. It was practical and definite, which the report was not. He wanted to see the powers of discipline vested in the Assembly fully exercised.

Mr. DICKINSON was strongly in favor of the substitute. The point must be met, and now is the best time to meet it.

Mr. WALLACE, of Philadelphia, defended the report, and he thought after the Assembly had considered sixteen different substitutes they would come to see the value of the report. He explained the manner of its adoption by the Committee. That Committee was composed of men from all quarters. After three days' discussion they had just seven different opinions. The report was drawn by himself and another member, and agreed to by the Committee.

There were two classes in the church in the Southern States—those who believed with Dr. ROSS and the Synod of Mississippi, were a minority, forming the first class, with whom the speaker did not agree. The second class were largely in the majority. They do not agree with Dr. ROSS, but believe his doctrines contrary to the Scriptures. They do not believe the slaves ought to be immediately emancipated, but are in favor of gradual emancipation. They believed Slavery to be in violation of man's rights. This doctrine was formerly held by Dr. ROSS, and he showed his sincerity by setting his slaves free. He believed that Slavery was wrong, but he also believed that the Almighty tolerated its existence, according to the testimony of the Scriptures, and thought best for them to hold slaves 'till He could enlighten them. They were free on the day of Jubilee, and were thus practically emancipated. This was what the Savior and the Apostles taught. He was from Pennsylvania, the first State which abolished Slavery in the [illegible] and he did not like set form of men holding the [illegible]. He did not say that [illegible]

A SLIGHT DIFFERENCE OF OPINION—IS THERE A "SCOUNDREL" AMONG US

ARSTIN A. GUTHRIE, Esq., of Ohio, asked Mr. WALLACE to point him to any the slightest evidence of such a class existing in the South as involuntary slaveholders. He was surprised that such assertions should fall from the lips of a Northern minister.

Mr. GRATTAN, of Virginia, testified that no such case exists, so far as he knew. No such views are held there.

Mr. GUTHRIE—That is it! Speak out! I like an honest, outspoken man, no matter what his views are. But I don't like a doughface! That involuntary slaveholders exist in the south—

Dr. ROSS—Sotto voce—It's perfect nonsense!

Mr. GUTHRIE—Yes, so it is.

Mr. WALLACE—I hope the brother will keep order. He has already overstepped the rules.

Mr. GUTHRIE—I did not allude to you, Sir, personally in my remarks. I spoke only of your mistake in declaring that class to exist.

Mr. WALLACE—I will furnish the evidence to prove it, in time, Sir.

The Moderator hoped the Assembly would observe order. He had heard the word "doughface" made use of. Such expressions are entirely out of place in an ecclesiastical assembly.

Mr. GUTHRIE—I beg pardon if my expression sounded harshly. I did not mean it—I beg pardon.

Mr. WALLACE—All right, Sir.

Mr. GUTHRIE—I am a little explosive naturally, but I have to speak so loud that I appear more explosive than I really am. [Laughter.] He had no hostility towards any one—he was driving at a principle.

Mr. GRATTAN, of Virginia, explained his previous statement. He did not mean that no such sentiments were held at the South, but that they were very rare. Thirty years ago they obtained, but not now.

Mr. GUTHRIE being entitled to the floor, the Assembly adjourned with prayer.

THE POSITION OF THE SOUTHERN CHURCH DEFINED.

We do not believe that the system of American Slavery as an appointment of God, stands precisely in all respects upon the same footing with the family relation, with that of husband and wife—parent and child.

But, upon the contrary, this system differs from the family relation, both with respect to the date of its origin, the nearness and sacredness of its relations, the nature of its peculiar obligations, the design and length of its continuation.

The relation of master and slave did not exist from the beginning, as did that of the family relation, nor do we believe that it will continue to the end.

But Slavery does exist by divine ordination and recognition, for wise purposes, to be overruled for his glory, in the elevation, civilization and final redemption of the African race. So cannot be predicated on the relation itself, but on the abuse of that relation. It stands in the same category with the family relation in the fact that it is ordained of God, in the sense above explained, and in the fact that, like the family relation, it is a subject of divine legislation. When we say that the slaveholding relation "is right," we do not mean to say that every system of Slavery is right as it may have existed in other ages and in other countries, but only as it now exists with us, and under all the circumstances in which we are now placed. When we say "it is right" for our churches to hold slaves under the present circumstances, we mean to say that they are acting consistently with the spirit and letter of the gospel, in so doing. And were we to adopt the contrary, as the resolutions under consideration would have us assert, to wit: that we hold slaveholding to be wrong—it would place us before the world as destitute not only of the spirit of Christianity, but as being bereft of every principle of moral honesty. We believe that the slave is not prepared for freedom; that to give it to him now under all the circumstances would not be best, either for master or slave.

We believe that Freedom is better than Slavery where men are prepared to appreciate it—that Slavery is better than Freedom under certain circumstances, just as it is with human governments. Our American republicanism may be the best form of government for us, but under present circumstance it might be a great curse to Russia or Mexico.

The Church of the Puritans and the Independent.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

"We accept in its fullest extent the declaration of the sixteen remonstrants in the Church of the Puritans, that they," &c. So says the Independent of this week,—the italics being ours. Who are the "remonstrants?" Why is this appellation repeatedly used?

Have any of the twenty two signers of the letter to Dr. CHEEVER in anywise remonstrated? The letter does not show it, nor has anything else appeared to prove it. We therefore deny the act imputed, and respectfully demand the proof.

After labored efforts to extract comfort from the letter, the Independent again says: "Sixteen members of the Church have taken the responsibility of requesting the pastor to resign his office." For doing this, however, they voluntarily bind themselves, as men of honor, to uphold the freedom of the pulpit upon all questions affecting or involving moral truth."

The italics are the Independent's, and indicate a quotation from the famous letter. Why is it that the Rev. Editor, "committed to neither party," cannot or will not treat the letter and its signers with at least a resemblance of fairness?

The letter, to every impartial mind, shows that they have neither taken any such "responsibility," or made any such "request;" and unless the Independent is a "peculiar institution," with a code of its own, it has no authority for saying the signers "bind themselves, as men of honor," to do as above quoted.

The facility with which the Independent misstates, misrepresents and misquotes, to our mind, proves it to be independent of Paul, Cut, and we might name a higher authority which it would have us believe it sometimes recognizes.

This may be regarded as plain language, and to illustrate, we quote from the letter to Dr. CHEEVER, the entire sentence which the Independent in this connection quotes only in part, viz:

"That you may not, however, attribute our suggestion to the wrong cause, we assure you that we all sympathize in your views of the freedom of the pulpit, and the duty as well as the right of its ministers, at proper times and occasions, to discuss before them properly all questions affecting or involving moral truth."

There it is. The italics are ours.

Let every person, "committed to neither party," judge from the record, as to what and how far the signers "voluntarily bind themselves, as men of honor."

Some, in charity, may suppose that this course of the Independent should be attributed to the haste with which editorials are sometimes penned, or the lack of accurate information. The Editor can claim no such charity. They are learned and titled men; they are familiar with the use of words; they know the rules and courtesies of life; they conduct a weekly paper, with an abundance of outside assistance; they profess to treat upon our most important interests; they set themselves up as our instructors in religion, morals and the truth, and would be recognized as the fearless advocates of the most perfect freedom, and of universal justice and equality.

The Independent last week said: "We shall not enter into the merits of the case until we have them upon better authority than loose and unauthorized newspaper reports."

To those who know the relation of the writer of the articles in the Independent to Dr. CHEEVER, and to the Chairman of the meeting of the 18th inst., it is needless to say what that "better authority" is.

Will he deny that he was told of and consulted about that letter before it was presented to Dr. CHEEVER, or that he was consulted afterwards and in respect to that meeting or that he advised as to that meeting and what should be done thereat?

We believe he will deny none of this; He, at all events, has the letter in print, yet persists in imputing to the signers what he must know is not warranted thereby. They seem to be safely intrenched, and when this letter has exhausted the resources of the other side, the matter may assume a very different phase.

If what we are told, by men deemed truthful, be so, the manner in which the meeting of the 18th was planned, the care with which the signers were kept in ignorance that it was contemplated, the busy private meetings and canvassing carried on in preparation, the getting in of members from a distance, including some who do not worship there, and many who are not members of the Society, the spirit of the resolutions and the temper of too remarks made, and the disregard of their own Standing Rules,—all indicate a determination to forestall the disclosure and crush our disapprobation. This, with the articles in the Independent, bears the appearance of a fear to have the signers bring before the Church or public "the reasons which impelled them to the suggestion they made" to Dr. CHEEVER.

Dr. CHEEVER and the Church, we doubt not, can have those reasons, if they desire, and that speedily.

It is somewhat singular that whilst Dr. CHEEVER and his particular friends, together with the Herald, insist that the signers "dissent to the late Black Republican recruiting operations of Dr. CHEEVER in his pulpit," the Independent maintains the contrary. As a stratagem this may be deemed smart,—but the signers appear to appreciate it.

Friends should not thus (apparently) disagree—and if not impertinent, we suggest that the Independent advise Dr. CHEEVER to answer the latter in a manly, Christian way, asking for their reasons,—and when obtained, that he send a copy, with his comments, to you and the Independent for publication.

The excited world will then be relieved, and all occasion for misrepresentation removed.

The Independent also says: "The Church of the Puritans, to guard against all misconstruction, by a unanimous vote, resolved to sustain its pastor."

We say, and the Independent knows we utter the truth, that the vote was not the unanimous voice of the Church, but very far from being such. That "sustaining" vote is given great prominence, as if it was a "sealing" ceremony. With all due respect for such a "going it blind," we acknowledge that it is entitled to just about the same weight in determining the right of this matter, as are the feelings by order of BRIGHAM YOUNG at Salt Lake City in determining the [illegible] and infallibility of Mormonism. It is a way some people have for disposing of "questions affecting or involving moral truth."

"We are, also, assured that, before the vote, they were called upon in the meeting to state what they had to allege against the pastor,—but they held their peace."

Sensible men! Just the course any one possessing self respect, and appreciating his rights, would pursue. Most of the signers of the letter are well known here and elsewhere, and we have yet to know that any of them are fools or lack moral courage. Such men would not be expected to submit to anything inquisitorial, even from their brethren in a Congregational Church.

"The Church of the Puritans will doubtless carry out the principles of Congregationalism, in managing its own affairs."

In fairness, the Independent should have qualified this, (if we may judge from recent occurrences,) so as to read, "principles of Congregationalism as the pastor and his supporters construe them, in managing its own affairs to suit their own purposes." The propriety of such a qualification is shown in the article we are noticing, where is copied your report of the meeting held the 26th inst. The propositions then submitted, if carried out at the annual meeting next Thursday, will add lustre to some brow, to say nothing of the effect upon that and other Congregational Churches.

"Managing its own affairs," in plain English, means that the majority will, if possible, prevent the "reasons" being submitted to a council of disinterested persons for investigation.

In this same connection, after dealing thus unfairly with the signers, and holding up in terrorem the "unanimous vote," the Independent says: "We trust that its members will avoid party attitudes and alliances, and will seek by prayer the spirit of wisdom and love."

This is a highly commendable aspiration, but is attended by circumstances which seem to say, "we are of the majority, and therefore assume no party attitudes or alliances," whilst all who differ from us do assume them, and seek not "the spirit of wisdom and love." Such is our version of the entire course of the Independent; others may not agree with us.

SATURDAY, May 30, 1857. FAIR PLAY.

The Troubles in Dr. Cheever's Church.

Under the American voluntary system of church government, I believe that it has always been considered by both ministers and people, a reserved and imprescriptable right, frankly to make known to each other, causes of dissatisfaction as they may from time to time arise; and to seek, when other methods of ensuring peace and spiritual improvement fail, a dissolution of their connection. I am not, however aware that it has ever been considered a duty attending upon this right, for either or both, minister or people, to display their troubles to the public, or to discuss them in the newspapers.

But in relation to the Pastor and Congregation of the Church of the Puritans, these well-settled principles seem to go for naught. A large proportion of the original and the oldest male members who yet remain, including all the deacons, the clerk, three-fourths of the trustees, with the President of the Board and the Treasurer, believed that the interests of the church and congregation required a dissolution of the present pastoral relation. Some of these gentlemen accordingly addressed a private letter, couched in respectful terms, to their Pastor, designed to secure a friendly consultation on a subject of the deepest interest to both parties. It appears that they did not deem this informal introductory note, the place in which to enter upon a statement of the facts which led to their action. But this letter was at once thrust upon the notice of a promiscuous Sabbath congregation; and with more speed than heed, a meeting of the congregation—with an emphatic invitation to the ladies—was called for the consideration! of the letter. That meeting was just such as might have been anticipated; or so was, perhaps, designed. Its proceedings found their way into the public prints. The signers of the letter took no part in it, in so far as an explanation or vindication of their course was conceived; well knowing its informality. They chose to abide their time.

But this was not all. Measures must be taken, just on the eve of the annual meeting, to get rid of, or at least to overslaugh the obnoxious deacons. And this, by the revolutionary scheme of subverting the whole polity of the church from its foundation—a polity, be it understood, measurably the result of the indefatigable exertions of the pastor himself. This, however, is not yet accomplished, although the "intention" of doing it, and the approbation of the pastor, were publicly avowed at a special church meeting held on the evening of the 26th instant.

Nor does the matter end here. A number of the members of the church and congregation, composed principally of respectable young gentlemen—a considerable number of them not yet out of their teens—must present the pastor with a gold-headed cane, accompanied by a letter, evidently intended to serve as an antidote to the bane of that from the deacons, &c. And the pastor must answer it, in terms apparently meant to question the honesty of the deacons and their friends, in their assurances respecting the moot question of the freedom of the pulpit, and to create the impression that he is now persecuted for his discourses on the sin of Slavery—for both of which innuendoes he has no facts to sustain him.

On reading this correspondence in the DAILY TIMES of this morning, my thoughts instinctively reverted to the "striking," if not apposite, inquiry of the Apostle, "What will ye? Shall I come unto you with a rod, or in love, and in the spirit of meekness?"

Testimonials presented to champions or partisans in times of excitement, are generally intended to be emblematic. This was the case with the gold headed canes, whalebones, pickerines, &c., sent in such numbers by the South Carolina chivalry to their champion BROOKS; and no one can deny their appropriateness.

But there may be physical emblems of spiritual things. The world has been full of them. So it was in the tabernacle, and subsequently in the temple, of the Jews. Courage, rashness, cowardice, and other moral and mental traits also, have all thus been symbolized.

Do the young gentlemen whom Dr. CHEEVER recognizes as his special friends, mean the public to understand that their Pastor is in the habit of lording it over God's heritage?

Do they mean to intimate that the cane and the "muzzle" are the weapons for the pulpit to apply to the backs and the mouths of the people?

As they grow older, some of them, probably, will grow wiser.

Dr. CHEEVER and his special friends have chosen to appeal to Cæsar; they have appealed to the public and the Press. Let it be so, if they will. The signers of the letter of April 27, and their friends, will probably, at the suitable time, meet them, if they wish, before this tribunal. But to them this public controversy is a source of profound grief, for the sake of a pastor whom they still love, of a Church which is very dear to their hearts, and of the cause of Him whose name they bear.

Without here anticipating their vindication, all, with whom the writer has conversed, disclaim absolutely and unqualifiedly, that politics, in any form, have had anything to do with their action. No man knows better than Dr. CHEEVER himself, that the dissatisfaction amongst the members of his church, antedates by more than a year his sermons on Slavery and the Judges. The delay in this movement has been in kindness, and out of tenderness regard to the cause of Freedom for which he has so manfully contended. But if is to be postponed for every new theme of excitement that may arise in the world, and work its way into the pulpit of the Church in which they worship, the postponement would be sine die. To this, even at the risk of being misrepresented and misapprehended for a time, they ought not, as Christian men, to consent. One after another of the friends who started this enterprise, have left, and the few who remain have no disposition to be driven away.

The wish of these gentlemen is, that the public, who have nothing to do with their church troubles, and their brethren who have a great deal to do with them, would suffer them to settle their difficulties in a quiet, legitimate, Congregational and Christian manner.

A CONGREGATIONALIST.

The Antecedents of the Mormon Pratt.

From the Troy Whig.

A gentleman of this city informs us that PRATT, the Mormon Elder—an account of whose recent tragical death in Arkansas has been widely published—was a native of Canaan, in the adjoining County of Columbia, whence, with his brother, he left to join "Prophet" JOE SMITH at Nauvoo. PRATT'S relatives still live at Canaan, and are among the most reputable inhabitants of that town. In Canaan and the adjoining town of West Stockbridge, Mass., the first conversions to Mormonism in this section of the country took place, and many individuals from those towns joined themselves to that abomination. In the early days of the delusion, PRATT and his brother attempted to cure sick relatives by impressing their hands on them. They failed to effect a cure only by reason of the lack of faith of the patients, as they said.

LIABILITY OF TELEGRAPH COMPANIES.—A case was decided in Cleveland, last week, against the Lake Erie and Michigan Telegraph Company, of some interest to the mercantile community. In 1853, it seems, Messrs. RANDALL, COOK & Co., being largely engaged in the wool business, telegraphed to their agent in Meadville Penn., to buy certain lots of wool at the market price of 40 cents a pound. The Telegraph Company, in delivering the dispatch, by mistake, fixed the sum at 45 cents, and the agent purchased large quantities as that price. The Judge charged that as Telegraph Company's received pay for delivering messages correctly, they were liable for the evil results of their errors. A verdict was given the firm of $1,681 damages.

IMPROVING THE NAVIGATION OF THE HUDSON.—The Commissioners appointed under the act appropriating $25,000 for the improvement of the navigation of the Hudson between this city and Castleton, went down the river day before yesterday, to examine the premises. They selected the localities needing excavation most, entered into contract for the work, and we are informed that it will be immediately prosecuted to the extent the appropriation will allow. The appropriation is small; $100,000 would not be too much to expend in the improvement, and would soon be returned in the advantages that would accrue therefrom to the commerce of both Albany and Troy.—Albany Argus.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets—Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

NEW YORK, Monday, June 1, 1857—6 P. M.

The announcement of the death of TIMO. BANKS, Esq., the President of the Corn Exchange Association, occasioned a lull in the Produce business to day.

ASHES—Are in rather better request at our quotations: Pearls, $7 2c; Pots, $7 87½; ₱ 100 lbs.

COFFEE—Is selling, in small lots, at previous rates: Java, 16¾c.@15¾c.; Laguayra, 14c.@12¾c.; Maracaibo, 12c.@13c.; Rio, 9¾c.@11¾c.; Jamaica, 11¾c.@12c.; St. Domingo, 11 5-16c.@11¾c.; Bahia, 10¾c., ₱ lb.

COTTON—The demand is limited; prices lean in favor of buyers. Middling Uplands, 13¾c @14c.; Orleans, 14½c. @14¾c.; and other grades at proportionate prices, ₱ lb.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western prices is moderately inquired for at old prices. Sales, 7,400 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$6 75@$6 80
Straight State	6 80@ 6 85
Extra State	6 85@ 7 15
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	6 75@ 7 05
Common to Good Superfine Ohio	6 80@ 7 00
Fancy Michigan	6 75@ 6 95
Extra Indiana and Michigan	6 95@ 8 50
Extra Ohio	7 25@ 8 75
Fancy Genesee	7 40@ 7 60
Extra Genesee	7 75@ 8 00
Extra Missouri	8 00@10 00

Canadian continues heavy and languid. Sales have been reported of about 500 bbls., in lots, at from $6 75@$8 75 for superfine to choice extra, ₱ bbl. Southern is in less demand, and is less firm. The transaction since our last comprise about 1,200 bbls. very low mixed to choice Extra, at $7 50@$9 50 ₱ bbl. Rye Flour is scarce and wanted at $4 25@$6 12½c. for Fine to Superfine, ₱ bbl. Corn Meal is also rare and needed at $4 25 for Jersey, and $4 50 for Brandywine, ₱ bbl.

GRAIN.—Wheat is more freely offered and is in active request at lower and drooping rates, especially for common lots. Sales: 17,250 bushels, including inferior to very good Canadian White at $1 45@$1 86; and very ordinary to prime Western red at $1 47@$1 65, ₱ bushel. Rye is scarce and quiet, chiefly at $1 28 per bushel. Barley $1,47½ @$1 60. Barley Malt $1 75@$1 80 per bushel. Oats are dull and down to 62c @ 63c for Western; 64c.@66c for State and Canadian; and 61c @65c. for Jersey, ₱ bushel. Corn is depressed and cheaper. Sales: 9,500 bushels, at $1 for mixed in store; $1@$1 02 for yellow; $1 01@$1 06 for White, ₱ bushel.

HAY—Sales: 600 bales River at 90c @ $1 ₱ 100 lbs.

HEMP—Is moderately inquired for at old prices. Stock on first hands, to-day, including 661 bales American, 8,200 bales Manila, and 700 bales Jute.

HIDES.—Mr. HYDE, broker, says the receipts this week have been large, comprising some 64,000 Hides, among which is a cargo of 10,000 from Rio Grande, (4,000 sold to arrive,) which was long past due. Sales, although more extensive than last week, have been affected at a still further decline from former prices. There appears more disposition on the part of the trade to operate, and consequently all lots that are offered at the present reduced figures are taken. The recent arrivals from Buenos Ayres, Rio Grande and Orinoco are being stored, importers reluctant to submit to the severe decline, and seem confident that the market will rally. Light Hides sell more readily than heavy, and there are but few lots of prime light Sole Leather Hides in market. Green Salted Western have been mostly sold for export to Europe, and there are now but few parcels offering. Calcutta Kips and other Upper Leather stock are effected by the dullness of the market, but the decline is not to any great an extent as on Sole Leather Hides. The receipts this week have been 60,121 Hides from Foreign ports, and 4,559 coastwise, as follows: 14,350 Dry, and 122 Salted Buenos Ayres Ox and Cow, and 1,900 do Horse, ₱ Chase and Little Lizzie; 10,116 Rio Grande Dry Ox and Cow, and 673 Salted Horse, ₱ W. H. Stewart;

AT A MEETING OF THE DELTA PHI Fraternity, Beta Chapter of New York, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:
Resolved, That we have received, with deep regret, intelligence of the death of brother Grosvenor P. Moore, late of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, and that we realize in our own bereavement of a former associate, a share of the sorrow which his loss brings upon his family and friends.
Resolved, That we extend to his family an earnest assurance of our sympathy in this, their great affliction.
Resolved, That the members of this Chapter wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.
Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the family of the deceased and published.

WE, THE MEMBERS OF DIVISION D, OF the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, having received intelligence of the decease of our classmate, THOMAS H. BELKNAP, of New-York,
Resolved, That we hereby express our deep regret at his death, and our sincere sympathy for his bereaved parent and relatives.
Resolved, That we wear the usual badge of crape for 30 days.
Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the family of the deceased.
Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be inserted in the Troy papers, and in the New-York Times.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JUNE 2 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

By the arrival of the steamship Canadian at Quebec, we have received a telegraphic summary of four days later news from Europe. In the British Parliament nothing of interest had taken place. The projet for the settlement of the Neufchatel question has received the sanction of the King of Prussia, so that now this long pending dispute may be considered as finally adjusted. It is reported that the basis of an arrangement between Spain and Mexico has been settled at Madrid between the Mexican Ambassador and the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs. From the fact that the Spanish fleet has not yet left Cadiz, it is clear that strong hopes of a settlement are entertained. The treaty of peace between Great Britain and Persia has been ratified by the latter power. Details of the China news are not important. No further operations have taken place at Canton.

The Washington municipal election took place yesterday, and was marked by scenes of riot and bloodshed, consequent upon the advent of a party of the Baltimore "Plug-Uglies," who interfered to prevent the Irish from voting. The marines were ordered out to assist in preserving the peace, and a desperate collision occurred, in which six or eight persons were killed outright, and from twenty to thirty were wounded. Our Special Dispatches give the particulars.

The Slavery discussions in the New School Assembly, at Cleveland, are continued with considerable acrimony. At the session of Thursday, of which we receive full accounts, the report from the Synod of Mississippi was made the occasion of a sharp debate. It was moved to strike out that portion of the report which related to Slavery, and after debate the motion prevailed. The consideration of the Report on Slavery was then resumed, and members of the Assembly grew personel to each other. Two substitutes for the report were put in, but were not acted upon. A paper signed by Dr. ROSE and others, defines the position of the Southern Church on Slavery. We publish it elsewhere.

Major GILES PORTER, in command of Fort Brown, Texas, has been found by a Court-Martial guilty of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline by drunkenness," and sentenced to be dismissed from the service; but the President, in consideration of his age and forty years of honorable service, has mitigated the sentence to suspension from rank and pay for one year.

The mystery of the Newburg murder, which yesterday seemed so near solution, was again overclouded by the appearance of the last supposed victim, Mrs. BROWN alias ASHBELL, who, instead of being murdered, proved to be alive and well in this City, whence she went to Newburg yesterday and gave her testimony. The Jury returned a verdict of death at the hands of some person or persons unknown, and recommended the Governor to offer a reward for the detection of the murderer.

A dreadful tragedy occurred last week at Weedsport, Cayuga county, in this State. An Irishman killed his brother-in-law, who had come to remonstrate against the ill-usage of his mother-in-law, and while the deed was being committed, the woman lay dying in the same room, the paramour of the murderer being also present.

Governor GARDNER, of Massachusetts, has refused to remove Judge LORING, of Anthony Burns notoriety, as requested by the Legislature.

A movement is being made in Massachusetts in favor of Hon. N. P. BANKS for the next Governor of that State.

In the Board of Aldermen, last evening, the report appropriating $500 for a portrait of GEORGE W. MATSELL, to be hung in the Governor's room, was lost for want of a constitutional majority. A proposition to give the City Inspector power to clean the streets, was made the special order for the next meeting. The Board decided to concur with the Councilmen in an ordinance appointing a day and night watch.

The Board of Aldermen last evening authorized the Mayor to offer a reward of $2,000 for the discovery of the murderer of Dr. BUADELL. The Board of Councilmen has yet to take action.

The only matter of consequence transacted at the Board of Councilmen last evening, was the almost unanimous adoption of a resolution offered by the President, requesting Corporation Counsel to furnish an opinion as to the legality of Section 50 of the Charter, declaring the same to be "inconsistent with existing laws at the time of the passing" of the Charter. The Board adjourned early, until Thursday.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners sent in a communication to the Board of Supervisors, yesterday, with an estimate of the amount of money required for their department for the next fiscal year. The total for policemen's salaries, officers, &c., is estimated at $1,047,800. Expenses of general office, $12,840. For rent of Station-houses, fixtures, &c., in case the Common Council does not grant the use of those already occupied for a similar purpose, $33,900. Grand total, $1,094,030. A similar communication from the Commissioners to the Brooklyn Board of Supervisors states that the quota for Brooklyn is $265,000.

The Metropolitan Commissioners at their meeting yesterday, tried Captains NORRIS, LEITS, KIESNER and ACKERMAN, and dismissed Lieut. MARTIN, of the Fifth Ward, for insubordination. Decision in the case of the Captains (none of whom appeared) will be given to-day.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners will detail the twenty-five Policemen for the Quarantine Commissioners to-day.

The Excise Commissioners did no business yesterday from want of a quorum. The next meeting is set down for to-morrow, when they propose to grant their first licenses under the new act. It is proposed to give parties an early chance to test the constitutionality of the new law.

Yesterday, Judge ROOSEVELT denied the application for an injunction against the Quarantine Commissioners, asked by C. L. ANDROVETTE, on the ground that it was not a case where an injunction ought to be granted without notice. He allowed the plaintiff to renew his motion on eight days' notice to the opposite party. His Honor rendered a short opinion, which it would be well for injunction-seekers to read.

The Comptroller has refused the application of the Councilmen for the payment of their salaries for the past month, basing his refusal upon the new Charter. Mr. PHILIPS, the President of the Board, intends to contest the case in the Courts.

Mr. MORTON had over one hundred carts busy all day yesterday, through rain and shine, in twelve Wards of the City, taking away the ashes and garbage, and in cleaning the First Ward.

The June term of the Court of General Sessions opened yesterday. A petit Jury was impanneled, but, as there were no cases ready for trial, the Court adjourned. On motion of the District-Attorney, a burglar, who had been useful in conveying important but unspecified information to the prosecuting officer, was discharged on his own recognizances.

Messrs. FELLMAN and BROWN, officers attached to the Lower Police Court, arrested, about 11 o'clock last evening, two parties named THOMAS BOWERS and Mrs. DOUGLASS, charged with passing counterfeit two's of the Hartford Bank, Connecticut, on different persons in Chatham-street. One bill of this description was received at the Chatham Theatre, and another at the establishment of Mr. HIGGINS, corner Chatham and Roosevelt streets. On searching the delinquents, two other bills of the same character and denomination were found on their persons, together with about $16 of good money. It is thought they succeeded in passing at least half a dozen of these counterfeits before being discovered. They were detained in the Fourth Ward Station-house.

The complaints about the defective iron-work upon the frigate Niagara and other United States vessels, finds its explanation in the contract system, by which the Government pays only $65 per ton for its iron, whilst $80 per ton is the lowest that the best quality can be purchased in our market.

The German Spring Festival did not take place in this City yesterday, owing to the unfavorable state of the weather. It will probably come off next Monday. The "Turners" celebrated their holiday yesterday at a selected spot a few miles from Williamsburg, but the heavy and continual rain obliged them to leave the ground at an early hour, with half the ceremonies of the festival unperformed.

A meeting was held at the Jefferson Rooms, Jefferson Market, last evening, by the officers and captains of the New-York Citizen Volunteers, denouncing the action of Aldermen WILLIAM WILSON. The meeting was very spirited, and showed that there was but very few, if any, who had joined WILSON in his political organization.

The signature of our prominent shipping merchants are daily increasing to the agreement abolishing the system of advance wages to seamen after July, 1857, and a general acquiescence in that measure is now considered certain.

SAMUEL RENSDON, the colored men who was stabbed last Friday night during an affray in the "Pete Williams" dance-house, in Baxter-street, died yesterday at the New-York Hospital.

The first day of Summer did not open auspiciously; though it was warm enough for July, yet it was rainy and uncomfortable.

The Germens turned out in great force to keep up their annual festival; but the muggy weather was a wet blanket upon their enjoyment.

General HENNINGSEN was treated to a serenade last evening by his friends in town, and in response to calls, made a speech at some length.

E. K. COLLINS has arranged to send the new steamer Columbia to Liverpool, with the mails, on Saturday next.

At a meeting of the Brooklyn Common Council, held last evening, the Railroad Committee to whom was referred the numerous petitions of citizens to prohibit the Long Island Railroad Company from using steam on Atlantic-street, submitted a majority and minority report. The majority of the Committee—Aldermen KALBFLEISCH, BLISS and O'NEIL—in their report enter somewhat into detail, as to the rights of the Railroad Company, and while admitting that the use of steam on the street is a nuisance, say that the Common Council have no power to cause its removal. The minority report, signed by Alderman PIERSON, agrees with the majority in all the historical facts, and that steam is a nuisance upon Atlantic street, but differs with it as to the powers of the Common Council to remove the nuisance. The difference of opinion is based upon the construction of subdivision 27, sec. 13, art. 2 of the Charter. The majority of the Committee claiming that this restrains the Common Council from granting the relief demanded. On motion of Alderman DEL VECCHIO, the reports were ordered printed and made the special order, for three weeks from last night.

The "Rebellion" in Ohio.

The truth that a false position can never be long maintained without the sacrifice of common honesty or common sense, has been continuelly illustrated in the recent political history of this country. It has just received another very striking confirmation in the State of Ohio.

At some time during the past Summer, a slave escaped from Kentucky and took refuge in the town of Mechanicsburg, Ohio. To that place he was pursued by virtue of the odious law which converts the free States of the North into the accomplices of a system which they abhor—and there he would have been arrested, had he not possessed so much of the spirit and of the courage of a freeman as enabled him to turn upon his pursuers, and scare them from his track. They ran away at the sight and sound of his pistol, and when they returned with reinforcements, they found that some of the citizens of Mechanicsburg had helped the fugitive to a place of safety beyond our Republican borders.

Thereupon the pursuers who had been defeated of their disgraceful object, set to work to ferret out and bring to "punishment" the free white men who had dared to sympathize with a bold fellow fighting and fleeing for his liberty. Armed at last with a quiver of suspicions sufficiently large and full, they procured writs from the United States District Court for the arrest of four persons in Champaign County, charged with the crime of "harboring a fugitive from labor." These writs were put into the hands of a Deputy-Marshal, who, with his posse, departed to serve them. They were served, and the parties named were arrested. The friends of the latter, however, instantly applied to the Courts of the County for writs of habeas corpus, which were, of course, immediately granted; and with these writs the Sheriff of the County overtook the Deputy-Marshal and his prisoners in the adjoining County of Clarke. The Deputy-Marshal at first refused, with a show of reason, to obey the summons of the Sheriff, on the ground that his functions could not be exercised out of his own shrievalty—but in a moment went on to declare that nobody should interrupt his progress. This question being raised by him, was promptly accepted by another Sheriff, the Sheriff of Clarke, who took the writ from the hands of his colleague of Champaign, and, with one assistant only, put himself in the way of the Deputy and commanded him to stop. There was no ground for evasion here. The Sheriff of Clarke was clearly in his right, and that the Deputy-Marshal knew this to be so is proved by his first reply to the Sheriff of Champaign. But, so far was he from any intention of obeying the law of the land that he and his men made an onset upon the Sheriff, and after inflicting great violence upon him, left him, to pursue their way. By this time, however, the country was thoroughly aroused to the nature of these unheard-of proceedings, and a third Sheriff of a third County—Greene—finally succeeded in bringing up this marauding Deputy who had so insanely undertaken to ride a raid through the heart of the Western Reserve. The Marshal and his men were thrown into prison, from which it appears by the latest advices that two of them have been liberated on bail.

Upon this plain and straight-forward narrative of the events which have just taken place in Ohio, it is not possible that two constructions can be placed. The Deputy-Marshal of the United States has not brought the "United States authorities" into collision with the authorities of the State of Ohio. If any such collision shall result from his intemperate and outrageous proceedings, the responsibility of that collision will rest on the United States authorities who shall be foolish enough to render themselves accountable for the acts of a blundering and brutal subordinate. We do not choose to believe that any respectable officer of the American Government will put himself into so unenviable and ridiculous a position. By the exertion of a very little moderation and a very little intelligence on the part of the superior functionaries of the Union and of the State of Ohio, this matter can be easily arranged—the offending Deputy dealt with according to his deserts—and the parties implicated in the heinous charge of helping a man to his freedom, either exonerated from the imputation, or afflicted with such penalties as attach, in the United States, to such offences.

The serious and solemn part of the business is this—that the uneasy, feverish, and altogether anomalous condition of public opinion and public feeling through the country is shown by such occurrences growing rather worse than better. So exasperated and bewildered are we all both at the North and at the South, by the difficulties which beset our mutual relations, that we seem to be rapidly losing the capacity of reasonable judgment and of candid investigation. We are become the "Children of the Mist." Nothing is seen in its absolute character by us.

Responsible journals publishing in one column the narrative which we have given above, in a condensed form, comment upon it in another as if the great State of Ohio had thrown off its allegiance to the Constitution, and nothing but the substitution of ten thousand insolent and lawless deputy Marshals for one, and the perpetration of a thousand new acts of violence could vindicate the insulted majesty of the Federal Law. Such language as this is not simply absurd. It is of the most melancholy import, for it goes far to prove that the disastrous consequences of the false position which the Free States of the Union have so long consented to occupy in regard to the question of Slavery have diffused themselves throughout the core of Northern society. The political jugglers of the country seem indeed to have almost succeeded in making the people believe that Slavery is the Palladium of our liberties. If they were not so, how would it be possible that a simple case of individual ignorance or insolence on the part of a petty officer of a District Court of the United States, should get so little judgment on its own merits from the press of the Northern States? Because the person who perpetrated this outrage upon the Common Law of the United States was engaged at the time in a piece of official business connected with the Fugitive Slave Law—the interests of Slavery are immediately supposed to be in danger—the weak spot in our brains and our hearts is touched, and from the Mississippi to the ocean a cry goes up of the "Country in danger."

Can a more grimly-ludicrous spectacle be conceived of than this, of a great people excited by such an incident to believe that a wealthy, intelligent and powerful Commonwealth is on the point of plunging into civil war with the Central Government? Grimly ludicrous we say this spectacle is—for it can only cease to be ludicrous by becoming terrible. If we could for a moment suppose that the Government of the Union was capable of lending its countenance to such a high-handed assault upon the rights, the liberties and the self-respect of the citizens of this country as was committed by the "Deputy Marshal" of the District Court of Ohio, when he and his men fell upon the Sheriff of Clarke, we should not easily find fitting words in which to express our sense of the dangers impending over our society and our polity.

The City Inspector and the Streets.

The misdeeds of Mr. EBLING bid fair to be sooner effaced from the public memory than could possibly have been expected. The plan which he pursued of ignoring charters and ordinances, was necessarily confined to the single department of Streets and Lamps; but this has been swallowed up, under the new Charter, by the City Inspector's Department, which includes within its cognizance not only street cleaning, but also "sanitary inspection," "superintendence of markets," "records and statistics," the inquisitions of Coroners, and sundry other sources of revenue generally, provided the law can be efficiently evaded.

We have watched with interest and some small amusement, the tactics of Mr. City Inspector MORTON, in snuggling himself comfortably into the nest which his friends at Albany have provided for him. Until the intimation reached us that Mr. MORTON acts mainly under the advice and direction of Mayor WOOD, the series of promises, placards, notifications and manifestos which were issued, before and after the 1st of May, from the City Inspector's office, really led us to hope that a new era was about to be inaugurated, and that the streets of the City would thenceforth be properly cleaned, in such a manner as the law, and especially the new Charter, provides. There are grounds for fearing, however, that these documents, like the manifold messages of his prototype at the City Hall, were simply intended to "cater to the sentiments of the respectable community"—in other words, to throw dust into the eyes of the tax-paying public.

Contracts were given, some weeks ago, by Messrs. FLAGG, WOOD and EBLING, to certain lowest bidders, as provided by law, who have none of them performed their duty. Under these circumstances Mr. MORTON annulled a portion of the contracts, continuing others. Waiving the question, which there will be opportunity of referring to again, how far the non-fulfillment to the contractors of the specifications, was caused by the Inspector's own agency, it may be admitted, at present, that he gained this first point towards getting the streets into his own hands without any flagrant dereliction of law. He is now attempting, however, to procure the passage of an ordinance by the Common Council, not only annulling all of the contracts, but including a resolution "that the City Inspector be directed, UNDER HIS OWN SUPERVISION, to have the streets cleaned forthwith." Such a resolution passed the Board of Councilmen on Friday last, and now awaits the action of the Board of Aldermen! The Mayor is said to approve of it, and has signified to the City Inspector his willingness that he should go on and clean the City.

The public are most desirous of witnessing, for once, a complete removal of the filth which encumbers even our principal streets. Mr. MORTON, and his allies in the struggle for the patronage and pecuniary advantages which the control of the streets would give, count upon this earnest longing of the people to be freed from the sources of disease and discomfort by which they are surrounded, to secure to them the end for which they are striving. We rejoice to learn, however, that, thanks to the watchfulness of the Comptroller, they will, doubtless, be defeated, and the observance of the law be compelled. That law, under the old charter and under the new, is alike in substance. As Mr. MORTON professes to act in conformity with the latter, from which he derives his jurisdiction, we quote from it the following passage in relation to expenditures and contracts:

"Whenever any work is necessary to be done * * * * and the several parts of the said work shall together involve the expenditure of more than two hundred and fifty dollars, THE SAME SHALL BE BY CONTRACT, under such regulations concerning it as shall be established by ordinance of the Common Council, unless by a vote of three-fourths of the members elected to each Board, it shall be ordered otherwise; and all contracts shall be entered into by the appropriate heads of departments, and shall be founded on sealed bids or proposals made in compliance with public notice advertised in such of the newspapers of the City as may be employed by the Corporation for the purpose; said notice to be published for at least ten days in each of the daily newspapers so employed: and all such contracts when given, shall be given to the lowest bidder, the terms of whose contract shall be settled by the Corporation counsel as an act of preliminary specification to the bid of proposal, and who shall give security for the faithful performance of his contract in the manner prescribed and required by ordinance; and the adequacy and sufficiency of this security shall, in addition to the justification and acknowledgment, be approved by the Comptroller. All bids or proposals shall be publicly opened by the officers advertising for the same, and in the presence of the Comptroller."

The Comptroller has, therefore, notified Mr. MORTON that, although he has no objection to his cleaning such streets of the City as immediately require it, he will not consent to pay for the work done, unless, at the same time, new contracts are advertised for, to be opened and awarded as the law provides. This, of course, neither suits the City Inspector, nor his allies in the Common Council, nor any of those who have axes to grind under them. It remains to be seen how they will attempt—for attempt they will—to evade the Comptroller's decision. Meanwhile, leaving him to take care of the City purse-strings, and the conspirators to devise means of opening them, we respectfully call the attention of Mr. MORTON to a passage in the Charter, which provides for the presentment by the Grand Jury of all officers holding his position who shall be guilty of "willful and fraudulent omission of duty, or commission of any act prohibited by law."

A Mounted and River Police.

The Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police have under consideration a plan for the organization of a mounted patrol for the suburbs, and of a Marine or Harbor Police. Both these forces would be of great value to us. For the protection of the innumerable villas and isolated houses in the upper part of the island, in the remoter suburbs of Brooklyn and Williamsburg, and away from the immediate vicinity of the shore, there is, at present, no official protection at all. On the avenues of the City rowdies and ruffians have their own way so entirely that peaceful citizens have almost ceased to use them as pleasure drives; and, in all the suburbs, gardens and orchards are frequently taken possession, and despoiled not only of fruit and flowers, but are often utterly ruined by gangs of reckless plunderers. This cause alone has driven many gentlemen to sell their established country seats and remove to Newport, Berkshire, and remoter sites of the river and lower bay. A mounted and armed patrol, such as is employed in the vicinity of London, is the only efficient method of abating this evil. The fact that a patrolman was liable, at any moment, to appear armed with the authority of the law to make arrests, and who, if necessary, could rapidly communicate with others of the force and obtain armed reinforcement, would have a most salutary effect upon the manners of our fast avenue men and Sunday excursionists.

A police force has been so long called for by our merchants, and is so obviously necessary upon our great water thoroughfares for the protection of life and property against "wharf-rats," "river thieves," and "long-shore pirates," that it is a wonder, among the wonders of our Metropolitan government, that it has never been organized. One value of such a force, aside from the protection of property it would afford, is the incidental convenience which would often result from it in giving advice as to anchorage to coasters, and strangers, when no pilot is on board. In London there are hulks anchored at frequent intervals which are stations of the river police. At each of these there is also a station of the Humane Society provided with drags, grapnels, nets for rescuing drowning persons, and life-saving apparatus for their resuscitation. Between the stations boat-patrols are constantly passing at night, ready to render advice, relief or protection, as may be needed.

PAYMENT OF THE POLICE.—We publish in another portion of our paper, a communication to the public from Comptroller FLAGG, in relation to the payment of the Police. Mr. FLAGG takes the sure ground that the decision of the Supreme Court, in favor of the validity of the "Metropolitan Police Act," makes it his duty to execute the new law in good faith, until a different decision shall have been given by the Court of Appeals. He will pay the old Police, therefore, only "with the approbation of the new Police Commissioners." As the appropriation of this year for Police expenses is based upon the old law, the recognition of Policemen of the rank and file by the new Commissioners, would not enable the Comptroller to pay the increase of a hundred dollars each to which the new law would entitle them. The difference would be due to them, payable when there should be money in the Treasury legally applicable to the debt.

A THE NEW CENT.—For so diminutive a subject the new cent causes an excitement greatly disproportioned to its size. The eagerness to get hold of the new coin we do not quite understand, for a less attractive specimen of the numismatic art than the new cent we do not remember to have seen. Its great and only recommendation is, that there is not much of it. The color is far from pleasing, and it will not improve with age. The design of an eagle on the wing is simply a mistake, and the execution of the die is so poor and feeble that it can hardly be made out. Heraldic designs are not intended to be studies in natural history, and our national bird should be represented after the old style of the Spread Eagle, with a shield on his breast, and his claws spread out as though they were nailed up against the doors of the Capitol. The only case where imitation is admissible on coins is when the head of a living ruler is given. The coin then becomes, in some sort, an historical portrait. The beauty of a coin does not depend upon the form of the objects stamped upon it, but upon the clearness and precision with which they are delineated. The new cent is so vaguely and feebly executed that it requires a very lively imagination to discover a likeness to anything in the wreath inclosing the words which denominate its value. It is a small, convenient coin, and is already a great favorite with the people; but its appearance is anything but creditable to the artists employed at our mint.

CHALLENGING JURORS—A NOVEL CASE.—The General Term listened to two cases of criminal appeal: The People vs. THOMAS THOMPSON, convicted of the burglary upon the store of C. C. MERCHANT & Co., and vs. CHAS. WILLS and WILLIAM CONLEY, convicted of receiving six thousand dollars worth of stolen goods from store of CRANE & STRUTHERS.

The point argued in the first case is a novel one, and it will, if maintained as the People contend, tend yet further to complicate the question of challenging Jurors. THOMPSON pleaded guilty and was sentenced to five years' imprisonment, but was allowed to withdraw his plea, and on the next day was put on trial. The defence challenged the jurors on the ground that they had, by the plea and sentence, obtained a bias or prejudice in regard to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. The Court ruled that matters occurring during the progress of the trial, tending to create impressions as to guilt or innocence, were not to be inquired about, but that such impressions must arise from knowledge of the facts or circumstances upon which guilt or innocence could be alone predicated. The District-Attorney's point is, that no act of a prisoner nor declaration of counsel made during a trial can be taken as the ground of bias or prejudice upon a challenge to the favor. The defendant contends that every matter upon which bias or prejudice is to be predicated can be inquired into.

These cases are of considerable importance to the commercial community, as the burglary and the receiving were to large amounts.

A REWARD OFFERED FOR THE MURDERER OF DOCTOR BURDELL.—The Common Council have at last waked up to the necessity of offering a reward for the discovery of the murderer of Doctor BURDELL. After waiting more than three months to give the perpetrator of the foul deed abundant time to escape, and to remove all vestiges of everything that could lead to his detection, the Board of Aldermen last night passed a resolution that a reward of two thousand dollars should be offered for the arrest of the murderer. The Board of Councilmen will, of course, concur, and if the Governor should offer a similar or larger reward, it might lead to a solution of the mystery in which the Burdell tragedy is still involved.

Wallack's Theatre.

Of its kind, the "Serious Family" is one of the best of comedies. It is distinctly objective, and exposes, not too extravagantly, the unwholesome hypocrisy and forced cowardice of a certain phase of life. The vitality of the work in this country proves that it teaches a wholesome lesson, rudely in most theatrical instances, but powerfully. One of the principal difficulties which it has to contend with is that of obtaining an actor who can Cant without bellowing; for the moment he does the latter the play sinks to the level of a low farce, laughable but repulsive. It is a vulgar error to make Cant noisy and Bull-calfish. It is smooth, subtle, and on the whole rather pleasing. Would it succeed in all ages, and delude millions, if it were not so?

Mr. BARNETT's piece was produced last night at Mr. WALLACK's under circumstances of the most favorable character. Mr. WALCOT was the Aminadab Sleek, and by a new rendering of the character made it one of the most distinct individualities we have ever seen. Beyond the slight exaggeration which is essential to all dramatic impersonations, there was nothing that carried it beyond the pale of possibility. Many wolves like this Sleek do bleat through the world. The picture is real and complete, and makes a distinct impression on the mind. Every man goes away filled with the ambition of a detective officer, that he may meet such a Sleek and drag him to the light. In every respect it is one of Mr. WALCOT's best delineations, and so utterly free from extravagance that we do not recognize in it a solitary feature of the ancient gas-light Sleek. A more melancholy picture of avaricious Cant has never been presented to the public. It is in the highest degree amusing from its extreme seriousness.

Mrs. HOEY as the demure Mrs. Charles Torrens displayed more than her usual excellence. Miss MARY GANNON was an interesting Widow Delmaine, and Mrs. ALLEN as Emma Torrens looked beautiful enough to fascinate any lover. Mrs. VERNON was the Lady Creamly. Mr. LESTER was of course excellent as Charles Torrens—the unhappy victim of domestic seriousness. The part of Captain Murphy Maguire was interpreted by Mr. WALLACK, who on the first production of this comedy in London, played the same character for a hundred nights. This must have been twelve or fourteen years ago. Time has not increased the buoyancy of Mr. WALLACK's temperament, and it is not perhaps utterly outrageous to say that he is not so good now as he was then. Still, he played the part wonderfully well considering the many reasons why he should not play it at all.

The comedy was received with applause, and will be repeated with success.

MEETING AT THE CORN EXCHANGE IN REFERENCE TO THE DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE CORN EXCHANGE ASSOCIATION.—The members of the Corn Exchange Association held a meeting at noon, yesterday, to give expression to their respect for the character, and their regret for the loss of THEODORE BANKS, Esq., the fourth President of the Association. The meeting was organized by the appointment of S. C. PAXON, Esq., Chairman, and ALFRED BUSAETT, Esq., Secretary. Resolutions were offered by F. W. GUITEAU, Esq., duly seconded, and unanimously adopted. They read as follows:

Whereas, It has again pleased the All-wise dispenser of life and death to call the members of the New-York Corn Exchange to mourn, for the second time in a few short months, the loss of the President of this institution, in the decease of THEODORE BANKS,

Resolved, That we desire to recognize in these repeated dispensations of Providence towards us, the language of solemn warning—counselling us to take heed to our ways in life, and to prepare for the grave that awaits each of us.

Resolved, That our late lamented President has received the strongest proofs of confidence and regard of the members and officers of this Exchange, in his unanimous election as one of the first members of our Arbitration Committee—a post that, from its unequaled importance and power in the adjustment of differences, requires the highest qualifications and the most unswerving integrity—and his election as our fourth President.

Resolved, That in the discharge of the duties devolving upon him as an officer and arbitrator, not less than as a merchant among us, transacting a large and a highly respectable business, the deceased has commended himself increasingly to the respect and esteem of all who have witnessed his unexceptionable discharge of every duty, and his honorable and upright mercantile career.

Resolved, That we tender to the son of the deceased, our respected associate, and to the widow and other members of his family, the assurance that we deeply sympathize with them in the great and sudden bereavement which they have been called to suffer.

Resolved, That we will attend the funeral of the deceased.

Resolved, That a certified copy of these resolutions be furnished to Mrs. Banks—and that they be published in each of the daily papers of this city.

Some remarks were made by members of the Association, eulogistic of the deceased, and expressive of heart-felt sorrow for the loss occasioned by his death, as well as of earnest sympathy for his family and friends. The meeting then terminated.

Demonstration of the Friends of Nicaragua—Serenade to General Henningsen.

A large number of the "Friends of Nicaragua" associated last evening at the Pewter Mug, and, preceded by a brass band, marched to National Hall in Canal-street, where Captain CREIGHTON, on motion of Alderman WILSON, was called to the chair. Capt. CHAS. WALTERS was appointed Secretary.

Among those present were A. C. LAWRENCE, Esq., Alderman WILSON, ALEXANDER MASON, Esq., COOPER, &c.

Capt. CREIGHTON, on taking the chair, proceeded to speak of Gen. WALKER in very flattering terms, having, he said, seen the man, and known him from what he had seen.

After duly eulogizing the cause, he alluded to Gen. HENNINGSEN, whom he highly complimented as one having in an eminent degree borne the brunt of war in Central America, and proposed that without further delay they should adjourn to do him honor at his residence.

The meeting accordingly, on motion, adjourned, and those present falling in line, preceded by the band and accompanied by transparencies, marched to Gen. HENNINGSEN's house, No. 140 Twelfth-street.

Here the party halted, and after several airs by the band, gave three times three for the General, who in response to loud and repeated calls, appeared on the balcony and spoke as follows:

MY FRIENDS AND FELLOW CITIZENS:—Public speaking is a part of my education which has been so lamentably neglected that you must be pleased to accept in few and I fear inappropriate words the expression of my earnest gratitude for the honor you have this day done me.

Personally this token of your approbation would be highly flattering, but my grateful recognition of this demonstration is heightened I hope by less selfish considerations. I feel and many of you must feel, my friends, that possibly you exaggerate my deserts and overate my share in the events that you are gathered here to celebrate. I have lived long enough and seen enough to be aware that the undeserving may often bear off honors such as your approval whilst merit remains unknown and unacknowledged. But you all know that if in the man you should be deceived, in the cause he represents you cannot be, and it is therefore in the name of a cause that I again and still more emphatically thank you.

This prospect of that cause, it is true, are temporarily clouded, and therefore many who approved before waver now—many wavering before are dead against it. What they considered right when apparently successful they condemn now that its fortunes seem unpropitious. But you, my friends, distinguish between principles and their success. What is right, is right with you, whether unfortunate or ascendant, and ascendant in the long run your sympathy and countenance will inevitably make it.

It has been said that where the far-seeing politician has been puzzled, and where the mass of learning and of letters has been utterly perplexed that the instincts of the popular heart have led it straightway to the truth, and this I believe if we define the people's instinct as the common honesty and common sense which says consciously to itself, let us first ask what is right and give it all our sympathies, and next ask if the right be practical, and if we believe it practical do it.

You doubtless have not had, like our adversaries, sources of minute information from which to gather all the truth. You have not had the control of plausible and pliant pens to vindicate as they have to deface it. You have not had the control of individual wealth to further its interests as they have had to start plots, calumnies and murderous expeditions against your fellow countrymen and theirs; but on the other hand you have no un-American understanding with foreign governments; no shares in Kinney grants; no stock in old Transit Companies, nor prospective in new, to obscure your vision, heart and head. The great heart of the people in its sublime pulsations—the strong head of the people in its discerning instincts, have led you to the conclusions to which you have come, and therefore I hail and bow to this demonstration as a manifestation of your mighty sympathy.

In as far as I may have deserved your approbation, I was stimulated by the conviction that the cause which I was endeavoring to serve was an American cause, and that its eventual results must be the spread of American institutions and American civilization—as some day I hope to see them spread from one end to the other of this wide continent. Not that I believe those institutions perfect, or that civilization complete, but because I am convinced that they are the best and most solid the world has yet seen, and that they are irresistibly progressive.

I hope and I believe that the nations of the Old World may yet make a successful effort to burst their shackles, and to that contest my sword is pledged whenever the effort shall be seriously made. But such attempts I feel may fail and fail again, to be renewed in a future generation, whilst I know that ultimately, in the spread of American institutions and in the development of American power, lies the certain enfranchisement of the world.

So much for the cause, before which all personality sinks into insignificance; but in as far as men are its representatives, there is one—its most complete impersonation—to whom I would for a moment call your attention. Need I say it is WILLIAM WALKER? On service I have been so impressed with my duties as a soldier to have abstained from all comment on him, for good or evil; but that service over—just as I recognize the right in the humblest soldier who has served under my orders, to arraign, discuss, and pass judgment on my character or conduct—so I claim the privilege of unreservedly discussing his. At this moment—by some to whom adversity is a crime, and by others to whom slander is an accustomed instrument—strenuous efforts are being made to depreciate his capacity as a leader, and to impugn his character as a man, by branding him with cruelty.

Now, to those who assail WILLIAM WALKER because he has not yet succeeded, I would say, wait. Be not precipitate. Remember that the man who, with fifty-six followers, changed for two years the destinies of Nicaragua, lives still, is only four and thirty, and has many score times fifty-six who confide in the retrospection of his marvelous career and in the future that looms before him.

To those disparaging his military merits I would say, if you were Washingtons or Napoleons, you are not in possession of facts enough to enable you to judge correctly in the premises; but you are not Washingtons and Napoleons. Far from it. In fact I should conjecture from a perusal of your criticisms, that you are, on the contrary, utterly ignorant of the subject you were treating, and incapable of coming to a rational conclusion if facts had been accessible to you in the most ample detail. Now I, who have chanced to know some of the men who mark, in their generation—I, who have had some military experience—I, who have been a participator in two-thirds of the struggle, am not afraid to assert—nay, I am anxious to place on record my conviction, that WILLIAM WALKER is one of the most remarkable men of the age in which he lives. As versatile in his talents as profound in his acquirements, it is true that he knew nothing of the art of war but what study and his experiences in Nicaragua have taught him; but whatever he or be not his proficiency in those details which experience and study enable even mediocrity to master, I unhesitatingly assert, that in those higher combinations which only the forethought of genius, and the promptings of inborn aptitude can inspire, his military career has been so far distinguished, that I believe that many justly-celebrated commanders would have failed to make the long and successful stand that he has made, against such odds and so many adverse circumstances.

It has been my good fortune whilst in Nicaragua never to be forced by the inexorable necessities of war to put any one to death. What they call my humanity has ever been landed by the allies and their abettors, by way of throwing blame by implication upon WILLIAM WALKER. Now to those who accuse him of bloodthirstiness and cruelty, I can only say that I solemnly declare that in no instance has he taken life where, in his place, I should not have felt compelled to do so—and I know many instances where death and suffering have been entailed upon his followers by his unwillingness to make examples.

My friends, there are some who if they could would frown down WILLIAM WALKER, who yet pore with admiring interest in the pages of a PRESCOTT over the history of CORTEZ and OJEVA. Yet his career has been no less romantic than their career, no less astonishingly daring. Is it because they were Spaniards, is it because they came with the sanction of a king to raise the bigot's stake and sate their thirst for gold, whilst he is an American battling to inaugurate civilization through the magnificent regions which for three centuries the descendants of these conquerers have misappropriated?

Twenty-three months after he had landed, with his fifty-six followers, he had with twenty-five hundred and eighteen men in all fought against nineteen thousand. This has been denied. His force has been enormously exaggerated. It is easy for anonymous and irresponsible disputants to swell in print that twenty-five hundred into twenty-five thousand, if they please: but the list by every steamer's arrival has been published and summed up, and I defy these who contradict to make a different addition, or to show that any Americans reached the country other than are therein described.

Of this number seven hundred lost heart and abandoned their companions, deserting just as in a period of trial Dr. KANE's chosen men deserted, for these were times that tried men's souls; of the remainder eight hundred and fifty bled, one thousand died of wounds or of disease, through sieges, marches and some twenty fights, on an average twice more bloody than the well contested field of Mexico, and against an average of seven-fold numbers.

If from those sanguinary fields these gallant spirits have retired at last, it was not before five Central American States that they retired; it required the influence of foreign governments; the insidious and interested opposition of a late Administration, and the weight of American capital, infamously devoted to building up its speculations on American lives.

My friends, I think that such men and such a leader will have contributed their share to the historic glories of the American name, and that their exertions will hasten the spread of American institutions upon all sides on this continent till contact with both oceans says, Thou shalt go no further.

Quite a large party of ladies and gentlemen had previously assembled at Gen. HENNINGSEN's house—among them, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. MEAGHER, Mrs. Judge ROOSEVELT, Mr. WATKINS, member of Congress from Tennessee; Col. W. W. FOSDICK, and others. Several of the prominent Filibusters of this City were also on hand, such as Captain FARRAN, A. C. LAURENCE, Esq., Gen. CAMPBELL, Gen. FRANCIS FARRER, &c.

CONDITION OF THE CITY.

FILTHY STREETS AND HOT WEATHER.

What is Doing in the Streets—Reports from the Wards—A Street-Cleaning Effort in a Rainy Day—Communication from the City Inspector—The Tenant Houses.

If, with reeking streets and a muggy atmosphere, and Corporation disregard of Municipal health, New-York continues to escape a pestilence this Summer, she will be uncommonly lucky. There is an eligible opening among us for yellow fever, cholera, small-pox, or any other of the pleasant visitors that spring out of corruption and delight in filth. Unless measures are set on foot to relieve the distresses we labor under, there is no telling what the City will have to pass through.

The Captains of Police in all the Wards of the City, yesterday sent into the Mayor reports of the condition of the streets in each Ward. The rsports are enough to frighten every citizen in view of probabilities for the Summer. They are as follows:

Captain Murray, First Ward, very deplorable condition.

Captain Leonard, Second Ward, very bad condition.

Captain Hopkins, Third Ward, filthy condition.

Captain Ditchett, Fourth Ward, bad condition.

Captain Horrigan, Fifth Ward, filthy condition.

Captain Dowling, Sixth Ward, fil by condition.

Captain Letts, Seventh Ward, filthy condition.

Captain Turnbull, Eighth Ward, filthy condition with a very few exceptions.

Captain Ackerman, Ninth Ward, filthy, requires immediate attention.

Captain Norris, Tenth Ward, some parts clean, others quite the reverse.

Captain Craft, Eleventh Ward, not very bad, but room for improvement.

Captain McKinney, Thirteenth Ward, generally good.

Captain Kissner, Fourteenth Ward, bad condition.

Captain Dilks, Fifteenth Ward, some localities very bad.

Captain Mansfield, Seventeenth Ward, filthy.

Captain Wines, Eighteenth Ward, filthy.

Captain Speight, Twenty-first Ward, generally bad.

Captain Witter, Twenty-second Ward, bad.

STREET SWEEPING IN THE RAIN.

The City Inspector had one hundred men on duty on the streets yesterday, sweeping in the rain, and carrying off ashes and rubbish. He has undertaken to clean twelve Wards. They are the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth and Twentieth. The contracts for cleaning these Wards were annulled a few days ago. In the remaining Wards, the contractors continue to work, and agree to execute their contracts faithfully. Mr. REYNOLDS, in his Wards, put on, yesterday, an additional force of men, but they did little, owing to the rain. He evinces a determination to go through with his contract. Mr. MORTON says he shall not hinder him or the other contractors from working, and is willing to give them a proper length of time to finish their work; but he declares that until these Wards are properly cleaned, as stipulated for in their contracts, he shall not pay them a cent.

The cleaning of the First Ward was continued yesterday. Coenties slip, which was in an awful condition, has been thoroughly cleaned. A petition to have this slip closed was sent to Mr. MORTON, signed by one hundred and fifty merchants doing business in the vicinity. The lower portion of Broad street, which was in nearly as bad a state as Coenties-slip, has likewise been cleaned. It is expected that the whole of this Ward will be cleaned by Saturday.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CITY INSPECTOR.

City Inspector MORTON sent the following communication to the Board of Aldermen last night:

To the Honorable Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN: It becomes my duty to call your attention to the necessity existing to cause the immediate cleaning of the streets in almost every Ward in the City. The Wards in the worst condition are the Seventeenth, Twentieth, First, Fourth, Sixth, Fourteenth, Ninth, Fifteenth, Third, Second, Fifth, Eighth and Seventh, being in filthiness about in the order given above. The Comptroller having consented to pay for cleaning the First Ward, laborers were set to work on Saturday morning last, but as the whole Ward is teeming with dirt and filth, it will take some time to cause its proper cleaning. Ash and garbage carts have been employed since Friday morning in all of the above Wards except the Seventh, and the accumulations of ashes and garbage, the heapings of a week and in some instances of weeks, are rapidly disappearing from the sidewalks. This will prevent additions to the filth now lying on the streets; but still nothing can be effected in the removal of this filth until your Honorable Board shall authorize some action to be taken.

Citizens will naturally ask why is this condition of things allowed to be, and in reply the history of the present agreements and proposed contracts furnishes the only answer.

Proposals were opened and forwarded to your honorable body by the (late) Commissioner of Street and Lamps, on the 19th day of March last; the lowest bidders were designated, but no action has been had in confirmation or rejection of the proposals. After this communication was made, the Mayor, Comptroller, and Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, executed a temporary agreement, a copy of which is hereunto annexed, marked A, and the proposed contractors an agreement, a copy of which is marked B.

I do not believe this last agreement to be authorized or legal, and it furnishes no redress (in my judgment) to the City for any default or neglect to perform the work required. If your honorable Board should confirm these proposals, and satisfactory surety be furnished, compliance with the specification could be exacted, and in default be enforced by holding the sureties liable. If, however, you shall not think proper to confirm these proposals, it is due to this Department, having charge of said work, that some means should be devised for its performance. I would urge some immediate action on this subject. Two, and nearly three months, have passed since this communication was sent to your honorable Body, and there can be no doubt that unless energetic action be taken without delay, that before the necessary work can be completed, a pestilence may, and if neglected, will most certainly, desolate our City.

In the Seventeenth Ward, having the largest densely populated territory and greatest number of inhabitants, (sixty thousand,) and mostly of a class who are generally heedless of cleanliness, there is very imminent danger with a few days of warm weather; while in the Twentieth, the next in population—either containing in numbers sufficient to be classed as a city in itself—there is also liability to sickness, and many other Wards are not in much better condition.

I would respectfully ask that such action be taken without delay as shall secure the cleaning of the streets in these, if not all, the Wards mentioned forthwith. The Comptroller refuses to make payment at present for any work other than for the collection by the ash carts, and for the cleaning of the First Ward, unless by contract, and hence I do not feel authorized to proceed with the work until some proceedings shall secure the payment for the labor performed.

I shall not consent to payment under the contracts until any Ward to be paid for shall be in at least an ordinarily cleanly condition, and hence refuse to certify any bills for the Wards mentioned above,

Respectfully,

GEORGE W. MORTON, City Inspector.

CITY INSPECTOR'S DEPARTMENT, New York, June 1, 1857.

NEW-YORK, ——, 185—.

[A]

We, the undersigned, hereby agree and bind ourselves to clean the streets of the —— contract district, being the —— Ward of the City of New-York, and remove the ashes and garbage therefrom, in accordance with the specification issued by the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps therefor, for the sum of —— dollars per year, or at that rate so long as —— may continue to perform the work, subject to the confirmation of the Common Council. The work to be done under the direction and supervision of the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps.

Signed, ——, ——.

[B]

Permission will be given to the lowest bidders with adequate security to clean the streets of the several contract Districts of the City of New-York awarded to them, subject to the action of the Common Council.

Parties wishing to commence work under this regulation will receive their money according to specification, on the regular pay day of the Comptroller, for the work performed by them, application to be made at the office of the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps. Signed by

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.
A. C. FLAGG, Comptroller.
JOSEPH E. EBLING, Com. Streets and Lamps.

OUR TENANT HOUSES—INVITATIONS TO PESTILENCE.

It would be well for our Health Wardens to take a look at some of our dirty tenant houses. There are hundreds of them in the City which, should any epidemic occur, would make sad work, and the filthy state of the majority of them needs immediate attention. It is well known that many of the tenants of these houses are very dirty—throwing all their rubbish into the streets and yards. In many cases, large garbage boxes are placed upon the sidewalk, but not the slightest attention is paid to them, and the filth is thrown into the gutters.

Cottage-row, situated in Thirty-first-street, between Avenue C and D, occupied by rag pickers, numbering in all about 200 persons. There can be but little doubt but that if the rags, old bones, &c., collected by these persons, are allowed to be piled up in their yards or wood-sheds, which, by the way, are not three feet from the house, they will during the hot weather cause some terrible disease.

No. 88 Sheriff-street requires immediate attention; it is another hole tenanted by German rag-pickers, about forty in number; old bones and rags are allowed to be left lying in and about the yards and halls, the odor arising from which is beyond description.

No. 90 Sheriff street, adjoining the above, is a like establishment, occupied by the same class of people, about fifty. A regular washing establishment is kept here for cleaning rags.

The Manhattan Barracks, Goerck street, is in a sad state. It is occupied by about 270 persons, mostly of whom are in the rag business; several of whom collect all their rags from the night soil dumped into the docks at night. The rags thus collected are hung out to dry in the day, from which a most horrible stench arises.

No. 17 Baxter-street, or the Sixth Ward Republican Hall, is in a most disgraceful state; the hall and yard are covered with old rags and rubbish—there being no end of the ashes which are heaped up all over.

Nos. 57 and 59 Mulberry-street, once the Old Mulberry-street Baptist Church, is a fine spot for disease. There are over 320 persons in the buildings and a more wretched set are seldom seen.

No. 40 Laurens-street is a most disgusting den; the stinking odor which arises from the shockingly filthy yards is almost stifling. The yard is filled up with ashes and garbage, and about 60 families occupy the premises.

Rotten Row, Nos. 33, 35, 37, 39, 41 and 43 Laurens-streets, with a rear building on each lot, is badly in want of attention. The alleys and courts are infected receptacles of all the filth and dirt of the houses. About 550 persons are quartered in these miserable buildings.

No. 23 Laurens, occupied by about 50 persons, is in none of the best order, and wants looking after.

Goerck Barracks, Goerck-street, occupied by 542 persons, is in a miserable condition. The filth and garbage around the premises is of the most disgusting description.

No. 119 Willett-street and Nos. 36 and 38 Clinton-street need looking after.

No. 410 Water-street is another hole. There is a most intolerable stench here, caused, no doubt, by pipes which run through the house from water closets.

Nos. 139 and 140 Cherry-street, also No. 142, are three well-stocked tenant-houses, which are, in no way, in the best condition.

The building known as the East and West Gotham Courts, Cherry-street, occupied by about 800 persons, is in a very filthy condition, the yards being filled with heaps of dirt and ashes. The garbage thrown out by the servants is allowed to lie, and the odor from the same is most sickening.

There are many others in as bad a state as these. The tenement houses in the First Ward are in a horrible state, and steps should be taken to compel the removal of the rubbish lying about the premises.

The Board of Aldermen.

THE DAY AND NIGHT WATCH ORDINANCE PASSED.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, Alderman CLANCY, President, in the Chair.

The Committee on Arts and Sciences reported a resolution in favor of appropriating the sum of $500 for a portrait of George W. Matsell, late Chief of Police, to be hung in the Governor's room.

Alderman TUCKER thought such an appropriation ridiculous in the extreme. The idea of hanging the Chief of Police beside such men as Clinton, Young, Wright, Seward, and others, was outrageous. He would not have so great objection to seeing him hung up beside "Old Hays," in the Clerk's Office.

Alderman MONEGHAN thought otherwise. He believed the Chief deserved it, and as they had a portrait of "Old Hays," he thought they should have one of Mr. Matsell. He had long been connected with the City Government, and as he was about to go to a Western home, his portrait would be an agreeable remembrance. There was "Uncle David," he might be going away some day, and he would like to see all three "strung up together,"—"Uncle David" in the centre.

The report was amended, so that that of Mr. Matsell could be hung in the Mayor's Office, but finally the resolution was lost for want of a constitutional majority.

The motion to adopt was reconsidered and laid on the table.

The report in favor of authorizing the Mayor to offer a reward of $2,000 for the detection and conviction of the murderer of Dr. Harvey Burdell, was adopted.

A communication was received from Homer Horton, Civil Engineer, Sacramento City, Cal., submitting a plan for tunneling the East River, at a cost of $1,000,000. It was referred to the Committee on Wharves, Piers and Slips.

The following was adopted:

Resolved, That a Special Committee be, and is hereby, directed to examine all the books, papers and vouchers of the several departments under the City Government, (with the exception of the Comptroller's,) with power to send for persons and papers, and report the true condition of the same to this Board as soon as possible.

A proposition to give the City Inspector power to go on and clean the streets, notwithstanding existing contracts, was made the special order for Wednesday night.

A communication was received from the Mayor, renominating A. V. Stout, Esq., for the office of City Chamberlain. The nomination was confirmed.

The report in favor of concurring with the Councilmen, in favor of appointing "a day and night watch," or "Municipal Police," was read and debated at some length.

Alderman TUCKER opposed the measure and moved that it be laid on the table and printed. His motion was lost. He said he had not had an opportunity of seeing it when printed by the Board of Councilmen. If the members of the Board had been making as great an effort to clean the streets as they had in getting up the Police plan, they would, in his opinion, have been better occupied. The ordinance involved an expenditure of $1,000,000. It had been planned in secret, and now they sought to hurry it through without discussion.

Alderman COLTER favored the passage of the ordinance.

Alderman WILSON was strongly in favor of its immediate passage. The Metropolitan Police Commissioners were stealing away the present police with bribes—therefore he was in favor of the day and night watch, and he would put the Mayor at their head and fight all the Republicans who would attempt to enforce laws against the voice of the people. The Police had not been paid for a month, and if a riot should occur there was no surety that there would be a force to restore order; therefore he thought the municipal force should be appointed immediately. New-York was the first to oppose Great Britain, and it was now ready to oppose, in like manner, similar acts of tyranny. In his opinion, seaport cities ought to govern the country, and not the country the cities. He believed the recent acts, tyrannical as they were, were the incipient steps toward secession from the United States. It was the wild boys—the scape-graces—who gained our liberties, and they would defend them now.

Alderman FULMER would like to vote for the ordinance, but he could not unless it were made to accord with the old Dongan and Montgomerie Charter. That it might be so, he moved to amend and give the appointing power to the Mayor and Common Council, instead of to the Mayor alone.

After some remarks from Alderman BLUNT, Alderman MCSPEDON moved the previous question.

Alderman TUCKER moved to lay the motion on the table. Lost.

The previous question was carried, and the Board concurred with the Councilmen, by a vote of 13 to 8.

Alderman WILSON called up the reports for the relief of Broadway, and moved that 2,500 copies be printed. Carried.

A communication was received from the City Inspector, in reference to cleaning the streets. It may be found under the head of, "Condition of the City."

The communication was referred to the Committee on Cleaning Streets. The Board then adjourned to Wednesday.

The Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors met yesterday afternoon, the President, Supervisor STERBS, in the chair. On the motion that the bill of R. H. ELLIS, for stationery, be paid, amounting to $167, there was some debate.

Supervisor TUCKER wished to know whether the Board was acting under the new or the old Board.

The President said both the Aldermen and Supervisors acted under the recent act, under protest.

Mr. TUCKER said in that case he would vote against that and all other payments. There was no money in the treasury, the $40,000 for County contingencies having been expended recklessly.

Supervisor CLANCY thought the $40,000 had not been expended.

Supervisor MONZOHAN said during the discussion that the Democratic members of the Board had no confidence in the Corporation Counsel, and Supervisor WILSON indorsed his statement. The subject was soon after dropped without action.

Coroner CONNERY sent in a petition asking to be reimbursed the sum of $1,050, expenses which he had been put to by the recent prosecution of him for conduct in the Burdell inquest. The following are some of the items:

Fee to leading counsel for preparing answer to the charge	$650
To another for preparing answer and attending trial	$120
To another	125
To expenses for witnesses	155

It was made the special order of the next meeting.

The following resolution was adopted.

Resolved, That the Comptroller be, and he is hereby requested, to report to this Board the amount (if any) to the credit of "County contingency," and if any portion of the amount appropriated for County contingencies had been used or applied for any other purposes than should be embraced in County expenses.

A resolution in favor of paying the bill of R. W. Bower, special policeman, now connected with the Metropolitan Police, was recommitted.

Supervisor WILSON asked the Democratic members to vote it back, because there was something connected with that officer which made it proper for them to do so.

The following, from the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, was laid on the table. The Democratic members refused to hear it read:

To the Board of Supervisors of the County of New-York:

The undersigned, Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police District of the State of New-York, respectfully submit to the Supervisors of the County of New-York a statement of the sums of money which the said Commissioners do apportion as requisite and needful to be raised by the City and County of New-York to defray the expenses of the Police within the said City and County for the next fiscal year.

Very respectfully,
S. DRAPER, President,
JAS. W. NYE,
JACOB CHOLWELL,
J. S. T. STRANAHAN,
JAMES BOWEN.

Apportionment of money made by the Commissioners of Police in pursuance of section 26 of the act, entitled "An act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the payment thereof," passed April 5, 1857, to be raised by the City and County of New York, to defray the expenses of police within the said City and County.

To pay of 18 Inspectors, or Captains, at $1,200	$21,600
To pay of 72 Sergeants, at $900	64,800
To pay of 1,100 Patrolmen, at $800	888,000
To pay 36 Doormen, at $700	25,200
To pay of 30 Patrolmen for Central Park, at $800	24,000
To day of 3 Commissioners, 300 days, at $8 per day	7,200
To pay of proportion of Treasurer's salary, $3,000 per annum	2,250
To pay of proportion of General Superintendent, $3,000	2,250
To pay of one Deputy Superintendent	2,000
To pay of 4 Surgeons, $1,500	6,000
To pay of proportion of 6 clerks, $1,000	4,500
Total	$1,047,800

Expenses of General office, apportioned to the City and County of New-York:

Contingent Expenses	$3,000
Rent of Office	750
Stationary and Printing	3,000
Police Telegraph	5,000
Fuel	130
Lights	459
Total	$12,339

If the Common Council shall not grant the use of the Police Station-houses to the Commissioners of Police, there will be required the following further sums:

For rent of Station-houses	$17,000
For fitting up the same	4,800
For Fuel	2,500
For Lights	9,600
Total	$33,900

The Board then adjourned to Monday next.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met last night, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

Councilman RYER, after the roll was called, and the absentees had been twice called, insisted upon it that it was the duty of the Chairman to adjourn.

Councilman REYNOLDS came to the rescue. He thought the President had discretionary power, and could keep the Board till midnight if necessary. After ten minutes the Board was organized, the refractory member protesting against the President, although the latter declared that a quorum was present.

VALUE OF THE DONGAN CHARTER.

It was then moved by the President:

Whereas, The Legislature at its late session passed a charter for this City, and by section 50 of said charter it reads as follows: "The City of New-York shall be divided into 17 Aldermanic Districts;" and

Whereas, By section 54 of said charter the following clause is enacted, saiwcly: "But the charter of the City of New-York, known as the Dongan and Montgomerie Charter, so far as the same or either of them are now in force, shall continue and remain in full force, and shall not be construed as repealed, modified or in any manner affected thereby;" and

Whereas, The Dongan and Montgomerie Charters, as well as all subsequent charters prior to the charter of 1857, so far as the same relates to the above, says that each Ward shall be entitled to one Aldermon, was in full force and existence at the time of the passage of the charter of 1857, which charter declares there shall be only 17 Aldermanic districts, which is in direct conflict with the meaning and spirit of section 54, but still recognizing by subsequent acts 22 Wards, thereby depriving five Wards (if not more) each of an Alderman; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Counsel to the Corporation be requested to give his opinion forthwith as to the legality of section 50 of said charter. And if the same is inconsistent with existing laws at the time of the passage of the same, to inform this Board what legal steps are necessary to retain and protect the rights of the citizens of this City which were in existence and recognized by section 54 of the charter of 1857.

Councilman RYER objected to the hasty manner in which the vote was called.

The President directed the Serjeant-at-Arms to show the gentleman to his seat, and to put him under arrest if he did not take it quietly.

The roll was then called on the passage of the paper in question.

Councilman RYER did not know what he was asked to vote on, and therefore refused to vote.

Adopted almost unanimously.

RESOLUTIONS REFERRED.

To direct the Comptroller to pay $300, being the expenses incurred by the Committee that met in Philadelphia the Convention of Health, in May last. To fill sunken lots corner of Second-avenue and Thirty-sixth-street. To fill sunken lots between One Hundred and Seventeenth and One Hundred and Nineteenth streets and Third and Fourth avenues. To call on the counsel of the Corporation for his opinion as to the legality of the 50th section of the Charter of 1857. To flag sidewalks on the north and south sides of Christopher-street, between Hudson and Greenwich streets.

REPORT ADOPTED.

In favor of confirming assessment in the matter of opening the Central Park.

After some other routine business the Board went into Committee—Councilman JONES in the chair.

NEW CITY HALL.

It was moved that the matter be recommended to be passed over of refusing to build a new City Hall, until the same be authorized by the Common Council. It was subsequently moved that the Comptroller pay no warrants for such expenditure. The latter resolution adopted.

The remission of assessments on the Watts and Leake Orphan Asylum was recommended to be reported as adopted by the Committee.

The Committee reported, and the President resumed his seat.

A SAVORY SUBJECT.

A communication from the City Inspector in reference to the emptying of privies was referred to the Committee on Public Health. After the transaction of other comparatively unimportant business the Board adjourned to Thursday.

THE EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—A meeting of the Excise Commissioners was announced for yesterday morning, to be held in the Common Pleas Court-room, but Mr. HASKETT was the only Commissioner present,—Mr. HOLMES being engaged in the Superior Court, and Mr. KEPE continuing sick. Another meeting was announced for to-morrow.

It was stated that at the next meeting some licenses would be granted. The only business transacted in the meetings of the Commissioners thus far has been the reception of applications. The Commissioners state that they have determined to begin thus early to grant licenses, so that parties desiring to test the constitutionality of the law can do so at once. They have also determined to test the disposition of the Board of Supervisors toward them, by sending in their bill of expenses for stationery, office room, &c., at the next meeting of the Board. They wish to know whether the Supervisors will authorize the Comptroller to pay them, and so recognize their existence.

JUNE—WEATHER OR NO.—Yesterday was June 1. It was likewise extremely wet; in point of fact the wettest June first we have seen in many a year—a day to be remembered, but not one to be proud of. Something has happened, somewhere, or we never could have had such a series of dreadful soakings as yesterday and many yesterdays before it have inflicted upon sinning mortality in this ilk. There is one advantage, though: Our floods clear up the streets a trifle, and that is a delightful thing. As to any future permanence of sunshine, however, we announce our conversion to skepticism; there can be none, henceforth.

ORDINATION OF MR. EDWARD CHESTER.—The Fourth-avenue Presbyterian Church was well attended Sunday evening, the occasion being the ordination of Mr. EDWARD CHESTER, a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, New-York, to the Ministry. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. SPAULDING. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. JOEL PARKER, the pastor, who selected for his text the 2d verse of the xliith chapter of acts as follows: "As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work, whereunto I have called them." An impressive charge was delivered by Rev. A. A. WOOD, and the ceremonies concluded with an ordination prayer by Rev. Dr. W. ADAMS. Mr. CHESTER designs entering upon the Ceylon mission service in a few months.

A Slight Error.

SIR: Will you have the kindness to correct a misstatement in your paper this morning? There is no such person as "LYONS," a member of Hose Company No. 25, nor has such a name ever been upon our roll. Yours, respectfully,

JOSEPH B. PATON, Sec'y 25 Hose.

MARINE MATTERS.

The Iron and Rigging on the Niagara—How they came to be defective—Frauds upon the Government winked at—Advance Payment to Seamen—New Mail Steamer for Liverpool.

Capt. HADSON, it is said, has reported to the Secretary of the Navy that portions of the iron-work on the Niagara gave way on the passage to England, resulting from the defective quality of the iron. One of the forward swifters (the chain portion) of the main rigging, parted during a gale of wind, endangering her masts, and obliging them to resort to temporary stays, set up by tackles, to save them; and the eye bolt, or gooseneck, in the mainsail, also broke off, the sail falling upon deck. The only spar carried away was the mizzen topgallant mast, which broke off in the cap during the two days' trial trip.

The contract price paid by the Government for their iron is $65 per ton, while it is notorious that the best iron cannot be bought in the market for less than $80 per ton. This iron is subject to inspection, and in many cases cargoes have been rejected on account of its inferior quality; but through political influences parties contrive to have the Board of Inspection changed, and have thus got their rejected iron thrust upon the Department. The master smith of the yard has often rejected iron as unfit, on account of its quality, which he has afterwards been compelled to use. Under the present system it is considered doubtful if the Navy will ever be supplied with good iron, and the wonder is, not that some portions of the iron work of the Niagara gave way, but that there was not more of it. It is not uncommon for vessels arriving, after heavy weather, to be completely crippled by the giving away of that portion of the ship's work.

THE COLLINS' LINE.—Mr. E. K. COLLINS has made arrangements with the Government to place the new steamship Columbia on the line to Liverpool, and has contracted with her owners for that purpose. She will leave with the mails on her first trip on Saturday next. The Columbia was built for Messrs. STOFFORD, TILESTON & Co.'s Charleston line, by WM. H. COLLIER. She is 1,800 tons burden, is 235 feet long, and has three water-tight compartments enclosing the engines, rendering her one of the most substantial and safe sea-going steamers afloat. She has two side-lever marine engines, made at the Novelty Works. She has made but two trips to Charleston, and her last run this way (650 miles) was accomplished in forty-nine hours, proving herself one of the fastest steamers in port. She has been built under the supervision of Captain M. BERRY, by whom she is to be commanded.

The Columbia is now open for the inspection of the public at the Collins' steamboat wharf, foot of Canal-street, N. R. No better opportunity can be offered to cross the Atlantic, either for safety, comfort or speed. The Atlantic will succeed the Columbia, and sail on the 20th inst.

The large three-masted schooner Indianola, McMURRAY, master, belonging to LAYTON & HURLBURT, hence for New-Orleans on Saturday, went ashore at Long Beach, 10 miles from Barnegat, on Sunday at noon, in a fog, while the officers were below at dinner. She is 500 tons burden, and mostly uninsured. She has a large cargo of heavy merchandize, on which there is little insurance in Wall-street. She lies with her stern on the outer bar and head in-shore, is making but little water; her false keel came up along side of her. The steam-tug Achilles, and schooners H. W. Johnson and H. B. Fidderman, left this evening for her assistance, with steam-pumps, anchors, cables, &c., under the superintendence of Capt. TILYOU, agent of the underwriters.

The steamer Isaac Newton, which was ashore near Stony Point, was Monday morning taken on the Marine Railway, at Hunter's Point, opposite Thirty fifth street, E. R., for repairs.

MARINE LOSSES.—The total value of Marine losses for the month of May, foots up one million two hundred and fifty-one thousand five hundred dollars, exclusive of damage to vessels not amounting to total loss, and of partial losses of cargo. The vessels are principally American, although some foreign are included—when bound to or from a United States port, or known to be insured in this country.

The whole number of vessels is 33, of which there were one steamship, six ships, three barks, four brigs, and nineteen schooners. Of these five are missing and supposed to be lost; five were abandoned at sea, and one was burned.

THE BARK MILFORD.—By letter to ELWOOD WALTER, dated Rio de Janeiro, April 13, we learn that the bark Milford, Capt. MORGAN, put into that port in distress on the 8th inst., on her voyage from Mazatlan bound to Cork, for orders, with a cargo of logwood and copper ore. While off the Falkland Islands, this vessel experienced a terrific hurricane, during which she shipped a sea, which took off every thing movable from the deck, carried away her bulwarks fore and aft, sprung foremast, main yard and fore-topsail yard, damaged the rigging, blew away sails and sprung a leak, and finally washed her Captain (CORY) overboard, who was unfortunately lost.

Police Ruffians.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Reading your article on "New-York Ruffians," in this morning's paper, has induced me to send you the following statement of a scene which took place last Friday afternoon, in Fulton-street, near Broadway.

An elderly lady, with one whom I took to be her daughter, while passing along, were attacked by one of these ruffians, and the old lady knocked down, where upon the fellow fled. A man who witnessed the operation immediately started in pursuit, and of course a crowd followed, among whom was policeman No. — of the Broadway squad. The fellow was caught in Church street, (after a chase of three blocks,) collared by the policeman, and taken back. Being close by when the arrest was made, my attention was attracted by the fellow's action. As soon as arrested, a conversation something as follows occurred:

PRISONER—Come this way to the Station-house.

POLICEMAN—You come along.

PRISONER—Look here, old man, there's no use of your taking me back there. You can't lock me up—it won't do, you know.

POLICEMAN—Well, come along.

PRISONER—Now you're putting on airs. Look at me—you know me?

POLICEMAN—(Looking at him)—Yes, I know you.

PRISONER—Well, then, you won't lock me up.

Having arrived at the corner of Fulton and Broadway, they were met by Policeman No. —, also of Broadway Squad, who no sooner glanced at the prisoner's countenance, than he began to act, in what I thought, a rather unceremonious manner. Going up to the women who had but just recovered the effects of their fright and fall, he said—"Here, what's the matter here?"

YOUNG LADY—Why that man (pointing to prisoner) knocked us down.

POLICEMAN—Well, here, you just clear out. I won't have you here—clear out, I say.

And with that he shoved the woman away, while Policeman No. — quietly told the ruffian to go.

When asked by a bystander why he let the fellow off in that way, he answered "none of your business." And when told that it seemed very strange that he should chase a man three blocks, catch him, bring him back, and then when he found out who and what he was, let him go, he ordered the same party to move on, or he would arrest him. And again, when he saw the writer taking his number, he informed him "that he might take and do what he pleased with it,—but that he couldn't touch him."

Let me ask, Sir, what are we to do with ruffians and such Police? If we make complaints at headquarters, they are unnoticed,—if we take the law into our own hands, we are liable,—how then, shall we obtain JUSTICE.

P. S.—I would observe, that these worthies may be seen any pleasant day (Sundays excepted) guarding the interests of an appreciative public, at the corner of Fulton street and Broadway.

MONDAY, June 1, 1857.

DEPREDATIONS AT SEGUINE'S POINT.—In addition to the destruction by fire of the remaining buildings on Seguine's Point, purchased by the Quarantine Commissioners on Saturday last, the bridge which formed part of the street leading from the main road to the water, has been torn up and carried away. It will be difficult to cart timber and other building materials to the Quarantine ground until another bridge shall have been erected.

THE SOCIETY LIBRARY.—The public announcement, of yesterday, respecting an election of Librarian of the Society Library, proves not to have been correct. No election took place, and no day for an election has yet been named by the Trustees.

TO THE RETAIL STRAW HATTERS.—WE ARE now prepared to offer, of our own manufacture, the variegated or black and white Swiss Sennette whole straw Hat, feeling confident that they will be the leading style of hat for this Summer, no other straw hat presenting so many advantages to the wearer. They are not only light flexible and uncommonly durable, but being of a mottled appearance precludes the possibility of their showing the dust and dirt, which obviates the objection so often made by the wearers of straw hats. We would also beg leave to say, our stock of men's, boys', and children's hats is complete in every branch.

COTTON UNCHANGED—BREADSTUFFS STEADY

Consols 93 3-4@93 7-8.

QUEBEC, Monday, June 1.

The Canadian Steamship Company's screw steamship Canadian, from Liverpool at an early hour on the morning of the 20th May, has arrived at Riviere du Loup, en route for this port and Montreal.

Her advices are four days later than those by the Cunard steamship Arabia, at New-York.

The Cunard steamship Europa, from Boston May 6, via Halifax, arrived at Liverpool on the 17th ult.

The screw steamship City of Washington was to sail for New-York on the same day with the Canadian.

The Canadian passed Riviere du Loup at a late hour last night, but has not yet reached this port.

Great Britain.

No movements of interest had taken place in Parliament.

The Manchester Market was dull, but without change in prices.

The Birmingham Markets were steady, with a good American demand, and woolen manufactures were slightly better.

The Irish Linen market was heavy.

France.

Paris letters report the Discount market easy, with a better supply of Money on the Bourse.

Considerable Specie was due at Paris from Russia.

It was rumored that the Bank of France had made a new contract for a supply of Gold.

The Silk Market remained in a state of suspense, but nothing unfavorable had transpired. From Naples the accounts were good, and from Lombardy uncertain.

Switzerland.

The Neufchatel difficulty had been finally settled, all the parties agreeing upon the terms.

Spain.

It is reported from Madrid that at an interview between the Mexican Ambassador and the Spanish Foreign Minister, the basis of an arrangement of the Mexican difficulty was made.

The Spanish Squadron remained at Cadiz.

Denmark.

The new Danish Ministry are apparently ameliorating the Holstein difficulty.

The Danubian Principalities.

ORLE has asked the great powers to occupy the Danubian Principalities with a military force, but the powers refused permission.

Syria.

There has been an engagement at Damascus between the Turks and the revolted Arabs.

Persia.

The British Treaty of Peace with Persia was ratified at Teheran on the 14th of April.

China and India.

Details of the previously telegraphed news from China and India are published. They are entirely confirmatory of the previous accounts, and contain nothing new of importance. No further operations have yet taken place at Canton.

The position of the British forces in the Canton River was unchanged, and the Chinese had made no attempt against it. Hong Kong and Shanghae were quiet.

In India, two of the native regiments had mutinied.

Liverpool Cotton Market.

The Liverpool COTTON Market was generally quiet, and prices had undergone no change since the departure of the Arabia. The sales of the three days were 16,000 bales, of which 1,800 bales were taken by speculators, and 1,600 bales for export.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market.

The Liverpool Breadstuffs Market was generally steady. WHEAT closed firm, at prices showing no change since the previous Friday. FLOUR was quiet, but there had been no change in rates. CORN was steady and 6d. ₱ quarter higher.

Liverpool Provision Market.

The Liverpool Provision Market was dull, the various articles were slow of sale, but prices were unaltered. LARD was quiet at 60s. ₱ cwt.

Liverpool Produce Market.

RICE was steady. SUGAR was also steady. RESIN was unchanged and steady. POT ASHES were firm; sales of 20 bbls. at 46s. 9d.

London Markets.

The newspaper reports quote the London Produce Markets generally unchanged. SNOAR was firm at 1s. advance. COFFEE and KICE were firm and without change in rates. IRON was steady. Sales of Scotch Pig at 75s.

London Money Market.

The London Money Market was generally unchanged. Consols for Money, 93¾@93⅞, and for account, 94⅛.

The Steamship Canadian Ashore in the St. Lawrence.

QUEBEC, Monday, June 1,

The screw steamship Canadian, from Liverpool for this port, went ashore at the Pillars, forty miles below this city, at 1 o'clock this morning. The extent of the damage to her is unknown. The Provincial steam tug Napoleon has been sent to her assistance.

An Awful Tragedy—Neglect, Adultery and Murder.

From the Auburn American.

One tragedy follows another in quick succession in this country. Yesterday, at noon, a man named DANIEL RYAN was murdered in Weedsport, nine miles from this city, under the most painful and shocking circumstances, by a man named PATRICK SAGE. The murder occurred as follows: SAGE and RYAN—both Irishmen—are brothers-in law. Their mother in-law, an old lady, lived with SAGE. She was very ill—indeed lying at the point of death—and utterly helpless. SAGE, who has one child, does not live with his wife. RYAN, who was a farm-laborer, and a peaceable and temperate man, hearing that his mother-in-law was ill-used by SAGE, and grossly neglected in her illness, yesterday repaired to the dwelling of SAGE about noon, and on entering the room in which the old lady was lying, walking up to her bed, and announcing his intention to remove her to his own home, where she might die in peace. SAGE at this moment was in bed, in the same room, indulging in adulterous commerce with a woman of the town, who had been an inmate of his house several days. RYAN remonstrated with him upon his outrageous violations of law, decency, and the ordinary proprieties of domestic life. Upon this SAGE—who, as well as the woman with whom he was cohabiting, was much intoxicated—became incensed, and leaping from the bed in a great passion, made a violent assault upon RYAN with his fists and feet. RYAN made but little if any resistance. He fell to the floor, where he was stamped to death by SAGE, whose heavy boot-soles were full of nails. He received a gash in the forehead, but the physicians were of opinion that his death—which occurred in a very short time—was caused by internal injuries caused by the kicking he received by SAGE in his chest.

Having committed this dreadful deed of murder, SAGE took up the body and threw it out of doors! Some women picked it up and took it in.

The murderer was at once arrested by officer JUDSON RUDE, and placed in custody. The Coroner's inquest is being held to-day, and SAGE will probably be lodged in jail here this afternoon. He is an intemperate and very bad man, and is nearly sixty years of age. His victim was about the same age. The excitement in Weedsport was very great yesterday afternoon, rising almost to the determination to execute summary justice upon the wretch.

SAGE got into a drunken row at Weedsport on the Fourth of July last, in which he struck a man a terrible blow on the head with an axe, which came near depriving him of his life. His career of crime approaches its close.

The murdered man leaves a wife, and two very promising boys who are approaching manhood, and who are greatly respected.

MEETING OF THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE LEGISLATURE.—The New-Hampshire Legislature will meet next Wednesday, and Hon. WM. HALE, Governor elect, will probably be inaugurated on the afternoon of that day. It will be incumbent on the Legislature to make choice of a United States Senator to fill the seat of the late Hon. JAMES BELL, during the next four years. The list of candidates comprises the names of DANIEL CLARK, ICHABOD GOODWIN, THOMAS M. EDWARDS, JOEL EASTMAN, of Conway, and others. Mr. GOODWIN was the Whig Republican candidate for Governor last year.

THE GERMAN SPRING FESTIVAL.

The weather treated our German citizens very badly yesterday. It was their great holiday, their annual festival, their "welcome to the spring." But spring met their welcome "from the bosom of a dropping cloud," and dushed their hopes and drowned their enjoyment, with a day-long, sky-full deluge of vernal rain. The Pic-Nic of the "Sangerbund" which was to have taken place at Conrad's Garden, Yorkville, in which eighteen singing bands of this and neighboring cities were to have participated,—to which half the Germans in New-York would have taken their wives and children, and where a large number of Americans would have assembled as spectators, interested in the national sports and the music of Germany,—that much anticipated festival had to be postponed. If to-day should prove favorable, it may take place, though we rather think, the Committee having the arrangements in charge, will consider the soaked state of the ground, rendering it totally unfit for women and children to recline upon, and will postpone it until next Monday.

But unfavorable as the weather was, the "Turners" were not to be put off with a postponement. Their "fest platz," or festival ground, was, as described in the advertisement in the Staats Zeitung, "one of the most beautiful spots on Long Island, near Division avenue, and only one mile from the Ferry." According to their programme, after certain ceremonies in their Turnhalle, between Montrose-avenue and Leonard street, they were to march through most of the principal streets of Williamsburg, and then proceed to the "delightful spot, distant only one mile from the ferry,"—the Peck Slip and Grand-street ferry, of course. The weather interfered with their marching in the City, and they did but little of that, but made the best of their way to the delightful spot. And in fine weather, a delightful spot it would have been,—a beautiful grove, thick with wide-spreading shade-trees. There were Turners from Williamsburg and Brooklyn, from Staten Island and Jersey City, from Newark and Paterson, and a dozen other places. And dressed in their clean white suits, with their Hungarian hats, and hunter's belts, they had truly a most picturesque appearance as they sallied forth. With the ladies who accompanied them, they numbered when they reached the ground, about ten or eleven hundred. Their flags and banners were first tastefully arranged in the branches of the trees, and then they imbibed lager bier. They sung next a song of fatherland, and then they drank lager bier. Then forming themselves into social parties, they laughed, chatted, shouted, gathered twigs of leaves and blossoms from the trees, with which to decorate their hats, and realize to themselves that Spring had really come,—nay, that it was almost or quite Summer. Continually new comers arrived. Many who had intended to go with the Sangerbund to Yorkville, determined to have a holiday, although a wet one, hurried to the "delightful spot one mile from the ferry" to witness the gymnastic exercises of the "Turners," and drink lager bier, for old Gambrinus' sake, on Pfingstmontag.

Thither, also, hurried our reporter. Not till a later hour of the day, however. He crossed the ferry in a soaking rain. Finding no conveyance that was not crowded with the German fair ones, he resolved to trudge it on foot to the grounds. Only one mile, and a good road before him, so he manfully set out.

It was the longest mile he ever walked. When he was positive that he had walked at least two miles, he concluded to stop and inquire. Meeting a German, he asked how far it was from the ferry to the Festplatz. "Two hours," was the response. As it did not convey any definite idea the inquiry was repeated. "Well, the distance is more as one mile," answered the German. Our reporter thought that it was, indeed, more than one mile, and walked on. He persevered through the rain for half an hour longer, still there was no festplatz. He concluded to inquire again of another German, and was told that the distance was twenty minutes. The truth flashed upon him. He had read the distance in a German paper. "One mile from the ferry." Horrible dictu, it was a German mile. Now, a German mile is five English or American miles, and the Germans calculate that, in their easy manner, it takes two hours to walk it.

Arrived at the ground, everything wore an unpromising appearance. The rain had been falling for sometime. The white suits of the Turners, and the dresses of the ladies, were completely drenched. The ground was so wet that no gymnastics, no posturing, no feats of any kind could be attempted. As one Turner said, "it rained from the sky first, and then from the trees." Still they were cheerful, and sang glees, and drank lager bier. Long before the hour appointed for their return, they put themselves into marching order, left the ground, and marched—such of them as had to cross to New-York—that "one mile" to the ferry, the rain falling heavily all the way. There was not one of them inebriated, nor, though they had been severely disappointed, was any ill-temper manifested. They laughed, sung and waved their flags as they marched, satisfied that they had done what their countrymen at home, and all over the world, never fail to do—welcome in the Spring on Whitmonday.

THE COMPTROLLER REFUSES TO PAY COUNCILMEN'S SALARIES.—Yesterday, Mr. MCCLENACHAN, clerk of the Board of Councilmen, made formal application to Comptroller FLAGG for the payment of the monthly salary of each member of the Board of Councilmen, ($32,) but, as was expected, the Comptroller refused to pay. The new Charter forbids the payment of such salaries, and the Comptroller supports his refusal by producing the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, which declares the claim of the Councilmen invalid. It is understood that Mr. J. N. PHILLIPS, President of the Board of Councilmen, will immediately institute legal proceedings to compel the Comptroller to make payment, and this suit will determine the case of the remaining members of the Board.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM—June 1

The Quarantine Commissioners—Application for Injunction Denied.

Cornelius L. Androvette vs. Obadiah Bxone et al., Commissioners, &c.—On Saturday evening the plaintiff made an application for an ex parte injunction against the Commissioners. His honor took the papers, and this morning denied the application with the following opinion. It contains some hints which may be beneficial to future injunction seekers.

ROOSEVELT, J.—The plaintiff, who is the owner of the premises adjoining the Wolfe Farm on Staten Island, asks for an ex parte injunction to restrain the Quarantine Commissioners from erecting any Hospital buildings or docks on the farm lately purchased by them, and from designating for the anchorage of fever vessels a certain part of the Bay situated about a mile and a half distant, and which has been selected for that purpose.

Without going into the merits of the plaintiff's application, it is sufficient to say that no case of an immediately pressing character is made—none, at all events, so urgent as to render it proper to dispense with the usual preliminary notice to the adverse party.

Nor are orders to show cause, matters of course. They imply, when granted, at least a partial expression of opinion, which should always be avoided, if practicable. They are the more objectionable, too, when accompanied, as is sought in this case, by an intermediate restraining clause, and that without security for any damage which may result from the stoppage, should the complaint afterwards, on a hearing of both sides, turn out to be unfounded.

The Code, as a general rule, required that motions should not be made without a notice of eight days. And although the court or judge may prescribe a shorter time, or even dispense with notice altogether, the power, it is obvious, was intended to be confined to exceptional cases, and not to be exercised indiscriminately on all occasions, many of them not of urgency, but only of urgent parties.

The writ or order of injunction is a valuable remedial process. It has been in use for centuries; and in the present state of society its occasional application is as indispensable to the body politic as certain medical and surgical operations are to the body natural. Like them, however, it requires great caution. An unguarded and too free use of the injunction power must inevitably lead to its entire suppression—a result which, in the course of time, none would deplore more than those who are now so clamorous to bring it about.

Motion denied, with leave to renew it on the regular eight-day notice.

Before Hon. Justices Mitchell, Roosevelt and Davies,

SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

THE PAULDING HABEAS CORPUS.

The People ex rel. Sarah W. Paulding vs. Philip R. Paulding.—This is a case of husband and wife living, as the Statute expresses it, in a state of separation without being divorced. The wife, as she was authorized to do, some time since applied to the court to have one of the children of the marriage, a girl less than three years old, delivered up to her. On a preliminary hearing of both parties, the charge and custody of the child was awarded to the mother, accompanied by certain directions which were intended to provide fully for the father's right to visit his offspring, pending the unhappy controversy, and subject to such modification (if any) of the order as the evidence, when more fully presented, should appear to demand.

The husband, on an affidavit of certain alleged intentions of his wife, now applies for an order that his wife be required to give security to keep the child within the jurisdiction of the Court, to abide the final determination of the suit.

Mrs. Paulding denies any such purpose as is imputed to her. She admits, however, that she contemplates a visit during the Summer months to one of the neighboring States of Massachusetts or Connecticut. Although such an excursion, with a view to health, may be every way unobjectionable, still it is proper that the husband, if he desires it, should have some security that the child shall be forthcoming when required. Both parents have rights—and the rights of both should be equally guarded. If the temporary custody, while the question is pending, be given to the mother, the privilege should not be made an instrument of possible injustice to the father.

Order for security accordingly.

Before Hon Justice Clerke.

In the matter of the Mayor, &c., relating to the opening and extending the Bowery—In the matter of the claims of Ellen Kent.—Report confirmed.

The Franklin Branch of the State Bank of Ohio vs Wm. Walter et al.—Motion granted without costs.

Before Hon Justice Davies.

In re the Mechanics' Fire Insurance Company—Let an order be entered, directing the receiver to pay Charles E. Whitehead, Esq., the sum of $250, on account of service rendered to such receiver in the matter.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

John Just et al. vs. William H. Johnson.—Judgment for plaintiff on demurrer.

Pierre F. Renard vs. Wm. H. Blashfield.—Motion to confirm report of referee granted.

Robert McButt vs. Edwin Peck.—Motion granted.

Peter H. Hopkins vs. Salvatore Cara.—Motion to dismiss appeal granted.

Peter Linthall vs. Joseph Mauer.—Inquest set aside on payment of disbursements, &c.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

The June term of this Court commenced yesterday. As there was not a sufficient number of Grand Jurors to form a quorum, the impanneling of that body had to be postponed till to-day, the Court meanwhile imposing fines on the absentees. A very large panel of petit jurors was called, one half of whom tried to make excuses, most of them ineffectually.

The District Attorney moved that Gerard Hale, indicted for robbery at the bonded warehouse, should be discharged on his own recognizance, as he had given some important information, that would materially subserve the ends of justice. The motion was granted.

There being no cases ready for trial, the Court adjourned. Some heavy cases will be tried this term, and it is contemplated to hold a double session, the City Judge sitting in the Supreme Court Circuit Room.

LONG ISLAND.

BOARD OF EXCISE.—The Brooklyn Board of Excise was in session yesterday to receive applications and give the necessary papers to parties to whom licenses had already been granted. Another meeting will be held to-day to grant licenses.

The Police Magistrates of Brooklyn commenced yesterday to enforce the new law. Each person brought up for intoxication, if convicted, was fined $10, or in default sent to jail and sworn as to where they obtained their liquor.

Under this law a man was fined $50 in Jamaica, last week, for selling liquor without license.

TELEGRAPHIC.—It is in contemplation to construct a line of telegraph from Brooklyn through Newtown, Flushing, North Hempstead and Oyster Bay, and returning through Hempstead and Jamaica.

The Excise Commissioners in Queens County have received about $3,000 for licenses.

BROORLYN COURTS.—Judge BIRDSEYE opened a special term of the Circuit yesterday. The calendar embraces 150 cases, and from Nos. 1 to 23 will be called to-day.

The City Court, Judge CULVER, convened and adjourned till to day, when the first twenty cases will be called. There are 70 cases on the calendar.

Decrease of Specie	311,220
Decrease of Circulation	41,332
Increase of Undrawn Deposits	58,669

Including the Clearing-House exchanges of the week, and the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday, the following is

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	May 31, 1858.	May 30, 1857.	May 23, 1857.
Capital	$59,791,000	$60,442,000	$60,442,000
Loans	102,451,275	114,049,533	114,049,102
Specie	14,021,289	12,815,515	13,126,735
Circulation	8,269,151	8,696,693	8,739,025
Gross Deposits	86,775,313	96,157,814	97,306,036
Exchanged	22,247,452	27,681,906	28,788,797
Sub-Treasury	13,673,741	13,041,370	13,556,264

The general movement, it will be noticed, is unusually steady, and the difference in the Specie reserve remarkably slight, after an export of $2,700,000 the past week. It is again considerably less than the registered movement, inward and outward, indicated, showing some further accessions from the interior exchanges. The neighboring cities are still debtor to New-York, but owing to the ease in money here, the balances have not been called home very closely. The export demand this week will be about the usual amount in the Summer months for the Boston packet, say $800,000 or a million of dollars. Part of this will be put up in Boston on transfer draft from the Sub-Treasury—$100,000 deposited for the purpose to-day. Bills are firm to-day without much activity as yet, 109½@109¾ ₱ cent. on London; 5.17½@5.16¼ on Paris. The week opens on an easy money market; not much doing in demand loans, and several of the leading Stock firms having large Bank balances over at the close of the day. The large active speculative stocks, several of them at least, were scarcer to day for immediate transfer than the money, and they were only drawn by the offers of large differences between the cash certificates and sellers' options. The principal sales of the day for cash were at 39 ₱ cent. At the Second Board and after the stock was sold for transfer on Tuesday or Wednesday at 38¾@38⅞ 37¾@⅝, while sellers' options were done at 37½ down to 36 ₱ cent. The limited supply of certificates has enabled the Bulls to make their own terms for cash, while the unexpected and involuntary corner has excited the Bears to put out new contracts ahead at a difference against themselves of 1@2 ₱ cent. The same state of the market obtained in Reading, which sold as high as 82@82¼ cash in the forenoon, and 81½ at the Second Board. In Michigan Southern the business registered was at 58@57½, the same as on Saturday, though lower offers to sell were reported after the official list was posted; probably to effect to-morrow's market, where considerable deliveries have to be made. The point of difference—the removal of the office from its present location—upon which the rumor of Saturday for a want of harmony in the direction originated has been mutually arranged. It in no wise affected the working of the road or the policy of its future management, and so far as the new Board is concerned there is no want of accord, and we presume will be none. State Stocks quite firm, and ¼@1 ₱ cent. up. Large additional purchases were made in Cleveland and Pittsburg shares at 49½@49 ₱ cent. Panama advanced to 96½ ₱ cent; the stock scarce and well held. New-York Central brought 87@87½ against 84 last week. The general market left off, on the Street, after the official list was printed in favor of the operators for a fall. The contest to-day has been unusually spirited, and the week promises to be an interesting one.

In our advertising columns, the dissolution of the old and successful firm of STRAHN & SCOTT Bankers, is announced. Both partners retire from business, after an uninterrupted association and high mercantile credit of nearly twenty years. The new firm, noticed last week, of A. N. LEWIS & T. STOUT, Brokers, opened business to-day under the banking-house of Messrs. DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co., corner of Pine and Nassau streets.

THE NEWS BY THE CITY OF WASHINGTON.

The steamship City of Washington, from Liverpool, about 3 P. M. of Wednesday, 20th ult., arrived at this port last night. Her advices are of the same date as those brought by the Canadian at Quebec, and received by telegraph.

Our foreign exchanges are very destitute of news A telegraphic dispatch from Madrid announces that at the interview M. LAFRAGUA, the Mexican Envoy, had with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, the bases of a definitive arrangement were agreed to.

By the Canadian it was reported that the Spanish squadron, destined to operate against Mexico, had not left Cadiz. A later dispatch says that the squadron had set sail for the West Indies. It was comprised o six ships, which carried out 2,450 troops, thoroughly equipped.

A private letter from Naples, of the 10th, mentions that for some days hopes were entertained in that city of the resumption of diplomatic relations with England; that Lord CLARENDON appeared to have manifested a desire to that effect, hnt that "the exigencies" he put forth have prevented the realization of these hopes. "The King of Naples," the letter says, "caused it to be made known in London that, in his eyes, they implied an idea of intervention, which was inconsistent with the dignity and the interests of an independent State—an intervention opposed to the principles professed by the English nation itself, and contrary to the preceding declarations of the Western Powers."

In the House of Commons on the 19th ult., Lord PALMERSTON brought down a Message from the Queen, announcing to the Houses that Her Majesty had consented to a marriage between the Princess Royal and Prince FREDERICK WILLIAM of Prussia, and asking the concurrence and the assistance of the House in making such a provision for her eldest daughter with regard to the marriage as would be suitable to the dignity of the Royal Family and the honor of the country.

Movement of the United States Frigate Niagara—Preparations to receive the Atlantic Cable.

From the London News, May 18.

On Saturday, the United States steamship, the Niagara, dropped down the river to the moorings at East Greenwich, and to day (Monday) Her Majesty's ship Agamemnon, 91 guns, will come round from Portsmouth and take up her moorings there, to ship the submarine telegraph to be laid down in the Atlantic Ocean to connect the Continents of America and Europe. The length of cable to be put on board each vessel exceeds 1,300 miles; it will take upwards of six weeks to deposit the cable in the ships' holds. According to present arrangements, Her Majesty's ship Agamemnon and the United States frigate Niagara will leave the Thames about the first week in July, in company with Her Majesty's ship Cyclope, and will proceed to the latitude midway between the West coast of Ireland and Newfoundland. Here the ends of the cable, on board each ship will be joined, the Agamemnon will then return towards the coast of Ireland, and the Niagara will hold on her course to the shores of Newfoundland, both ships paying out the submarine cable as they increase the distance between them, and maintaining constant telegraphic communication with each other to prove that the cable remains intact; and within six days after the ships separate, should no accident occur, telegraphic communication will be open between the two continents.

The News from China.

UNALTERED POSITION OF AFFAIRS AT CANTON—CAPTURE OF PIRATE JUNKS—LOSS OF AN AMERICAN STEAMER—COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Hong Kong (March 30) Cor. of the London Times.

The steamer Madras, with the 10th of February mails from London, arrived here on the 28th instant. By the steamer Formosa on the 17th instant, from Bombay, we received the semi-monthly advices of the 16th of January. The Peninsular and Oriental Company despatch the steamer Erin to day for Galle and Bombay, and it is expected that she will reach the former place in time for the dispatches by her for England to go on by the Calcutta steamer of the 9th of April.

Since writing on th 15th we have little of importance to communicate.

Her Majesty's steamer Simpson came down the Canton River on the 25th inst. The position of our forces in the river remains as before, and we hear of no attempts having lately been made by the Chinese against our ships or the Teetotum Fort.

Admiral Sir MICHAEL SEYMOUR is at present here.

This place is quiet, and its security now amply provided for against any open attack from the Chinese, by the arrival lately of additional men-of-war steamers and troops.

Some of the servants are returning. The comprador here had to pay heavy "squeezes" to the Mandarins. One man had to pay $10,000, others from $1,000 to $5,000.

The Injavible, with the gun-boat Starling in company, arrived on the 25th of March.

The Zenobia steamer arrived on the 24th inst. She brought on from Sigapore eight officers and 415 rank and file of the 12th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, Brevet Major COOPER commanding.

The Barracouta is under orders for home.

The Capricieuse and steamers Catinat and Marceau are in the harbor. The Virginie is at Macao.

On the 19th inst., the Hornet, Capt. FORSYTH, while cruising off St. John's Island, fell in with a fleet of piratical junks. The steamer could not be brought within range of them, owing to there not being sufficient draught of water in the bay where they were. The boats of the steamer pulled in, and Captain FORSYTH, observing the position of the junks was a strong one, landed with a party of marines, and reached an eminence, whence, as well as from the boats, an effectual fire was kept up on the junks. After a good deal of firing the pirates took to the hills, and 17 of their boats were taken possession of, which were subsequently destroyed The only accident that occurred was one man of the Hornet severely hurnt by a stinkpot.

On board one of the junks were found one European and a Goa Portugues. They said they had been pressed by the pirates.

From Singapore we hear of accidents to two more vessels conveying Coolies from China—the Carmen, a Peruvian, and Henrietta Maria, Dutch.

The American steamer Min was lost on the 22d inst. off Tung-Yung, and island to the northward of Foochow, by running on a sunken rock. The mails and passengers were saved, hut the vessel and cargo were totally lost.

From Shanghae, our advices are to the 20th instant, but they do not contain anything of political interest.

At Hong Kong, the following are the quotations for some articles of import: Cotton, $9 50@$10 50; Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16 24, $26; Nos. 28 32, $34; Nos. 38. 42, $40@$42. Shirtings—Grays, 6¼ catties, $2 5@$2 10; whites, 64 reed, $2 40; and 54 reed, $2. Iron—Nailrod, $3 75@$4. Tin Plates, $9@$10. Rice, $3 40@$3 .

Exchange, on England, 4s. 11d.; on India, 224 rs. t 225 rs; advancing, and money very scarce.

Tonnage is getting scarce, and vessels are required for emigrants to Australia and California.

Pec chow dates are to the 23d inst. Nangchow Congous were sold at ts. 29 30, short price, and the teamen were expecting higher rates.

From Amoy our advices are to the 23d inst. There had been small sales of imdoria.

At Shanghai there had been little doing in imports. 6¼ catties gray long-cloths were quoted 1.6.5 Shanghai taels. In exports a large business had been done. Of silk 3,660 balea settled. The total quantity arrived was 80,000, of which 77,000 helea were settled. Quotations were: No. 3 Tsatlee, $440@$445; No. 4 Tsatlee, $431@$435; inferior, $405@425; Taysaam, good, $375@$385; Taysaam, middling to fair $340@$370; Taysaam, inferior to middling, $315@$335.

The settlements of tea had been 12 chops black nt 14½ to 22 taels, and 28,000 packages green.

Freights, £2 for tea, and £5 for silk.

Manilla dates are to the 20th inst. Exchange on England for six months' sight bills, 3s. 11d. Ciean Mexican dollars 28@30 ₱ cent. premium.

Our latest dates are: From England, 10th February; Calcutta, 27th; Bombay, 28th; Singapore, 21st March; Manilla, 20th March; Sidney, 10th February; Melbourne, 14th February: Shanghae, 20th March.

PRESENT ASPECT OF CANTON.

On the 16th a man came from Canton with the following news: The factories are entirely destroyed the bricks and tiles are carried away, and the trees of the garden are warping, and the church building in the garden is carried off—the soldiers and people dividing the spoils. The Teg-Sin and Casng Hoey city gate have been repaired, also the breach in the wall made by the cannonade; and the workmen are engaged in repairing the Governor's palace, or Yahmun. The Governor-General has by proclamation invited back to their usual employments those who left the city on account of the war. On the east of the city, outside, one man had been engaged to make a few thousand baskets, such as swine are carried in, with the design to fill them with stones and step up the river, should the red-bristled barbarians ever have the audacity to enter the inner waters again. At present the soldiers and militia have collected to fight and seize the rebels in the district of Cheng-yan and Soey-one, and having entered in mountain dangers, were enclosed and prevented from egress, and several thousand put to the sword by the rebels. The districts of Hoey-fung and Sok-fung are reported as being much disturbed by local banditti. Rice is dear, and famine prevails. Recently the poor from there have been coming to Hong-Kong to seek supplies.

THE EMPEROR OF ANAM DECLARES NEUTRALITY IN THE WAR.

The Monitour de la Flotte publishes a communication concerning the position which a great Asiatic State, the immediate neighbor to China, has taken up during the present contest, and which is certainly not of little interest. This State is the Empire of Anam, situated on the eastern shore of the Malay peninsula, and watered by the large river Cambodja, an Empire which now stretches from the frontier of China in the North to that of Siam in the West, and includes Tonquin, Cochin China proper, Cambodja and Laos. It possesses an army of 150,000 men, and a numerous fleet, the present residence of which is Hnch. It seems that the Court of Pekin has attempted to cement an alliance with the Emperor of Anam, who, however, refused to enter upon it, though in the proclamation, in which he announces to his people his resolution to remain neutral, he distinctly throws the blame of the rupture which has taken place on the European States. The proclamation is dated the 10th of February, and runs:

In the name of the mighty emperor, my master, the fourth of the dynasty of the Tschoung, and by his express order, I make to you the following communication, which you will obey, as always, under menace of the most terrible punishment.

You have heard, without doubt, that war has broken out between the people from the West and the sublime Emperor of China, our ally. Without entering into the causes of this war, which cannot be attributed by us to the first-named, it is the intention of our illustrious sovereign to remain neutral, without pronouncing himself in favor either of the one or the other. You, therefore, will have to conform your actions to this view of the case, and will take, under no circumstances, either the part of the English or of the Chinese.

The Emperor, our master, having no insults to avenge, has no reason for war. Should his country become the object of attacks, his numberless armies would rise at his voice, and annihilate enemies and nations enough to attack him.

Given at Hoe-Fou (Hneh) the 10th day of the 2d month.—KEHH-FO-SIN.

THE NEWS BY THE AMERICA.

HALIFAX, Tuesday, June 2,

The Royal Mail steamship America from Liverpool on Saturday, May 23, arrived here at 11 o'clock this morning. Her dates are three days later than those received by the Canadian at Quebec and the New York at New-York.

The America passed on the 23d ult., off Rock Light, the American ship Albion bound in.

The steamship Khersonese, from Portland via Halifax and St. Johns, N. F., arrived at Liverpool on the 22d ult., having broken the shaft of her screw on the 17th off Rathlin Island.

Great Britain.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer had produced a sensation in the House of Commons by proposing that the Princess Royal should have a marriage portion of £40,000 and an allowance of £8,000 a year. The reigns of GEORGE II. and GEORGE III. were adduced as precedents as to the prsotice in such cases.

Mr. ROEBUCK regarded such precedents as absurd and moved an amendment. The members of the House, however, were impatient to vote, and after Lord JOHN RUSSELL had spoken against the amendment, Mr. ROEBUCK declined going to a division and the motion was agreed to.

The question of "Cotton Supply" had been taken into consideration at Manchester. A deputation from Liverpool had waited on the Cotton Supply Association there, and it was understood that a national meeting on the subject was proposed to be held in Liverpool.

The Globe has been given to understand that Mr. THOMAS BABINGTON will he the new Lord of the Admirality.

France.

PARIS, Friday, May 22.

Baron GROSS, the Ambassador Extraordinary to China, and the attachés of his mission, left Paris this evening, for the port of embarkation.

Spain.

Advices from Madrid had been received in Paris announcing the settlement of the dispute between Spain and Mexico, on the 10th inst. After the ratification of the treaty, M. LAFRAGUA will remain as minister of Mexico.

Another dispatch says there is every probability of a pacific adjustment of the difficulties between Spain and Mexico.

M. LAFRAGUA, the Mexican Envoy, arrived at Madrid on Thursday.

The latest dispatches were said to be of a satisfactory kind, and there is little doubt that as a favorable disposition exists on both sides, and which is zealously encouraged by the English and French Ambassadors at Madrid, the affair will terminate amicably. In that case the greater part of the troops sent out to the Gulf will be kept at Cuba to strengthen the garrisons of the Island.

Disturbances originating in the dearness of food have taken place in various districts of Spain, and in consequence a Royal decree has been issued prolonging the time for the free importation of corn to the 31st of December next.

Prussia.

The Neufchatel Presse announces that M. de HATZFELDT, the Prussian Minister at Paris, has been authorized to sign the protocol of the Conference of Paris.

It was expected that the next Conference will be held on Monday forsigning the Convention.

Naples.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says it is reported in various quarters that the King of Bavaria, at present the guest of the Emperor NAPOLEON, is endeavoring to effect a reconciliation between the King of Naples and the Western Powers.

The King of Bavaria came direct from Naples to France.

Switzerland.

BERNE, Wednesday, May 20.

The Grand Council has voted the Constitution in principle, unanimously. Forty-four votes were given for the immediate revision, and twenty-five for its revision after a certain day.

Colonel GROBERT, ex-Commandant of the Foreign Legion, has committed suicide.

The Netherlands.

The Government of the Netherlands has signified its intention to send a ship of observation to join the Anglo-French squadrons in the Chinese waters.

Denmark.

The list of the new Danish Ministry has given great satisfaction, and it is thought in Germany that the question of the Duchies will very soon be settled.

Austria.

The crops in Hungary, Moravia and Bohemia are looking exceedingly well, hnt they are less promising in Upper Austria.

A letter from Vienna states that the Emperor will not confine his measures of clemency in favor of the Hungarians to the amnesty granted to political prisoners and refugees, hnt will also restore them their landed property confiscated after the Revolution, and administered since that period by a Special Commission. It is believed that the value of the landed property sequestered in Hungary amounted in 1850 to nearly forty millions of francs.

Russia.

On the occasion of his birth-day, the Emperor of Russia issued a further amnesty in favor of political and other offenders.

In the treaty concluded between Persia and Russia, the latter renounces all claims to the money which Persia owes, and in return receives two pieces of land—one on the Caspien Sea, and the other on the eastern part of Persia, and both of them, for strategetical reasons, are of the highest importance to Russia. The Emperor was highly satisfied with the General who made the Treaty. This cession of land and other intrigues connected with it may account for the British proceeding against Persia.

The Principalities.

TRIESTE, Thursday, May 21.

The American Minister at this port left Constantinople on the 15th for the Principalities. It is pretended that his visit has a political object.

Persia.

It is said that a conference will be held in Paris, composed of the representatives of the various Powers who have signed treaties of commerce with Persia, in order to agree to an arrangement which will apply to all the Consular Agents during the stay of the Persian Ambassador in Paris.

New Granada.

Dispatches have been received from the French Consul at Panama, giving full details of the situation of the country. It would appear from these accounts that New Granada is not capable of resisting the invasion prepared by the Americans, who are likely to establish themselves without difficulty at Panama and Chagres.

Sailing of the America for Boston.

HALIFAX, Tuesday, June 2.

The Royal Mail steamship America sailed from here at 12½ o'clock this afternoon for Boston, where she will be due about midnight to-morrow.

Latest by Telegraph from London to Liverpool.

LONDON, Friday Evening.

At the London Stock Exchange, Consols opened weak, advanced slightly, hut receded on a large sale of money, leaving off at 93⅜@93⅝ for account Railway property lower, more particularly French and Canadian descriptions, excepting the Grand Trunk. Banking and Mining descriptions show little variation, though the former was a trifle firmer than yesterday. Foreign Stocks fluctuated with Consols during the day, but closed as at the opening, and complaint was made of a general absence of business. Thirty thousand pounds of advertised bills were bought by the Government broker.

THE ELECTION RIOT AT WASHINGTON.

Full Details of the Occurrences of Monday—List of the Killed and Wounded.

Spacial Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 1, 1857.

I sent you this evening a dispatch embodying some principal facts of one of the most daring insurrectionary riots of bloodshed and murder that ever disgraced a city. It would naturally be supposed that at the National Capital of the Union, at least, order and the supremacy of the laws would be maintained. But this morning one of the most brutal and lawless scenes of violence and bloodshed occurred, equal to any that has disgraced our country either in Kansas or Utah.

During the previous week the greatest excitement prevailed as to what would be the result of the election for Collector, Register, Surveyor, and the Aldermen and Councilmen of this city. The Know-Nothings confidently asserted the success of their ticket, and offered to bet freely on their candidates, at the same time sustaining their bets with the most fearful denunciations and imprecations on the Democratic Party. On Saturday and Sunday the excitement was at its height, and became general through the city among all classes of citizens. The following card appeared this morning in the Intelligencer, which seemed to anticipate the coming storm, though it is worded in the mildest and most persuasive tone.

VOTE PEACEABLY.

It is to be hoped, Messrs. Editors, that the election to-day will be conducted by both parties in an amicable and honorable spirit; that all hullying by the members or hangers on of either party will be unanimously repudiated and suppressed; that no threats or intimidations will be allowed, and that every citizen having a right to vote will be allowed to do so peaceably and without risk of bodily harm. Let each strive to render this the model election for the future, a pleasant, social time, instead of replete with lawless violence. Neither party will lose any thing by such a course of action, but, on the contrary, must inevitably challenge the respect and confidence of the community. I would suggest that the police be out in full force to suppress particularly juvenile indiscretion and insubordination, as it frequently leads to the most serious results. PRO BONO PUBLICO.

WASHINGTON, June 1, 1857.

Determined to carry the Municipal election at all hazards, the Know-Nothings sent to Baltimore for a gang of some fifty organized ruffians and bullies, known by the name of "Plug-Uglies," to drive from the polls our naturalized citizens, in order that they might insure the success of their party.

The morning train, due here at 6 o'clock, brought this delegation of scoundrels, steeped in the deepest infamy of crime, and armed with five-shooters, hilties, slung-shots, and bowie-knives, to superintend our Municipal election. They proceeded to ALLEN'S Restaurant, corner of Seventh and E streets, where they were provided with a "sumptuous breakfast," at the expense and hospitality, it is said, of a Know-Nothing candidate for Councilman.

They then amused themselves by entering the different bar-rooms in the vicinity, calling for liquor, abusing the keepers, and brandishing their weapons, while many, with the greatest nonchalance, took out their pistols to reload and cap. The majority of these ruffians then proceeded to the First Precinct of the Fourth Ward, while a squad of some twenty visited the polls of the Second Ward. Here their interference soon produced a general melee, in which some fifteen shots were fired, one of which struck a young man named JOHN OUZELY, severely fracturing his knee. The citizens immediately turned out armed with muskets and drove the "Plug-Uglies" from the field.

In the meantime the main body of those desperadoes had effected a general row and disturbance at the first precinct of the Fourth Ward, by attempting to break the sturdy line of anti-Know-Nothing voters at the polls; but not succeeding after a general knock down skirmish, they retired for reinforcements. In a short time they returned to the scene of conflict, supported by the squad which had been driven from the Second Ward, and a body of "Rip-Raps" and "Chunkers" of this city. The parties thus arrayed against each other consisted of over 300 men and boys. Taunts and yells rent the air, which was soon followed by a most fearful and terrible scene. Pistols, stones and bricks were rapidly discharged, and where the Pleg-Uglies closed in, men were crushed and felled to the ground. Broken heads were as numerous as at a Donnybrook fair. Mr. R. B. OWENS, one of the Commissioners of the Election, had his hand shattered by a pistol ball, and a number were slightly wounded. An Irishman was so frightfully mutilated about the head, that his features could not be distinguished. Mr. BAGGOTT, Chief of Police, and Capt. GOUDARD, with a strong force, after having made several arrests, were rushed upon with such force that they were driven from the field.

Mayor MAGRUDER, having been informed of the riot, immediately addressed the following note to the President, calling for military aid, which was promptly responded to by order of the Secretary of the Navy, calling for two companies of marines:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, June 1, 1857.

To the President of the United States:

SIR: Upon the representation of credible citizens that a band of lawless persons, most of them not residents of this city, have attacked one of the polls, at which the annual election is now in progress, and, after wounding some twenty good and peaceable citizens, have driven the remainder from the polls, and dispersed the Commissioners of Election, and threatened further violence on any attempt to carry on the election, I respectfully request you to order out the company of United States Marines now in this city, to maintain the peace thereof—the civil authorities finding themselves unable to do so with the means at their disposal, and there being no other United States soldiers in this city at your disposal

I have instituted a personal inquiry into this matter, and find that the weapons used were various kinds of fire-arms, clubs, knives and stones, and that the facts as stated in the inclosed certificates are just and true. W. B. MAGRUDER, Mayor.

The "Plug Uglies" then raised the cry of, "to the Seventh Ward," and proceeded to the engine house of the Annacosta Company, near the Navy-Yard, where they procured a small brass cannon, or swivel, and marched down Capitol Hill to Pennsylvania-avenue in procession, dragging with them the cannon. They were soon come up with by the two companies of U. S. Marines, under the command of Capt. TYLER, when the "Plug Uglies" set up a howl and yell of defiance. The orders of Capt. TYLER were to report to the Mayor for orders, and consequently he did not deem it his duty to seize the men or cannon. This lawless band of villains was permitted by American citizens, in defiance of law and order, thus to parade our streets, and marched triumphantly up Seventh-street to the Market on K. street, fronting Seventh, where they drew up in battle array. In the meantime the two companies of U. S. Marines arrived on the ground, and about 1 P. M. took position to the left flank, fronting on Seventh-street. Mayor MAGRUDER, aided by the Marshal of the District, then addressed the crowd, and commanded the peace.

In the meantime, the excitement was brewing to its height, and a deputation of two men were sent on the part of the Know-Nothings to Captain TYLER, to say that if he did not withdraw his Marines there would be a difficulty. Capt. TYLER peremptorily refused, and ordered the deputation to disperse the crowd. A demonstration being made by the "Plug-Uglies" with the cannon, orders were given to charge and take the piece, which was done amid a volley of pistol balls from the "Plug-Uglies," when the Marines at the same time received the order to fire. The "Plug Uglies" abandoning the cannon, sought refuge in the market house, where one man was bayonetted, and in taking the cannon two Marines were wounded.

The marines fired in two directions, one company discharged their pieces at those in command of the gun, and the other at the crowd at the northwest corner of Seventh and K streets. There were some thirty shots of buck and ball in the corner house, and the dry goods store adjoining. The tin gutter on the corner was perfectly riddled. The shots went as high as the second story, and as the windows were crowded with persons, it is a wonder not more were killed. As it was, only some six or seven were killed and some seventeen wounded. Among the killed are ALSTON, a grocer, shot through the head; Col. DERNS, of the Land Office; an old man near the corner store; a young lad of 14, shot dead; another man, name unknown, shot in the abdomen, and a negro. Mr. P. F. BELL, was wounded in the knee very severely; Col. WILLIAMS, of the Land Office, shot in the arm; Major MACGUIRE, formerly California Mail Agent, through the bridge of the nose; Col. Jo. SHILLINGTON, the bookseller, slightly, and a number of others.

All the stores on Seventh-street, for some five blocks, were closed, and after the crowd dispersed, the Marines marched down to the City Hall with their captured piece, order being thus restored, but the highest excitement prevailing.

Some thirty of the "Plug-Uglies" left on the 2 P. M. train after the riot, and have thus escaped. The remainder of the "Plug Uglies," it is said, left in the 4½ P. M. train for Bladensburg. They said they had no fear of militia, and could easily whip the police, but when it came to fighting United States troops, they warn't thar.

A rumor that the Chief of the "Plug-Uglies" had been telegraphed to bring on a reinforcement, caused the Adjutant General, COOPER, to send a dispatch ordering the Flying Artillery at Fort McHenry to come on immediately.

The United States Marines marched down to the dépôt to receive any reinforcements of the Plug-Uglies that should arrive; but it seems that the device, to the number of about fifty, who were ready to embark with the train, did not get off, as the chief, who was to pay their expenses, was missing at the time. The Flying Artillery arrived soon after in a special train, and marched up to the City Hall, where the Marines remain under arms for the night.

Twelve, Midnight.—All quiet.

It is supposed the Anti-Know Nothings have carried the general ticket, and a majority of the wards. The returns from the 2d and 5th wards show a decided Democratic gain, notwithstanding that owing to the riot the polls were closed at an early hour.

Mayor MAGRUDER showed the greatest courage and self-possession during the scenes of the riot, and great credit is due to his prompt energy, for had not the action been taken by the Marines at his instigation, our City might still be the scene of the most fearful riots and murder. UNO.

The Union of Tuesday morning contains the following list of killed and wounded:

KILLED.

F. M. Deems, clerk in the Land Office.
Mr. Alison, constable.
Archibald Dalrymple, of Baltimore, brakeman on the Washington Branch Railroad.
George McElfresh.
Redding, colored, of Georgetown.
Ramy Neal, colored, formerly waiter of Walker & Schadd.

WOUNDED.

Somers, saddler, probably mortally.
Samuel Cassidy, shot in the head.
Col. Wm. F. Wilson, shot through shoulder.
James Wright, of Anne Arundel County, Md., shot in the thigh.
Charles Spencer, shot in the leg and breast.
Biddeman, tinner, shot in the arm.
James Stelford, plasterer, shot in the leg and through the body.
Richard Owen, shot in the arm.
John Owen, stone cutter, shot in the hand.
A marine severely wounded.
Thomas Wills, Anne Arundel County, shot in the back.
P. F. Bell, Seventh Ward, shot in the knee.
One of the Baltimore rowdies shot in the leg.
John Fouche, severely.
Samuel Fenton, in arm.
Mr. Lawrenson, (Mercury,) shot through his hat, grazing his head.

It is rumored that several were killed and many wounded, not mentioned in the above list—among whom are one or two women and a small boy.

All that were killed or wounded, with one or two exceptions among the wounded, were peaceable citizens, passing by or looking quietly on.

The Union also has the following editorial remarks:

"In the local column will be found the result of the municipal election held in this city yesterday, together with a brief and, we believe, an impartial account of the bloody and disgraceful transactions which marked its progress in the early part of the day. Our city authorities were fully prepared to cope with and effectually put down any violations of the peace on the part of such of our own citizens who have done so much to injure the good name and damage the best interests of Washington since the advent of Know-Nothingism in our midst; but they were not prepared for the importation of gangs of armed bullies and desperadoes from a neighboring city, and hence the frightfully fatal scenes of yesterday.

It must be apparent to the whole of this outraged community that these Baltimore ruffians did not visit their sympathizing brethren of Washington from their own bloody promptings, but that they were expressly picked out, hired and brought to this city for the purpose, to use their own language, of 'regulating the election'—or, in other words, to shoot, cut down or stab all who attempted to vote the Anti-Know Nothing ticket. We have too much reason to fear that these wretches were directly or indirectly employed by persons in this city who have hitherto enjoyed a high social position. If, on investigation, this fear should prove to be well grounded, there can be no hesitation as to where the real responsibility of yesterday's bloody work belongs."

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 2.

The city is quiet, though there is much bad feeling. The Light Artillery are still here. There are no signs of a renewal of the disturbances.

A large meeting was held here to-night in front of the City Hall. The speakers were Gen. MCCALLA, Dr. CLAYTON and Councilman LLOYD, all of the American party, who spoke of the killing of citizens by the marines on the day of election, as a cruel, cowardly and bloody massacre of the innocent, and of the conduct of the Executive Authorities, as trampling under foot the sacred rights of the citizens, and Law and Order. Councilman LLOYDS advice, to be prepared for the next attack, elicited spontaneous cheers of approbation.

He invoked them, however, to aid in the preservation of the peace. A Committee of two from each Ward was appointed to prepare suitable resolutions, and call another meeting after the inquests on all the victims were concluded. Inquests have been held in two of the cases.

Three witnesses swore that the order was given the Marines to fire by Mayor MAGRUDER after the swivel had been taken from the Rioters. Preliminary measures have been taken to bring the matter to a judicial investigation.

The Mayor's conduct was severely condemned by the meeting, which separated with cheers and groans. The community is still feverish on the subject of the riots.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Official Dispatches of Capt. Davis, of the St. Mary's, Relating to Walker—Foreign Appointments Made—The Utah Governorship, &c.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 2.

Capt. DAVIS, of the St. Mary's, in recent official dispatches to the Government, says it was the opinion of those who had better means of knowing than himself that a month before they were written WALKER could have, at any moment, passed the enemy's lines and maintained himself in the open country. Since that time the desertions have been so numerous and frequent, and their effect so demoralizing, that toward the end of April the only resort left WALKER was to cut his way down to the coast and take refuge, if possible, on board the schooner Granada. According to the best intelligence such an attempt would only have been the last effort of despair, and would have terminated fatally in less than five miles from Rivas. The time, therefore, had arrived for determining on the course to be pursued in the case, anticipated in the instructions of January last, that was, in the event of the expulsion of WALKER and his forces from Nicaragua by the allied armies, and his departure to the adjacent territory in Central America, for the purpose of hostile and aggressive operations. The reason assigned by Captain DAVIS for the seizure of the schooner Granada, is that the vessel had lost her nationality, and was belligerent, and should not therefore pass his guns.

The President has appointed JOSEPH A. WEIGHT, of Indiana, Minister to Berlin, in place of Mr. VROOM, recalled at his own request; HENRY C. MURPHY, of New-York, minister to the Netherlands, vice BELMONT, recalled at his own request; WILLIAM A. RICHARDSON, of Illinois, Governor of Nebraska, vice IZARD; ISAAC E. DILLER, of Illinois, Consul at Bremen, vice HILDEBRAND; WM. THOMPSON, of New-York, Consul to Southampton, England, vice CROSKEY; GABRIEL G. FLEUAOT, of New York, Consul to Bordeaux, to fill an existing vacancy.

Major MCCULLOCH has again emphatically declined the Governorship of Utah. A selection will, however, positively be made in a few days, when the vacant Judgeships in that Territory will be filled, and other measures adopted with a view to the effective organization of the Administrative machinery.

Meeting of the American National Council at Louisville.

PRELIMINARY BUSINESS—SPEECH OF HON. ERASTUS BROOKS, ETC.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Tuesday, June 2.

A large number of the Delegates to the American National Convention, to be held in this city, arrived here to-day.

The meeting promises to be a large one, and will be composed of prominent men from most of the States of the Union.

The Delegates held an informal meeting, this morning, at the Galt House. J. SCOTT HARRISON was in the Chair.

Hon. ERASTUS BROOKS, of New-York; Hon. ANTHONY KENNEDY, of Maryland; Hon. JNO. J. CRITTENDEN, of Kentucky; Hon. J. SCOTT HARRISON, of Ohio; Hon. R. W. THOMPSON, of Indiana; and Hon. AUSTIN BALDWIN, of Connecticut, were requested and consented to address the National Council and citizens on the prospects of the American Party in their several States at a meeting this afternoon.

The meeting then adjourned, to assemble in Council at Mozart Hall, at 11 o'clock.

E. B. BARTLETT, President of the Council, called the Council to order at 11 o'clock.

In the absence of Secretary BLINTON, Mr. DUNCAN, of Kentucky, was appointed Recording Secretary pro tem.

The following Committee on Credentials were appointed; T. C. Ware, Ohio; W. W. Danehower, Illinois; F. Schley, Maryland; G. M. Hillyer, Missouri; A. Baldwin, Connecticut; A. M. C. Smith, New-York; W. F. Switzer, Missouri.

Adjourned to 3 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The President called the Council to order at 3 o'clock P. M.

The Committee on Credentials report the list of Delegates as far as completed.

Hon. ERASTUS BROOKS, of New-York, addressed the Convention, according to the arrangement of the Committee. He excused himself from making any extended remarks, on the ground that a recent affliction in his family had depressed his spirits and rendered him incapable of any very great exertion. He was glad to meet the Americans in National Convention at this time, and he believed that this reunion, after the recent defeat, was calculated to do much good.

He paid a high compliment to Kentucky, and expressed his respect and affection for New-York, a State which was so true to the Union. He declared that it was the intention of the Americans of New-York to adhere firmly to the party until their principles were recognized by the people and were successful in the Union. Other parties were now compelled, in place of abuse of Americanism, to pay tribute to the reforms first demanded by this organization. He declared that the American Party was the only true safeguard of the Union; that the other organizations were based upon fanaticism upon one side or the other, and that the State of New-York from her conservative position, above all other States, is bound eventually to give adhesion to the principles, which stood opposed alike to the ultraisms of the North and South. The duty of a good soldier was to remain true to the colors of his country in victory or defeat, and New-York would win her title of faithful defender of Americanism in triumph or reverses. He called upon Americans never to despair, but to remember that history pointed out many instances of good and glorious causes which had suffered reverses and defeat through long series of years but which triumphed at last.

If the American Party was not a majority party at present, at least it holds the balance of power and can compel the other parties to respect their demands. We can drive them to Americanize the Government and the people of the Government. Mr. BROOKS concluded with a review of the mission of the American Party. New-York had given Mr. FILLMORE one hundred and twenty thousand votes, and the Americans were stronger to-day than in November last by tens of thousands. The Republicans regretting the error into which they had been led under the excitement of the Presidential Canvass, were now ready to return to their allegiance—to American principles.

Hon. ANTHONY KENNEDY, of Maryland, also addressed the Council, and was followed by R. W. THOMPSON, of Indiana, when, after the appointment of a Committee of thirteen to report resolutions and an address, and some other business, the Council adjourned to 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Fugitive Slave Trouble in Ohio—The Prisoners Conveyed to Cincinnati for Trial.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, June 2.

The writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge LEAVITT was obeyed, and the prisoners have been brought to this city for trial. The examination commenced yesterday, but the case was adjourned until a week from to day, in order to allow time for the production of affidavits by either party. It is probable that the prisoners will be discharged by Judge LEAVITT, but this will not prevent their indictment by the Grand Jury of Clark County, and their arrest again for trial.

The New-Hampshire Legislature.

CONCORD, N. H., Tuesday, May 2.

The New-Hampshire Legislature assembles to-morrow.

The Republican caucus to-night will probably nominate DANIEL CLARK of Manchester for United States Senator, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. BELL; and EDWARD H. ROLLINS of Concord for Speaker of the House.

Charter Election in Canandaigua.

CANANDAIGUA, Tuesday, June 2.

At the charter election this day, the whole American ticket was elected by 100 majority over both the Democratic and Republicans. With three tickets in the field four hundred votes were polled.

From New-Orleans.

GEN. WALKER—THE STEAMSHIP LOUISIANA BURNT—GREAT LOSS OF LIFE, ETC.

NEW ORLEANS, Monday, June 1.

Gen. WILLIAM WALKER left this city for Washington, this evening, by way of the river.

Our municipal election has been going on to-day, and no opposition was offered to the American ticket.

The steamship Louisiana was burnt in Galveston Bay on Sunday morning. Eleven persons were certainly lost in her, and Col BAINBRIDGE, of the army, and thirty-one others are missing. Twenty-five persons were saved by the steamer Galveston.

Later From Salt Lake.

BRIGHAM YOUNG DRIVING THE GENTILES AWAY.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, June 2.

The Leavenworth Herald learns from Mr. WILLIAMS, who left Salt Lake on April 15, that there was great excitement at that place. BRIGHAM YOUNG was carrying things with a high hand and driving the Gentiles away. Judge STILES, the United States Marshal, and the Surveyor General with his family and a large number of emigrants, had been obliged to leave the Territory.

Fire in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, June 2—1 A. M.

A destructive fire is now raging here in the centre business portion of the city. On Sixth and Chestnut streets the Melodeon (a place of amusement) and the Arcade Buildings are on fire, and the fire is communicating to the valuable surrounding property.

Railroad Accidents.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, June 2.

The freight train which left here early this morning for New-York was plunged into Rancocas Creek by the draw-bridge, at that place, being left open. The train was going slow at the time, and the engineers and others on the train jumped off in time to save themselves. The passenger-train from New-York was delayed nearly two hours in consequence of the accident, and had to return to Burlington and take the other track. The leaving of the draw bridge open is supposed to have been by design.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, June 2.

Dr. C. D. LEWIS, Professor in the Eclectic Medical Institute of Cincinnati, had his skull fractured yesterday afternoon on the road from Wheeling, by imprudently thrusting his head from a window of the car while passing through the Board Tree Tunnel, forty miles west of this place. He is still living, but his recovery is hopeless.

The Great Western Railway Celebration.

GRAFTON, Ohio, Tuesday, June 2.

The excursionists over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad arrived here at 9 o'clock last night, after a day of the utmost enjoyment, winding up with a bounteous supper and a comfortable night's rest. They started again this morning, after a hearty breakfast, over the Parkersburg and Ohio Road.

CINCINNATI

The True Position of Mr. Vanderbilt in regard to Costa Rica and the Transit.

SIR: I was much gratified with the quiet and considerate tone of your editorial of Friday, in regard to the important and apparently somewhat complicated affairs of the Nicaragnan Transit Line. I learn, for the first time, through your columns, that my old friend Mr. C. K. GARRISON, of California, has been conversing with the parties who, it is said, hold a grant from the Government of Costa Rica, to ascertain whether the losses of Mr. MORGAN and himself in the steamship business connected with Nicaragua (which, I trust, are not quite so heavy as your somewhat excitable correspondent, "Citizen," suggests) may not be covered by purchasing the line anew from Costa Rica. I have a high appreciation of Mr. GARRISON'S talent as a financier, and always regretted his error in connecting himself with WALKER'S blundering operations in Central America; but I wish to assure him and you that in regard to this business he is in danger of committing a second fault, equal in magnitude to the former: In buying the Transit Line from Costa Rica, he merely throws good money after bad. The reasons of this will appear in the sequel.

Mr. GARRISON will remember that the boats and privileges of the Accessory Transit Company, (ceded to EDMUND RANDOLPH by the first Walker Government, commonly called the Walker-Rivas Government,) were offered by that grantee to Mr. VANDERBILT for sale—that is to say, Mr. EDMUND RANDOLPH wished to assign the property of the Accessory Transit Company for $50,000 and certain other considerations, to Mr. VANDERBILT, a proposition which that gentleman declined.

Mr. RANDOLPH made his propositions to Mr. VANDERBILT in writing; I have them before me.

Mr. VANDERBILT was at that time the representative of the interests of the Accessory Transit Company. The property which was taken away from him and his friends by WILLIAM WALKER was offered back to him for sale by the same WILLIAM WALKER, through the agent RANDOLPH, who, to give some decency of appearance to the operation, was made a grantee.

My witty, accomplished and much-lamented friend, CALEB B. SMITH, of Va., son of the famous Extra Billy, and who went to Nicaragua and died there of the yellow fever, on one occasion—pardon Sir, the involution of my sentences, my business is to reckon and not to write—on one occasion told me a curious anecdote of this RANDOLPH. "RANDOLPH, said he, is a high-minded and very proud man, with Indian blood in his veins; he is a kind of a magnificent savage in his way, but does not understand business." * * * * "I am glad," said CALEB, his noble and beautiful features lighting up with a smile of boyish generosity, "to know that RANDOLPH is likely to have some money. WALKER would do something for RANDOLPH because RANDOLPH defended him when he was tried for breach of the Neutrality laws on his return from that wretched Sonora expedition. He will sell the line for fifty thousand dollars to VANDERBILT, in all probability, or at least, to some party connected with him, and the Accessory business will be patched up. RANDOLPH has been all his life a poor, briefless lawyer, and now he will be comfortable. * * * * If he has any sagacity at all, he will sell the line to VANDERBILT, or at least make some adjustment with the Accessory Company." Poor SMITH, with all his fine intelligence, could not think of everything at once. The line was offered to VANDERBILT by RANDOLPH, with a reservation, as Mr. GARRISON will remember, that his (G.'s) interests, whatever they might be, should not be disregarded. Your correspondent, "Citizen," is in error in stating that Mr. GARRISON "fraudulently" defended the Transit Line after he got it, with the expenditure of a million of dollars. With all deference to "Citizen," there is no fraud in defending what we have, though there may be in the getting of it. The frauds, if any were committed, lie at the doors of the managing people in Nicaragua, who seized and sold a perpetual charter, though I do think it was an astonishing piece of confidence on the part of RANDOLPH, and by no means complimentary to Mr. VANDERBILT, to offer the line to him. Of course he only amused himself by listening to any such propositions. Steamship men are not generally scrupulous, but I don't think Mr. V. would buy stolen goods, especially if they belonged partly to himself.

But to proceed. A gentleman named ANDERSON, from Costa Rica, an old man with gray hairs, has several times visited Mr. VANDERBILT, and the Transit Company has been a frequent subject of conversation between them. No other person has held any intercourse with Mr. VANDERBILT, with the object of selling the Transit Line. Mr. ANDERSON gave Mr. VANDERBILT every assurance that he did not hold him individually implicated in the fillibuster operations against Costa Rica, and that if he had any desire to reopen the line, provided he would lend Costa Rica a million of dollars, and otherwise give the requisite security against all future fillibuster operations, a good and substantial arrangement could be made. Mr. V. declined touching the matter in any shape. He stated that his reasons for not engaging in the Nicaraguan business were absolute: First, as he represented the Accessory Transit Company, which he thought had been wickedly robbed by the WALKER usurpation. That he would have nothing to do with the so-called "Webster grant," reported by your correspondent, "Citizen," to be in the hands of Mr. GRINNELL, (a gentleman whom we all respect,) for reasons he did not choose to discuss. But Mr. VANDERBILT stated also, if anybody else chose to invest money in that, or any other grant, he had no objection, provided it did not interfere with the claims of the Accessory Transit Company against Nicaragua, who, under compulsion, but not the less liable, had violated the right of that Company. If Costa Rica could make all right and procure a satisfactory settlement, all would be well. Meanwhile, as soon as other parties shall have reopened the line across Nicaragua, he, Mr. VANDERBILT, has a large number of magnificent ocean steamers which are always ready and in good order to serve the interests of California and the United States, by carrying passengers and freight at the lowest possible rates between San Francisco and New-York.

You were obliging enough to correct an error which crept into your paper, in regard to the debt and capital of the Panama Railroad Company. I am an attentive reader of all that appears in your paper relating to that class of operations, as I have some slight interest therein, and find your columns almost uniformly accurate in regard to matters of finance and business. Will you do me the favor also to correct another slight error? You have stated in your editorial that Mr. VANDERBILT, who I suppose is intended in the playful appellation of the "Bowling-green Commodore," "has succeeded with his usual adroitness," in creating a breach between the parties representing the sale of the Transit for Costa Rica. That such a breach exists even, if it does, is really a matter of not the slightest consequence to Mr. VANDERBILT, and I can positively assure you that he neither knows nor cares anything about the squabbles of a pair of grantees, if such they be! Mr. VANDERBILT holds a receipt for the property of the Accessory Transit Company, which came through the hands of SPENCER, from the Costa Rican Government, and it will be impossible to negotiate any grant with that Government, except by parties who thoroughly understand the matter. This same SPENCER left two steamers ago, with a view, I believe, to convey certain important testimony to the Government of Costa Rica. He [illegible] in New-Granada that he has a private claim upon that Government, amounting to a very large sum, for having taken the boats. I can also assure you that Mr. VANDERBILT did not personally interfere in the war, nor give any money toward it: he never gave any letters of credit, nor any pecuniary liberties to agents in Costa Rica, to assist that State. His sole endeavor has been to protect the rights of the Accessory Transit Company, and this he has, no doubt, accomplished in the most effectual manner which the case admitted.

I can also assure you, Sir, and refer you to Mr. VANDERBILT for the correctness of my statement, that Mr. ANDERSON, reputed one of the representatives of the Webster grant, but I think erroneously—as in a copy submitted to the inspection of a legal friend of Mr. VANDERBILT'S, and who pronounced the grant impracticable in its present shape—as making no provision for the liabilities of Nicaragua—Mr. ANDERSON'S name was not mentioned; that this Mr. ANDERSON did not go to Costa Rica with SPENCER, and if he has since gone it has not been with the knowledge of Mr. VANDERBILT, nor as the agent of that gentleman in any possible shape or construction, either at first or second hand, or as intermediary grantee.

I have already trespassed too far upon your valuable space, but will you allow me to add a few words in regard to the cautions necessary to be observed by persons negotiating or purchasing Transit Charters in Nicaragua or in any part of Mexico or Central America? A grant, to be good, ought not to have a history, nor be encumbered with obligations.

A transit line across the continent requires good harbors on both sides. It was the want of such a harbor on the Pacific side that in 1853 deterred intelligent capitalists from taking up the Tehuantepec line. I do not hear that any harbor or landing place has been made there by any convulsion of nature since that time. It must be possible hereforth to carry freight, that is to say, goods loaded on one side must go across without lifting, hauling or transferring, to the other side. Freight is carried profitably across the Panama Railroad, but it will never be conveyed by the way of Nicaragua in any paying quantity. Now, in Nicaragua, you have first the transfer from the ocean steamer to the river steamer. Then from the river steamer to the short railroad at Castillo; then from the railroad to another river steamer; then from the second river steamer to the lake steamer; from the lake steamer to the land carriage at Virgin Bay; from thence overland, another lift on board the ocean steamer at San Juan del Sur. In consequence of this vast amount of lifting and hauling, ten or fifteen cents a pound, even, has been charged for carrying freight by the way of Nicaragua; The actual cost is from five to six cents a pound! This will satisfy you that the Nicaraguan line will have to depend on passenger travel, and cannot compete with Panama in freight business. Now, as for passenger travel, it is only about one-third of what it was in the palmy days of California; and will not support a line.

Again, transit charters require so large an expenditure, it is necessary to negotiate them in the cheapest possible manner. Mr. RANDOLPH did not probably understand the matter, but really, Sir, the demand of that gentleman for the enormous sum of $50,000, the entire cost of two complete steamship voyages, for taking the trouble to come to New-York, and write a few lines to Mr. VANDERBILT, was preposterous.

"Citizen" may rest assured that the present Administration will protect American interests in Central America, but there is no reason to believe that it will employ violence against Costa Rica to wrest from her the steamers of the Accessory Transit Company, to make a present of them to Messrs. MORGAN and GARRISON. Costa Rica is entitled to her salvage for taking and keeping these steamers, but when they were used against her, they were not in the possession of their real owners.

The Mormon Invasion.

ARRIVAL OF 552 SCANDINAVIAN MORMONS AT PHILADELPHIA, EN ROUTE TO UTAH—HOW A PHILADELPHIA REPORTER TRIED TO EXPLORE AND COULDN'T

From the Philadelphia Ledger, June 2.

On Sunday afternoon, the packet ship Westmoreland arrived at this port, laden with an extraordinary freight of five hundred and fifty-two Saints, "all bound for the land of" Utah. A large portion of this arrival is made up of females bearing the most healthy aspect. Not a small number are children of both sexes, and the men generally are of a sturdy build, apparently able to do a day's work anywhere; although, it judged by their conduct in the passengers' galley, (cooking house,) they could not be recommended as willing to obey their wives in the matter of domestic duty on board ship. Among this vast hive of Norwegian Mormons, who profess to be journeying to the land of which they believe it has been said "the Lord would give it them," are to be found a high priest or president, and ten prophets.

The name of the President is COWLEY. With reference to the minor prophets our reporter was able only to secure the names of four: LINGUIST, LUNT, CHRISTISON and THURSTON. These dignitaries are possessed of all power over the "Saints," of which fact the Captain and the mate of the Westmoreland are gratuitous witnesses; for, when either of these officers required anything done on the part of the passengers, they passed the commands to the Prophets, and immediate compliance was the result. At an early hour in the evening, by command of the High Priest, COWLEY, all Saints were ordered below, to collect and prepare for their places of retirement for the night. After 9 o'clock P. M., no woman was allowed to come on deck under the slightest pretext. During the day, and throughout the night, sentries were placed at the fore and main hatchways, to prevent others than the passengers (the Saints) going below, unless accompanied by an Elder. This system was, also, applied to the second-cabin entrance, under the break of the poop. This sentry system prevented our reporter perambulating the 'twsen decks yesterday, when exploring the floating regions of Mormondom, as found on the Delaware. The prophets, some of whom are English and American, looked upon any attempt to gain information as an invasion, and treated interested persons rather contemptibly. One of the first duties performed on board the ship, before leaving Liverpool, was that of organization, which was done with such perfection as to preclude the necessity of action on the part of the Captain during the subsequent passage. The ship was kept perfectly clean, and, as the result, the passengers all look well and hearty, and bear the aspect of cleanness.

The officers of the ship could not undertake to tell how the passengers (Saints) behaved themselves 'tween decks, although the stringent sentries excited their suspicions.

Only three deaths have occurred during the entire passage; two children were buried at sea, and a man, 90 years of age, was buried on shore yesterday, having died just as the ship came to pilot ground. One male child was born, and named partly after the ship and partly after the Captain: WESTMORELAND DEACON; this, our reporter informs us, was the cause of a general holiday throughout the length and breadth of the ship, with the exception of the forecastle, the inmates of which stood at a reluctant distance from the associative tendencies of the Saints.

Two women, foreseeing the joys of emigration and Mormonism, took a voluntary departure from their saintly husbands just as the party was about to leave Denmark. It is stated that the glorious company of Saints have heard nor seen nothing of the two absconsdants since their departure.

Another fair damsel, who had tried the emigration part of the business, but was unwilling to proceed to the Territory of Utah to be anybody's body, made her declaration of independence yesterday morning and left the ship, determined to make herself useful in some other way, and to wait the appointed hour which shall set her free from earth's pains and penalties, and open the saintly realities of a happier Canaan than Utah to her aspiring eyes.

The Saints leave for the West to day, per the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad.

MORE MURDERS.—In Woonsocket, R. I., on Sunday evening, a man named RILEY, murdered his wife by breaking her skull with a flat iron. He attempted the same deed last Fall, and also cut his own throat last Summer. Ugly dispositions, and contentions about money which the woman kept, were the probable cause. The murderer was arrested.... In the village of Union, Broome County, on Thursday last, an insane man named CHARLES LAFOURETTE, entered a store in that village, took from it a dagger, and stepping out upon the sidewalk, deliberately, and without the exchange of a word, stabbed a young colored man, named JARED BARTON. He died instantly. The assassin has been insane for two years. Why was he allowed to be at large? He said he killed BARTON because he did "not like his looks." He was taken to Binghamton and lodged in jail. In the evening, Mr. DICKER, the Under-Sheriff, entered the cells, and, on passing the one where LAFOURETTE was confined, saw him lying on the floor with his throat cut. The razor with which the prisoner destroyed himself was in the coat pocket of a former occupant of the cell, and which he had accidentally left in the room

AN INTERESTING OCCASION.

Celebration of the Two Hundred and Nineteenth Anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, at Boston.

LETTER FROM LORD CLARENDON AND MR. DALLAS—SPEECHES OF HON. MARSHALL P. WILDER, HON. JOSIAH QUINCY, JR., AND OTHERS.

From the Traveller of Tuesday.

The 219th anniversary of this ancient and honorable military organization, once the pride and stay of the fathers of New-England, as it is now the cherished favorite of those who honor their memory, was celebrated in Boston on Monday, with unusual epirit. According to custom, after assembling at Faneuil Hall the corps proceeded to the State House, where the Governor and invited guests were in attendance. When the usual preliminaries were at an end, the order of Col. WILDER, "column, forward, guide left," echoed through the ranks, the roll of the drum quickly responded, and the column turned down Park-street, and marched to the Chauncy-place Church, passing through Park, Tremont, West, Bedford, and Chauncy streets on its way.

The exercises at the Church in Chauncy-street consisted of a voluntary on the organ; the reading of selections from the Scriptures; an anthem; prayer; the singing of a hymn, written for the occasion by MATURIN M. BALLOU, to music adapted from WEBBE by DAVID PAINE; the sermon by Rev. JAMES H. MEANS, of Dorchester; an anthem; and the benediction.

On arriving at Faneuil Hall, everything was found prepared and but little time was spent in preliminary arrangements before the guests entered the main hall and took their seats at the tables, to the number of between three and four hundred. After the repast was concluded, Col. MARSHALL P. WILDER rose and made the following address:

Gentlemen of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company:

I rise at this early moment to announce that the orders of the day demand promptness and dispatch. I would not, however, interrupt your festive entertainment, or cut short the rations of any of this company. I beg you, therefore, to continue the battle in which you are now so valiantly engaged, without the least solicitude for me; for I am an old soldier, and not easily alarmed by the report of muskstry, or by the clashing of steel. Thus, by an advance march, we shall gain time for the roar of the heavier artillery of his Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, and other distinguished heroes who have honored us with their presence.

Two hundred and nineteen years ago, ROBERT KEAYNE received from JOHN WINTHROP, then Governor of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, the Charter of this Company. During that period, the representatives of seven entire generations have been enrolled in this corps, performed their chare of active service, and been summoned from our ranks to their final review. In that period, how many institutions and kingdoms have risen, flourished, and gone to decay! But this Company "still lives," and we meet to-day to rejoice in its prosperity, and to transmit to those who shall come after us its standard and renown.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston was the first regularly organized company in America, the germ of the military system of New-England, if not of the United States; and to its example in former years are to be ascribed the efficiency and superiority of our militia. For nearly a century and a half this company furnished almost the only military school in the country. From it were derived many of the officers who led our forces to victory in the various colonial and national wars, and who made our arms respected and renowned throughout the civilized world. Many of the early members of this company were able defenders of civil liberty and pillars in the church of Christ, uniting with a piety pure and sublime a high degree of military skill and valor. This union, it is one object of our Anniversary to preserve, associating as it does religious rites with our military parade, maintaining the honor of our company and transmitting to posterity the true sentiments of its venerable founders. The influence for good of more than two hundred sermons preached on its Anniversaries, discussing the various relations of revealed religion to the art of war as a means of national defence, it is impossible to calculate.

This Company, as you well know, is the American descendant of an English parent, the Royal Artillery Company of London, now under the command of His Royal Highness Prince ALBERT, its Field Marshal and Captain-General. That Company was organized as far back as 1537, in the 28th year of the reign of HENRY VIII. In the time of Queen ELIZABETH, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and all the commanding and commissioned officers of the realm belonged to that company, and it was by their care that the militia in most parts of the country were put in a good state for acting service. In the reign of JAMES I., or 1662, the battalion was greatly enlarged, consisting of about 600 men. It has been commanded by CHARLES II., JAMES II., GEORGE IV., and many of the most distinguished sovereigns of England. To the reviews of the national troops, it has been assigned the right of the line, a post of peculiar honor. It has been considered as auxiliary to the established force of the city of London and the realm, and has continued, "from its earliest formation, a distinct and independent corpse, well officered and disciplined."

With a view to perfect the history of our own Company, at the instance of the Committee charged with that duty, I opened a correspondence with His Royal Highness Prince ALBERT, Captain-General of the London Company, and I have received, through the interposition of His Excellency GEORGE M. DALLAS and Lord CLARENDON, his reply, with accompanying documents.

But, gentlemen, I must not trespass longer upon your time. The moment has arrived when we should call into action the big guns. But, before I close, permit me to say that I accepted the command of this company from a conviction that the existence of military power is the surest safeguard of civil authority, and from a desire to aid in perpetuating the history and fame of our ancient corps. For more than two centuries it has stood a faithful sentinel on the watch-tower of freedom. There may it stand forever.

LORD CLARENDON TO MR. DALLAS.

FOREIGN OFFICE, April 8, 1857.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you, with reference to your letter of the 16th ultimo, that in furtherance of the request of the Commander of the Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, to be furnished with information respecting the history and organization of the Artillery Company of London, of which it is an offshoot, the necessary application has been made, by command of Prince ALBERT, to Mr. FITZROY, the prer at Lieutenant-Colonel of that Company, and I inclose herewith, for communication to the Artillery Company of Boston, a list of the present members of the Artillery Company of London, and also a copy of the Rules and Regulations, as last revised. To these His Royal Highness has commanded to be added a copy of HIGHMORE'S history of the Company, from its first formation down to 1802, which being alluded to in the History of the Boston Company as a scarce book, His Royal Highness is inclined to imagine may not be in the possession of that Company.

I have to add, that His Royal Highness does not knew that there is any other information on the subject, of which the Boston Company is not already in possession. It will give him much pleasure if the books now sent should be of any use in affording the information required, and he will be at all times happy to communicate such information as it may be in his power to procure. His Royal Highness begs that the Company may be informed, that he cannot but be highly gratified at the manner in which the parent Company, of which he is at the head, is spoken of by its descendant at Boston, and he will be much obliged by your having the expression of his best thanks conveyed to Colonel WILDER, for his kindness in sending His Royal Highness a copy of the History of the Boston Company, which he has looked over with much interest, and will have great pleasure in adding to his Library.

I have the honor to be, with the highest consideration.

Sir,
Your most obedient, humble Servant,
(Signed, CLARENDON.

G. M. DALLAS, Esq., &c.

MR. DALLAS TO COL. WILDER.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
LONDON, April 10, 1857.

Dear Sir: It has been a source of equal pride and pleasure to me to notice, on many occasions, the proofs of kindness and esteem shown by the members of the Royal Family towards my countrymen. The frank and generous spirit with which Prince ALBERT has responded to your letter and its accompanying volume cannot fail to gratify you.

The communication from the Earl of CLARENDON, of which a copy is enclosed, explains itself, and will, I hope, with "Highmore's History of the Honorable Artillery Company of the City of London," together with the pamphlets "Rules and Orders" and "List of present officers and members," all now forwarded to you, be safely received.

I feel quite sure that you will lose no time in addressing yourself to Lord CLARENDON, as the proper channel to convey to His Royal Highness your acknowledgments.

Very truly and respectfully, dear sir,
Your friend and obedient servant,
G. M. DALLAS

Col. Marshall P. Wilder.

After the applause had subsided, and the band had played an appropriate piece of music, Col. WILDER gave the following preliminary sentiment:

"The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston to the Honorable Artillery Company of London send greetings, filial salutations and regards, pledges of fidelity, and endeavors to honor the high prerogative of our birth. Prosperity to the parent company and to its royal commander."

This was received with tremendous applause. The band then played, in a solemn and beautiful manner, "God Save the Queen." All present rose meanwhile, and joined in the chorus. The band then suddenly, and very spiritedly, struck off into "Yankee Doodle." The applause was again renewed with great enthusiasm, and closed with three hearty cheers.

HISTORICAL SPEECH OF HON. JOSIAH QUINCY, JR.

To the first regular toast—

"The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company—An ancient landmark of A merican principles; may the landmark be carefully preserved by each succeeding generation"

JOSIAH QUINCY, Jr., was called to reply, and spoke as follows:

MR. COMMANDER: It is probably eighty-three years since the first toast given at the dinner of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company was the husband of the Queen of England. The last time before today that it was so given was probably in 1774, and by a curious coincidence I hold in my hand an invitation to that very dinner, which reads as follows:

"BOSTON, May 30, 1774.

"The officers of the Artillery Company present their compliments to Lt. Col. SNELLING, and ask the favor of his company to dine at Faneuil Hall on Monday, 6th June next."

Perhaps of all the dinners that ever were given by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, none possessed a deeper interest, or was fraught with more important consequences, than the one to which Lieutenant-Colonel SNELLING was invited by this card. Between the date of the invitation and the time of the dinner, the Boston Port bill had gone into operation. The whole power of Great Britain was pledged to crush out the spark of liberty that was first kindled in this hall, by the destruction of the town of Boston.

The officer's commissions on that day were not to be exchanged by the Governor, for he had gone down to superintend the doings of the Legislature at the distant town of Salem, which, notwithstanding the fact that "Charlestown stage-coach No. 1 was started on that very day for Salem, with four good horses, and as neat a coach as was, perhaps, ever drove in America," was too distant for his return, and Major-General BRATTLE was detailed for that service.

Commissions were given at that time to Lieut. WM. BELL, and the wars preventing the fashionable system of rotation in office, first introduced in this corps, he retained it to 1786, when he called the survivors of his Company together and revived the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

How Americans liked the removal of the Legislature to Salem, may be gathered from an ode published on that day, the first verse of which was:

"Oh 'twas a joyful sound to hear
Our politicians say.
Good Lord! we must from Boston haste,
Soon after 'lection day."

And I quote it in order to inquire of His Excellency, whether he supposes that that Legislature then voted to pay themselves, after the adjournment, for 'lection day and all. [Cheers.]

[His Excellency responded that they would not have been allowed to do so. This provoked a roar of laughter.[

We happen, Mr. Commander, to know a good deal about that day. In the first place, we know that the Artillery Company had been to church, and had heard a sermon from Rev. Dr. LATHROP. We also know that the Government, in those days, had a particular disinclination to the preaching of politics, and had placed a sergeant of the Royale at the foot of the pulpit staire to prevent the utterance of treason, which is an evidence that the clergy in those days, were slower in speech, or the soldiers quicker on their legs than at present. For there are now those who would, under similar circumstances, utter treason enough to hang a whole congregation while a sergeant was getting up the pulpit stairs.

I must confess, Mr. Commander, that although it is not my wont to prepare after-dinner speeches, I could not refrain from going to the Boston Athenæum in order to look at the sermon—and I came to the conclusion, on perusing it, that the sergeant must have rather vague ideas on the subject of treason, if he let him preach it through without interruption.

His text was from Romans xii, 19: "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men."

His first remark is: "The text supposes there are cases in which it is impossible, even for a Christain, to live peaceably in this world—that there may be cases where he ought to unsheath his sword, and resist even unto blood—adding, in a note, much to our purpose are those words of our Lord, 'He that hath no sword, let him sell his garments and buy one.'" His first head is on the general duty of living peaceably. His second is the cases in which wars may be justified. The principal one of which is, "When those who are in government violate the laws they had sworn to maintain, and attempt to oppress and enslave the people whom they have sworn to protect and maintain, that we ought even to make war against those rulers who leap the bounds prescribed them by the Constitution," and concludes by urging the necessity of cultivating the art, and of preparing for unavoidable war.

During his discourse he anticipated the account to be given by some future historian of the results of that day, and after recounting the wrongs the colony had received and the steps he recommended to repel them, proceeds:

"From that period we date the glory of America. The colonies, being firmly united, were free and happy. They made rapid progress in population, and in the improvement of every useful art, and by their union, virtue and industry rose to their present degree of opulence and wealth."

I would that time permitted me to make some further extracts from this bold and almost prophetic sermon, as illustrative of the spirit, "Trust in the Lord—but keep your powder dry."

And what part did the members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, many of whom had fought at Louisburg and in the Canadas, take in this struggle? Let Lexington and Bunker Hill answer.

The very paper in my hand tells us, which side the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company espoused on that day. How did it happen that Lieut. Col. SNELLING retained his invitation? Simply because he did not go to the dinner. And why did he not go to the dinner? Simply because he was commander of the Governor's Life Guard, an adherent to the government, and became a refugee but shortly after. But luckily Young America was on the other side: the heart of youth was wiser than the head of age—his son, a son of liberty, remained, married the daughter of one who attended the Boston Tea-party, and left a long line of republican successors, who would have no political objection to dining with the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

Standing in Faneuil Hall, the citizens of Boston should never forget the reminiscences connected with that hour. The spirit that actuated their fathers may be gathered from the papers of that morning. "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in Askelon," says the leader in the Boston Gazette of that morning. "The Boston port bill is now carrying into execution. The town has become a spectacle to angels and men. God grant that it may not be intimidated by its present horrors to make a surrender of the rights of America, or in any respect to dishonor herself at this day of trial and perplexity." The last prayer was fully answered, and answered because of the support that was given by the other towns and colonies on this continent. The British Parliament thought that the closing of the port of Boston would build up Salem, and confidently expected that her inhabitants would seize on it as a boon. But they scorned the bribe. They threw open their warehouses without rent to the merchants of Boston and unanimously adopted a resolution in these words:

"By shutting up of the port of Boston, some imagine that the course of trade might be turned hither. But we must be dead to every idea of justice—lost to all feelings of humanity, could we indulge one thought to seize on wealth and raise our fortunes on the ruin of our suffering neighbors."

Nor was this feeling confined to Massachusetts. JOHN ADAMS, in his diary of Aug. 31, 1774, says that Mr. LYNCH said that Col. WASHINGTON made the most eloquent speech at the Virginia Convention that was ever made. It was—

"I will raise 1,000 men, subsist them at my own expense, and march, myself, at their head, to the relief of Boston."

Nor was this alone the voice of Virginia; the cry that went from this hall for assistance was echoed back from the high hills of the Santee, from the peaks of the Alleghanies, from the highlands of the Hudson, from the white hills of New-Hampshire, from the Green Mountains of Vermont; it came like the sound of men hurrying to the contest—of brothers marching to a brother's aid.

But I have already exceeded my time, and would close with—

"The Love of Liberty and the Determination to Protect it, that have ever distinguished the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company—While one generation passeth away, and another cometh, may these virtues endure forever."

Speeches were also made by Ex-President PIERCE, Gov. GARDNER, Major BEN: PERLEY POORE and other.

Explosion of the Propeller Inkermann at Toronto—Loss of Life.

From the Hamilton Banner.

The boiler of the propeller Inkermann, of Kingston, exploded at Toronto, on the 29th inst., as she was backing out from Brown's wharf, almost totally destroying the vessel and burying the hands, variously reported at from 20 to 30, in the ruins. Nothing of the upper works behind the wheel-house are left, and the Bay is strewn with pieces of the wreck to the distance of a quarter of a mile.

She had no passengers on board; her crew numbered about twenty-two men, and as yet but ten persons, including two females, have been recovered, two of whom are dead. One of the females is named CATHERINE MCCREA; she is terribly scalded about the waist and lower extremities, and will scarcely recover. One man lies dead on Maitland'e Wharf; he is a stout-looking man, with red whiskers; both his legs were broken, and he was frightfully scalded; he was, probably, the engineer. The closest attention was being paid to the sufferers at the wharf. Among the physicians present we noticed Doctors HALLOWELL, BOVELL, COTTER, TAGREBURN, ARNOLD, &c. Of the parties removed to the Hospital, one has a thigh broken, another a leg, and another was so fearfully scalded that his face looked as though he had been flayed. The after part of the boat is completely blown away back of the wheel-house and above the bulwarks. An examination is now going on of the wreck, and the furniture is being removed. The greatest excitement prevails. There is a living stream moving to the wharf, and we find it at present impossible to ascertain the names of the crew.

The Inkermann was owned by HUGH MCINTOSH, of Kingston, which arrived here on Wednesday evening from Montreal. She discharged 5,000 bushels of oats here, at UPTON & BROWNE'S Wharf, and was just departing for St. Catharines with a cargo of merchandise when the melancholy accident occurred.

From the Toronto Colonist, 30th.

SIX of the crew, much injured, some of them, it is feared, fatally, were taken from the wreck and immediately sent to the hospital. Three, namely: BRIAN O'DONNELL, steward; MURTY MCMAHON, wheelsman, and also another wheelsman, escaped wholly uninjured. Three men were taken out dead, which, with the purser, already noticed as dead, makes the number of dead bodies four, as found up to a late hour last night. Thus, the six men in hospital, the four dead, the three men uninjured, the captain, and the two women, make 16, which leaves at least seven more to be accounted for, and who, we greatly fear, may be classed as dead—may, we regret to say, it is almost certain such is the fact. The three men who were taken dead from the wreck were awfully mangled. One of them had his head completely taken off. None of the dead, with the exception of the purser, have yet been recognized. From the fact that the crew were mostly French Canadians, and all strangers here, there was much difficulty in identifying them. The survivors were apparently too much excited to give calm attention to anything.

From the Boston Journal.

A few days since, while Mr. ASA FITZ, who resides in Franklin street, in this town, was on a visit to Plymouth, in this State, he formed the acquaintance of a gentleman named R. B. HARMON, apparently about thirty-five years of age. He appeared in feeble health, and was waiting at Plymouth for a chance to ship as a fisherman. Mr. FITZ returned to Boston, accompanied by the stranger, who stopped at the Quincy House. On Sunday Mr. FITZ went to the hotel and requested the gentleman to spend the day at his house. The invitation was accepted, and the two came out here.

After eating a hearty dinner, Mr. HARMON complained of a severe pain in his head and laid down. Every attention was paid to their guest by the family of Mr. FITZ, and the last time he was seen alive was about 9 o'clock last evening, when Mr. FITZ himself bathed his head with water and left him for the night. On calling him to breakfast this morning, no answer being obtained, his room was entered and the man was found lying on his back—dead.

Coroner ADAMS, of East Cambridge, was immediately summoned, but owing to other engagements was unable to hold an inquest this forenoon. From papers found upon his person, it appears that he has been in the employ of a firm in New York, where he has acted in the capacity of a clerk.

A telegraphic dispatch has been forwarded to the New-York house informing them of the circumstances of his death.

Destructive Land-Slide in North Cambridge, Mass.

From the Boston Herald, June 1.

A land-slide, involving the loss of a considerable amount of property, occurred at the brick-yards in North Cambridge, about a half a mile from POSTER'S Hotel, on Friday afternoon. For a long time past the workmen in the brick-yard of Mr. PETER HUBBELL have been engaged in a pit a short distance east of the Fitchburg Railroad. This pit is about forty feet deep, and covers an area of several acres. From the continued excavations, the land on the eastern side of the pit had been undermined to such an extent that during the heavy shower, Friday afternoon, a large mass of earth, on which was situated a barn and several outbuildings, gave way and was precipitated into the pit. About an acre and a half of the land was thus displaced.

These houses were occupied by the following persons and their families: Patrick Delaney, John Smith, Peter Dorey, Michael Mahoney, Patrick Kelliher, and John Foley. One end of DOREY'S house is left projecting over the pit, and it is feared that it will share the same fate as the barn should there come another heavy rain.

The six families occupying the houses nearest the pit have removed from them. The damage by the land-slide is estimated at about $5,000. The property damaged was owned, in the greater part, by the occupants.

A MAN SHOT BY HIS SON.—A man by the name of WM. WILSON, residing just above Mine Hill Gap, Penn., was shot on Monday evening last by his son. It appears that WILSON was too apt to indulge in the cowardly and inhuman business of "wife-beating," and while doing so on Monday last, his son, who could not stand and witness such a brutal attack upon his mother without avenging her wrongs, took hold of a pistol and shot his own father. WILSON'S recovery is doubtful.

The health of Rev. THEODORE CLAPP, formerly a prominent Unitarian preacher in New-Orleans, but now residing in Louisville, Ky., is represented to be in a very precarious condition. Mr. CLAPP has for many years been the most distinguished prosecutor of Liberal Christianity in that section, and has been very popular.

Massachusetts Affairs.

GOV. GARDNER REFUSES TO REMOVE JUDGE LORING—HE VETOES THE KANSAS AID BILL.

GOV. GARDNER, of Massachusetts, is given to saying No. He vetoes the bill passed by the Legislature to appropriate $100,000 for Massachusetts sufferers in Kansas, on the ground of unconstitutionality, and refuses to remove Judge LORING.

Of the Kansas matter, the Governor says:

The precedent that Vermont and Michigan have made similar appropriations, is urged as a reason why it is constitutional for Massachusetts to do the same. The fact, however, that thirteen other Free States had made none, would be equally as conclusive that it is unconstitutional for us to do so, inasmuch as each State must apply any proposed enactment to the sole test of the provisions of its own Constitution, irrespective of what may be done by any other independent sovereignty under the authority of another and diverse organic law. What the Constitution of Michigan may permit, that of Massachusetts may forbid, and the converse is equally true. In fact, in the former unnaturalized aliens can vote, while free colored persons are debarred from that privilege: while in the latter this franchise is conferred on free negroes and withheld from unnaturalized foreigners, thus showing how untenable is the argument of analogy.

Having thus shown that the resolves, in my judgment, contravene the provisions of the Constitution of Massachusetts, I rest my refusal to affix my signature to them upon the highest and broadest grounds known to a statesman.

I cannot do it without violating that oath of fealty to the Constitution of Massachusetts which I took upon me, and subscribed in your presence; and, what is far worse than the guilt of individual perjury, without doing violence to that instrument, which is the written charter of all our liberties, and the legacy of our fathers' wisdom.

Weighed with the foregoing considerations—our empty treasury—the paramount duty of retrenchment and economy—the provocation to other States to retaliate by antagonistic grants—and the danger of reawakening, by foreign interference, the slumbering passions and hostilities of that unfortunate Territory—all sink into comparative insignificance.

Believing, then, these resolves unconstitutional were they expedient—and inexpedient were they constitutional—I decline to give them my official sanction.

HENRY J. GARDNER.

To Hon. President of the Senate:

Before the final adjournment of the Legislature, I desire to inform the two branches that I respectfully decline to comply with their request contained in the Address for the removal of EDWARD GRESLY LORING from the office of Judge of Probate for the county of Suffolk.

Pressing duties, necessary to be performed during the closing hours of the session, render it impracticable for me to give my reasons in full for such refusal at the present time, but I will, at the earliest opportunity, prepare them, cause them to be printed in the volume of Acts and Resolves for the present year, and to be communicated to the public prints, for the information of the members of the Legislature, and the people of the commonwealth.

HENRY J. GARDNER.

POLITICAL.

The Traveler says:

"There was a meeting of American leaders and members of the Legislature in this city, on Friday evening, to consider the exigencies of their organization in relation to the Republican Convention of June 24, and the State election of next Fall. We hear that it was decided to form new Councils, and to call a Convention on the 16th of June, and nominate Mr. BANKS for Governor. This is to get ahead of the Republicans, who are also generally tending to Mr. BANK'S nomination, by nominating him first. Both parties look upon him as the "coming man," and seek the credit of putting first upon the track, and attaching to him some of their more special favorites for the other Executive offices. The probability now is, that both Conventions will select Mr. BANKS for the first place, but disagree and measure their respective strength upon the other nominations. Gov. GARDNER, and his immediate friends, are represented as unfavorable to this sudden coup de grace of their party."

The Bee hoists the name of Mr. BANKS for Governor.

The Emancipation of Dred Scott.

From the St. Louis Evening News, 26th.

This morning, TAYLOR BLOW, Esq., appeared in the Circuit Court, and entered the emancipation of DRED SCOTT, his wife, HARRIET, and his two daughters, EL ish did, or the way he acted when the trial to make him use these letters was had? A.—I don't recollect.

Q.—Did anybody else, in the lifetime of Mr. Parish, tell you anything about how Mr. Parish acted when that trial was made? A.—I don't recollect.

Q.—Had you any more than one conversation with Mrs. Parish about those letters after the evening you brought them home, and in the lifetime of Mr. Parish? A.—I don't recollect.

Q.—Did it ever occur to you that you would like to see this experiment tried, or that you would like to try it yourself? A.—I don't recollect; it may; I can't call it to mind.

Q.—Can you give any reason why you did not make such a trial yourself, or have one or more such trials made in your presence? A.—I can give no reason; it may be for the reason I was not at home in the daytime.

Q.—Where did you buy the letters? A.—I don't know the name of the person who kept the store; it was not far from Fourteenth street; I am inclined to think it was in the Bowery, below Union-square; it was at a toy store.

Q.—Do you keep a petty expense book, in which you enter small items of expenditure? A.—My mercantile firm does; I have no such private book.

Q.—Could you now go to and find the place where you bought those letters? A.—No.

Q.—Were they paid for out of yours, or out of Mrs. Parish's funds? A.—They must have been paid for out of Mrs. Parish's funds; I paid and she refunded me.

Q.—Did she keep any memorandum of small or petty expenses? A.—She did not.

(Mr. O'Conor having previously given notice to Mr. Evarts, that he required the production of the letters referred to, they are now produced by the counsel for the prosecution, the same being letters upon separate pasteboard cards, about 2½ inches square, contained in a box, with the imprint "Picture Alphabet," and twenty-seven in number, twenty-six being the small letters of the alphabet, in capitals, and the twenty-seventh being on one side, the same letters in Romans, and on the other side the cardinal numbers and 0, and the diphthongs Æ, Œ. On the reverse side of the 26 cards are pictorial representations, and the name of the subject or person represented, in Romans. These will together be marked as Exhibit, No. 91.)

Q.—Did you ever, at any time in the life of Mr. Parish, advise Mrs Parish, or any body else, to try any other means than these letters, to get at Mr. Parish's meaning or wishes? A.—I don't recollect—I don't know.

Q.—Do you know of any other person having spoken to or in the hearing of Mrs. Parish, or giving any advice on that subject? A.—I don't recollect.

Q.—Were you fully satisfied in your own mind from the period when this trial with these letters was made, that Mr. Parish could not be induced to use such letters? A.—I have no recollection on the subject.

Q.—Do you not recollect what your own opinion was? A.—No.

Q.—Did you not believe whatever your sister told you about it? A.—I believe she is a lady of strict veracity, and I believe what she says.

(Mr. O'Conor objects to the part underlined, as irresponsive and irrelevant. Answer allowed to stand.)

Question repeated. A.—Whatever she told me I certainly believe.

Q.—Are you not certain that she told you, or in some form gave you to understand, that the attempt to make Mr. Parish use these letters had failed? A.—No.

Q.—Are you not certain that in some way you ascertained from somebody to your satisfaction, soon after you bought these letters, that the attempt to make Mr. Parish use them had failed? A.—No.

Q.—Do you mean to be understood that, so far as your present recollection will serve you, you did not know or learn, and did not form a belief or opinion that some attempt had been made to induce Mr. Parish to use these letters, and that such attempt had failed? A.—I recollect nothing on the subject but what I have said previously.

Question repeated. A.—I do.

Important Charge of Recorder Smith.

GREAT INCREASE OF CRIME—INSUBORDINATION OF THE POLICE—THE POLICE WAR—ALL LAWS MUST BE OBEYED—THE EXCISE LAW MUST BE ENFORCED—CONDITION OF ELDRIDGE-STREET JAIL.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

Yesterday morning, at the opening of the Court, the following gentlemen were impanneled as a Grand Jury:

JOHN T. B. MAXWELL, Foreman.

Benjamin D. Brush,	David Beach,
Samuel Barker,	John A. Currier,
William Frandreau,	Samuel N. Dodge,
John G. Hadden,	Moses W. Dean,
Amos Leeds,	Samuel Dawson,
Adam C. Martin,	Samuel Down,
William Osthout,	Spencer K. Gross,
Isaac P. Olmstead,	Ellis B. Warner,
Stephen Philbin,	Addington Reed,
James L. Stewart,	Cornelius Smith,
Richard Barton.

After the Clerk had administered the customary oath, the Recorder delivered the following important charge:

This morning, after the Grand Jury were empanelled, the Recorder delivered to them the following important charge:

GENTLEMEN OF THE GRAND JURY: You are selected from the body of the people of the City and County of New-York, for the purpose of hearing and passing upon such charges of a criminal nature as arise within the jurisdiction of this County. Your office is an important one. The liberty and the reputation of individuals may be seriously affected by your proceedings. It is, therefore, highly important that your deliberations should be characterized by patience, discretion, wisdom, and the strictest justice and impartiality. Above all, no political or personal views or bias should be allowed in the slightest degree to influence your acts. In the language of the impressive and comprehensive oath which you have taken, you should present "no one through envy, hatred or malice, or leave any one unpresented through fear, favor, affection or reward." I stated to the last Grand Jury which I had the honor to address, that crime in the City and County of New-York was fearfully on the increase. I regret to say, gentlemen, that careful investigation since that time has satisfied me that the increase has been greater than I then anticipated. The number of convictions for crime, or of arrests, is no indication of the amount of crime committed. Owing to the peculiar construction, gross inefficiency and insubordination of our Police force, not more than half the perpetrators of crime are arrested. In some sections of the City, the strong affinity between members of the Police Department and the ruffians and rogues who infest our City is so great that crime is committed with impunity. Another reason why the number of convictions is no criterion to the amount of crime is, that when arrests are made and indictments found, delays are procured from time to time under various pretences, such as engagements of counsel, absence or pretended absence of witnesses, until complainants are wearied out with constant attendance, or are intimidated with threats of violence if they persist in demanding justice. Crimes against the person, affrays in which the pistol and the dagger are called into requisition, brutal assaults upon unoffending and peaceful citizens, are matters of such frequent occurrence that they have almost ceased to create excitement. Robberies perpetrated by means of false pretences upon the unsophisticated traveler and the emigrant by organized bands of swindlers, are openly and daily perpetrated, but the perpetrators escape justice. This system of swindling has been reduced to a science, and men have arisen to wealth, place and influence upon the avails of the plunder. Yet when we look to the records of our Courts we find that, with few exceptions, the perpetrators of these outrages and crimes escape the Penitentiary and State Prison. If a conviction ensues, the wrong is atoned for by a pecuniary consideration. Justice never ought to be satisfied by receiving into its coffers the wages received by the hireling for the offence committed, or the plunder of which the thief has defrauded his victim. The police force of our City consists of between eleven and twelve hundred men; with this force, if they performed their duty fearlessly, faithfully and impartially, the perpetrators of these crimes would not escape justice. I do not mean, gentlemen, to apply my remarks to the police force indiscriminately. In the department I know there are many able and efficient officers, who are always ready and willing faithfully and fearlessly to discharge their duty; but partisan preferment, without regard to fitness for office, as a reward for political services rendered, has had a direct tendancy to weaken, demoralize and disorganize the system, and has fully developed what was long since predicted, that a partisan police would of necessity be a great evil in a community like our own. The extraordinary condition at present of the police department—the insubordination of its members—presents a humiliating spectacle. Some members of the department openly defy the law and proclaim their determination to resist it. The anarchy and confusion consequent upon this state of things is deplorable. As citizens we are bound to obey the law. We may consider it oppressive; we may consider it unjust; but still it is entitled to obedience. If laws are oppressive, through the ballot-box we can seek and obtain redress. If unconstitutional the judiciary have power to annul them. Opposition to the enforcement of laws solemnly enacted by the Legislature is a great crime—one that deserves severe punishment and the censure of every good citizen. We have the right and it is our duty, as citizens, to express ourselves freely with regard to our laws, and to adopt all peaceful measures to effect the repeal of those which are obnoxious, or their cancellation by a court of competent jurisdiction if they are unconstitutional. Beyond that we have no right to go. I have made these preliminary remarks before calling your attention to the particular statutes which it is my duty to refer to for the reason that cases may be presented to you in the investigation of which you perhaps see the pertinency of the remarks which I have made, particularly in reference to open opposition to the constituted authority. I refer you, in connection with this subject, to the Revised Statutes, under the title Misdemeanors, section 8, the language of which is, "if two or more persons shall conspire to commit an offence, * * * * or for the perversion or obstruction of justice or due administration of the laws, they shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor," the punishment for which, on conviction, is one year in the penitentiary and a fine of $250, in the discretion of the Court. At the last session of our Legislature an act was passed entitled "an act to suppress intemperance and to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors." Whatever my opinion may be with regard to the injustice and oppression of some of the provisions of the act, my duty and your duty under it is plain and imperative. It is my duty to call the act to your notice, and your duty to act upon all complaints under it properly presented. Before calling your attention to its provisions, you will pardon me, gentlemen, for diverging from the questions which particularly pertain to your duty as Grand Jurors, by suggestions that may not be misappropriate to your duties as citizens, occupying the high and influential position you sustain in this community. The great evils which result, and have resulted for ages, from the use of ardent spirits, have called into requisition the intellects of philanthropists and philosophers, to devise plans and means to check the evil, and to ameliorate the condition of the victims whose prospects have been blighted or blasted by its influence. Experience has shown that moral suasion and moral influence have done and can do much towards the accomplishment of the object; that legal enactments have done and can do little or nothing. The evil emanating from intemperance is so great, and the misery flowing from it so terrible, that legislators have frequently attempted by law to arrest it; but experience has shown the utter failure to accomplish the object. Where prohibitory laws, as to the use of ardent spirits, have been enacted, the diminution of drunkenness has been scarcely perceptible. The scenes of the debauch and drunken orgies of the inebriate have been changed, by substituting the fireside for the grog-shop and tavern. Probably no law has been for years enacted in this State that was so unpopular in this City as the present excise law. It is condemned for its oppressiveness, its want of discrimination, its tendency, if unjustly enforced, to create a monopoly in the traffic—it is regarded as a specimen of hasty legislation, as a compromise between the ultra prohibitionist and the advocate for unrestrained traffic in liquor—as a law enacted more for the sake of imposing penalties upon the seller than for the purpose of checking the sale. That there is a very strong and decided feeling against this law, is beyond all question—that a large and influential class of our citizens interested in the sale of liquor have resolved to disregard the law is also, I am sorry to say, beyond question. But, gentlemen, whatever views others may take, or we may privately entertain, as to the justness or oppression, expediency or inexpediency of the law, there is but one course left for us to adopt, and that is, to perform our duty as to its enforcement. I cannot illustrate my views upon this subject more fully than by employing the language used by our present Mayor in his message to the Common Council at the time of great excitement soon after the passage of the law entitled "An act for the suppression of intemperance, panperism and crime," popularly known as the "Maine liquor law." He said upon that occasion, "That the people govern—not in their primary capacity, but through representatives freely and fairly chosen—is the theory of American government. The people are the source of political power. They make the laws; and the great safeguard of American liberty is general compliance. As the statutes thus created for the better protection of life and property and the pursuit of happiness, are but the reflection of the popular will for the time being, so are they binding upon the body politic—the minority as well as the majority—who are alike parties to the compact, the obligations of which it is dishonorable to disregard. And though these elements of self government present the distinguished features between our own and the Governments of Europe, still our success has been owing more to acquiescence in the will of the majority than in the character of the Government itself. Other Republics have failed, even when founded upon our forms and Constitution, only because of the resistance of the vanquished contestants for rule, by rebellion against the laws and the executive power appointed to enforce them. We understand Republicanism differently, and hence have no such struggles. The generally pervading common school educational system—the rigid principle of obedience instilled into the child by the parent, and the scholar by the teacher—the enlarged human progress loading onward to the expansion of the heart and the intellect, all founded upon an enlightened unproscriptive religious sentiment, furnish the platform upon which American liberty stands, and from which no calamity, save forcible resistance to the laws, can ever remove it. It is not contended that minorities have grievances, and that their grievances must remain unremedied. Their rights are fully protected. The same fundamental law that binds minorities to submit, points out clearly the road to relief against an illegal or improper exercise of authority upon the part of majority. Even whenever fanaticicism rules the hour and covers the country with its baneful influence, to the exclusion of reason and justice, public opinion will soon correct the error, and restore the calm sense of mature conservative judgment. What if the law-maker prove recreant, and betray the constituent he was chosen to represent? The wrong inflicted is not irremediable, though though it may be a proper chastisement for a negligent or corrupt use of the franchise. Time repairs all the errors of legislation. Its evils and wrongs, however great, invariably recoil before public opinion and the decisions of the courts. Redress and relief can thus always be obtained. The legal tribunals and the ballot-box are never approached in vain for the maintenance of a good, or the overthrow of a bad cause. These are the only constitutional resorts. All others are treason and rebellion." This advice, gentlemen, was in accordance with the spirit of our institutions. It is the advice that should be enforced by example, as well as by precept, by those whose duty it is to administer and enforce the laws. If we have the right to set at defiance a law because we are dissatisfied with its operation, our system of government had better at once be abandoned and something substituted in its stead that will save us from rebellion and anarchy where leaders can be found unscrupulous enough to mislead the masses for the advancement of their own private ends and objects. The act creating the present excise law, imperatively directs that Courts shall inquire into all offences against its provisions, and to direct Grand Juries to present offenders under it; and also all persons who may be charged with adulterating imported or other intoxicating liquors with poisonous or deleterious drugs, or mixing or selling the same, or with knowingly importing or selling intoxicating liquors or wines adulterated with poisonous or deleterious drugs or mixtures; all which offences are declared misdemeanors. The selling of liquors without first obtaining a license; the refusal of a magistrate to entertain a complaint for a violation of the law; the act of the Commissioners of Excise granting a license to a person who has not complied with the requisitions of the statute; the neglect of officers to arrest persons detected by them in the act of violating the provisions of the law, are also declared to be misdemeanors. I do not propose to go minutely into the various provisions of the act, for the reason that all cases under it in this county must first be presented to a magistrate, where the party charged is entitled to a hearing, and his election to be tried at the Special Sessions or in this Court. In other counties in this State cases may, in the first instance, be presented to the Grand Jury; but by an act passed in 1853, which is still in force, the Special Sessions of the City and County of New-York have exclusive jurisdiction in all cases of misdemeanor, unless the accused party elect is to be tried in this Court. You will, therefore, gentlemen, entertain no charges under this act unless upon complaints that are sent to you after a preliminary examination before a magistrate. I do not, therefore, deem it necessary to call your attention in detail to the provisions of the act, for the reason that in each case presented the papers upon which it is based will indicate the section to which you will of necessity be compelled to refer. I am also instructed to call your attention to the violation of the laws against lotteries—the law against extortion by public officers—the law against usury, and the law to preserve the purity of the elections. All lotteries in this State are unlawful, and those engaged in them directly or indirectly in this State are guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment. The law against extortion is frequently violated but seldom punished. It relates to public officers taking fees not allowed by law. The law against usury makes it a misdemeanor to take more than seven per cent. interest for the use of money. This law has long remained a dead letter on the statute. The law to preserve the purity of elections is the most important law for your consideration, for, upon its observance depends the stability of our institutions. At the last session of the Legislature an act was passed that will materially benefit the electors of this City. The necessity for its passage was rendered apparent by the outrages perpetrated at the last election in some of the Wards by hired ruffians, under the patronage, pay and protection of officials who set all law at defiance—drove peaceable electors from the polls, intimidated them by threats of personal violence, and committed upon them murderous assaults. As the law stood previous to the last session of the Legislature, the perpetrators of such outrages were only liable for simple assault and battery, and upon conviction for that offence judgment could be suspended or a simple fine imposed. This penalty the hired political desperado never dreads. The experience of the past has taught him that political influence would shield him from the penitentiary, particularly if his outrages had been perpetrated for and on behalf of those who held place and power. By the late important provision to which I refer, the penalty of imprisonment for not less than one year and up to two years is imposed upon any person who uses personal violence upon an elector on the day of election; and it imposes the like penalty upon any officer who neglects to make an arrest of a person who assails an elector with personal violence, if such violence is committed in his presence. This law is a salutary one, and is much needed in this City. It will prevent such disgraceful scenes as we were compelled to witness at the polls in November last, when policemen stood quietly by and saw citizens brutally assaulted without interfering with or attempting to arrest the perpetrators. This act was passed to reach such cases. The discretion given to Courts in meeting out punishment under this act is taken away, except the discretion as to imprisonment between one and two years, which, so long as Judges are elected by the people, is a very important provision of the law. I have detained you, gentlemen, longer than usual, in the remarks I have considered it my duty to address to you; but before closing, I beg to call your attention to the condition of the prison in Eldridge-street—the place of confinement for debtors and witnesses. It is represented as being wholly inadequate to the purposes for which it was intended, and a recent event that has transpired there, has given it an unenviable notoriety. In your capacity as Grand Jurors you have a right to visit our public institutions and inquire into their management and condition; and if, in your judgment, there is that in their condition or management that should be remedied, it is your duty to present it. In your deliberations you require 16 to constitute a quorum; your number must not exceed 23. Your foreman has the power to excuse any of you for part of the entire session. Your application for that purpose should be made to him and not to the Court. It requires twelve to concur in finding a bill. And the same number when found to reconsider the finding. In all cases the District Attorney is your legal adviser. It is your duty to report to the Court any person who attempts to tamper with you or influence you in the discharge of your duties. In cases of felony where a party is not in custody it is a misdemeanor to dissolve the finding of an indictment against him. I will now dismiss you, gentlemen, under charge of the officers apprised to attend you, and you will proceed to the discharge of your duties.

There being no cases ready for trial, the Court adjourned till this morning.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets—Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, Monday, June 2, 1857—5 P. M.

ASHES—Are in demand and are worth $7 25@$7 37½ for Pearls, and $7 87½ for Pots, ₱ 100 lbs.

BEESWAX—Sales of 2,000 lbs. prime American yellow, more reported on private terms.

COFFEE—The market is very quiet; prices are barely sustained. Java, 15¼c.@15½c.; Laguayra, 12¼c.@12½c.; Maracaibo, 12c.@12c.; Rio, 9¾c.@11¼c.; St. Domingo, 11¼c.@11½c.; Babia, 10¾c. Mr. Wm. Scorr, broker, reports that the week's transactions at private embrace the Yankee Blade's cargo, 4,600 bags, quality rather low, at 10¾c. to speculators, and a few small parcels within range of quotations. A sale of 1,200 bags Carravella was made for export to London at 10¾c. cash.

Total, pkgs	118,300	97,717

COPPER—Is dull and heavy, as before reported.

COTTON—Continues quiet and languid, with more eagerness to sell than to buy. Middling Uplands 13⅞c. @14c.; Gulfs, 14⅛@14½c.; and other grades at proportionate prices, ₱ lb.

FISH—Cod and Mackerel are in request and are stiffly held. Stocks limited. Herring are plenty, quiet, and depressed.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour is dull and lower. Sales, 7,200 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$6 65@$6 70
Straight State	6 70@ 6 75
Extra State	6 80@ 7 10

Extra Ohio	7 25@ 8 75
Fancy Genesee	7 30@ 7 50
Extra Genesee	7 75@ 9 00
Extra Missouri	9 00@10 00

Canadian continues heavy and languid. Sales have been reported of about 700 bbls., in lots, at from $6 65@$6 75 for superfine to choice extra, ₱ bbl. Southern is in slack demand, and is less valuable. The transactions since our last comprise about 2,000 bbls. very low Mixed to choice Extra, at $7 30@$9 50 ₱ bbl. Rye Flour is scarce and wanted at $4 35@$6 12½c. for Fine to Superfine, ₱ bbl. Corn Meal is also rare and needed at $4 25 for Jersey, and $4 50 for Brandywine, ₱ bbl.

GRAIN—Wheat is plentier and cheaper. Hence, it is in better request, mainly for home use, but to some extent for export. Sales: 29,400 bushels,—including good Canadian White at $1 80@$1 82; good ordinary to very handsome Western Red, at $1 50@$1 70 ₱ bushel. Holders ask $1 27½@$1 30 for Rye. $1 50@$1 70 for Barley, and $1 80 @$1 85 for Barley Malt, ₱ bushel, each of these being very scarce,—but the general inquiry is tame. Oats are dull and down to 66c.@69c. for Western; 60c.@62c. for State and Canadian; and 58c.@63c. for Jersey, ₱ bushel. Corn is more depressed and is again cheaper. Sales 27,000 bushels, at 97½c @98 for mixed in store; 98c.@$1 for yellow, and 98c.@$1 01 for White, ₱ bushel.

HAY—Sales: 750 bales River at 85c @95c. ₱ 100 lbs.

HOPS—We heard of sales of 104 bales last year's crop, at 8c.@12c., ₱ lb. Estimated stock of hops in the country 22,000 bales—including 12,000 bales of last year's crop; 6,000 bales of the crop of 1855: and 4,000 bales of the crop of 1854.

IRON—Sales transpired of 80 tons Scotch Pig, in lots at ₤34, usual terms, ₱ ton.

LEAD—Is quite dull and nominal.

LIME—Rockland, 87c. for Common, and $1 20 for Lump, ₱ bbl.

MOLASSES—Is very quiet, and almost nominal in price. Porto Rico, in hhds., at 50c.@58c.; Cuba Muscavado, 56c.@59c.; Clayed Cuba, 49c.@51c., and New-Orleans, 75c. ₱ gallon.

NAVAL STORES—Resin is less abundant, and is in fair request, at $1 25@$1 90 for Common, ₱ 310 lbs.; $3@ $5 50 for No. 1 and White, and $5 50@$7 50 for Pale ₱ 280 lbs. Tar is heavy and languid. No change has occurred in Crude Turpentine. Spirits Turpentine is in demand, and is firm, at 51c. ₱ gallon.

OILS—Continue in limited request, at about previous figures.

PROVISIONS—Pork is in improved demand, partly for future delivery, but factors offer their supplies freely, and prices have a downward tendency. Sales, 1,500 bbls. in lots, chiefly at $22 75@$23 25 for Mess, here; $24 for Mess, delivered, at the option of the buyer, within 30 days; and $19 25@$19 37 for Prime ₱ bbl. Cut Meats are in fair demand and are up to 11c.@11¾c. for Hams, and 10c for Shoulders, ₱ lb. Bacon is salable and worth 11¾c @13¼c. ₱ lb. Lard is unaltered. The transactions since our last reach about 300 bbls., and three, mostly fair to prime, at 14¼c. @14¾c., ₱ lb. Beef is in fair request at full prices. The transactions since our last consist of 330 bbls., at $14@$15 for Country Mess; $16 50@$17 for repacked Western Mess, and $17 50@$18 for extra Western do., ₱ bbl. New Prime Mess Beef $28@$31 ₱ tc. Beef Hams $23 50@$24 ₱ bbl. Butter is plenty, and in very moderate demand at 17c.@12c. for new Ohio; 18c @23c. for common to very good new State, and 24c @26c. for prime to choice do., ₱ lb. Cheese is dull and heavy at 7c.@11c. ₱ lb.

Stock of Rice in New-York, June 1:

	1856.	1857.
Carolina, casks	5,519	3,271
East India, bags	—	1,300

SEEDS—Are quiet, and somewhat nominal in price.

SOAP—We hear of sales of 150 boxes Castile at about 11½c. ₱ lb.

SPICES—Are inactive and languid,—as previously reported.

SUGARS—Continue very quiet,—there being no inclination among operators to agree about prices. No important sales transpired to day.

TALLOW—There were 10,000 lbs. prime sold at 11c @ 11¼c. ₱ lb.

TEAS—Are in rather limited request,—owing chiefly to the reduced quantity available, and the very high claims of owners.

TOBACCO—The market exhibits very little animation; prices, however are well supported. Yesterday, we published a statement of the movements in Domestic during May, now, we give a statement of the movements in Spanish, during the same month:

	Havana.	Cuba.	Sagua.	Vara.	Cienfs.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship America, from Liverpool on the 23d ult., arrived at Halifax yesterday. The news from Europe is three days later. It is announced that the Spanish squadron, destined to operate against Mexico, had sailed from Cadiz with a large body of troops, but strong hopes are entertained that the negotiations now pending at Madrid will have a favorable termination. It was reported in Paris that the dispute was actually settled. The British House of Commons have voted a marriage portion of £40,000 and an allowance of £8,000 to the Princess Royal on the occasion of her marriage with the Prince of Prussia. Ministers have not encountered such a formidable opposition as was anticipated. The news by this arrival has no features of special importance.

The steamship City of Washington, from Liverpool on the 20th ult., arrived at this port last night. Her advices are of the same date as those brought by the Canadian at Quebec.

Among the Foreign appointments known to have been made are: JOSEPH A. WRIGHT, of Indiana, Minister to Berlin; HENRY C. MURPHY, of New-York, Minister to the Netherlands; ISAAC R. DILLER, of Illinois, Consul at Bremen; WM. THOMPSON, of New-York, Consul to Southampton, and GABRIEL G. FLEUROT, of New-York, Consul to Bordeaux.

The American National Council assembled at Louisville, Ky., yesterday, and transacted some preliminary business. At an informal meeting of the delegates in the morning, Hon. ERASTUS BROOKS, Hon. ANTHONY KENNEDY, Hon. JOHN J. CRITTENDEN, Hon. J. SCOTT HARRISON, Hon. R. W. THOMPSON, and Hon. AUSTIN BALDWIN, consented to address the Council during the session.

The New-Hampshire Legislature will assemble to-day. It is though: that DANIEL CLARK, of Manchester, will be chosen U. S. Senator, to succeed Mr. BELL, deceased.

The Municipal election at Canandaigua, yesterday, resulted in the success of the entire American ticket.

We publish this morning an interesting sketch of the proceedings on the occasion of the celebration at Boston of the two hundred and nineteenth anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, a brief account of which we received by telegraph and published on Tuesday morning. Letters were received and read from Lord CLARENDON and Mr. DALLAS, and speeches were made by several eminent gentlemen.

The steamship Louisiana, running between New-Orleans and Galveston, was burot in the harbor of the latter place on Saturday morning last. Eleven persons are known to have perished, and Col. BARNARDER, U. S. A., and 31 others, are reported to be missing.

Twenty-five men were, yesterday, commissioned by the Police Commissioners as a special force for the protection of Quarantine at Seguine's Point. They were placed under command of Captain WALLING, who was instructed to proceed without delay to the point designated. Comptroller FLAGG, on Monday next, will be ready to pay policemen the amount due them up to the 27th of May, by orders of the Metropolitan Commissioners. Spicy notes on this subject were exchanged, yesterday, between Mayor WOOD and President DRAPER.

The German meeting, for the purpose of giving expression to the sentiments of those who asked the Mayor to speak at Volks-Garten, last evening, did not take place. It was postponed to some evening next week.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, the Recorder of the City delivered a remarkable charge to the Grand Jury. He dwelt at length on the great increase of crime in the City, and on the inefficiency of the present partisan police. He referred, in severe terms, to the disorganized state of the Municipal Government and to the efforts which members of that Government were making to override all law. Laws, he said, must be obeyed, until they are repealed, or pronounced unconstitutional by the Courts. He called their attention to that section of the Revised Statutes which makes the conspiracy of two or more persons to defeat or obstruct the ends of justice, a misdemeanor, and very strongly hints, without saying it, at a fit subject for their presentment. He drew the attention of the Jury to the new License law, and, while seeming to reprehend some of its features, said that it must be obeyed. The consideration of the election laws gave him occasion to make some stringent remarks on the way in which elections were now influenced by organized bands of ruffians. The disgraceful condition of Essex-street Prison was also brought before the notice of the Grand Jury.

The remains of the late THEODORE BANKS President of the Corn Exchange, were conveyed yesterday from his late residence, No 51 Seventh-street, to Greenwood Cemetery. The funeral service of the Protestant Episcopal Church was performed by Rev. Dr. PRICE, although it appeared from the address delivered by the Rev. Dr., that the deceased was not of that denomination, nor, indeed, of any, but disapproving in part of all. The body was followed to the grave by a large concourse of citizens.

The Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New-York commenced their annual communication last evening at Odd Fellows' Hall. Very little was done beyond the delivery of the Grand Master's address, and the presentation of the reports of the Grand Secretary and Grand Treasurer. The communication will be continued at 10 o'clock this morning.

The Germans held their great Spring festival yesterday, at Yorkville, and had a remarkably good time. They were visited by the Mayor, Chief of Police, and other officials. His Honor addressed them in a flattering and acceptable speech, drank lager-bier at their invitation, and made himself very popular with them.

Mr. MORTON kept his force of one hundred carts and men at work yesterday in removing ashes and garbage from the twelve Wards which he has taken under his special supervision since annulling the contracts for cleaning them. A few additional streets of the First Ward were also cleaned yesterday. The work is progressing well.

A business meeting of the members of Dr. CHEEVER'S Church was held last evening. The Committee appointed at a previous meeting to propose amendments to the standing rules of the Church read a number which will be called up for action at the next annual meeting.

A majority of the Excise Commissioners addressed a letter, yesterday, to the Corporation Counsel, asking his opinion as to their duties and powers under the new law. They desire more particularly to be informed whether the Common Council or Board of Supervisors are compelled, or not, to provide them with a meeting place and order payment of their expenses.

JOHN O'BRIEN, who was stabbed in the abdomen last Sunday morning, in West, near Duane-street, died yesterday morning at the Hospital. An inquest will be held upon the body to-day.

A young man named JOHN MCLEAN, was arrested in this City yesterday, charged with being a fugitive from Beverly, Mass., where he has been indicted for the murder of one MARY NORTON, some months since.

Later news from Salt Lake states that BRIGHAM YOUNG is driving all the "Gentiles" out of the Territory. Judge STILES, the United States Marshal, the Surveyor-General and his family, and a large number of other persons, had been obliged to leave.

A dispatch from Cincinnati states that the writs of habeas corpus issued by Judge LEAVITT, to bring the United States Marshal and other prisoners to that city for trial, had been obeyed. The hearing of the case was adjourned for one week. It is thought that the prisoners will be discharged, but this will not prevent their indictment by the Grand Jury of Clark County, and their subsequent arrest.

No further trouble has occurred in Washington. From advices received yesterday, it is probable that the number of killed and wounded is not so large as represented during the excitement of the occasion; but the list is sufficiently formidable, and comprises, unfortunately, a number who were innocent of participation in the disgraceful scenes which called for the interference of the military. The election resulted generally in favor of the Democratic ticket.

The New-Orleans Municipal Election, on Monday, resulted in favor of the American ticket—no opposition being offered.

What Are We Coming to?

When in the month of December, 1851, the European steamer brought us the tidings of the overthrow of the French Republic, the universal American nation set up a chorus of mingled lamentations and self-congratulations. We were very sorry for the French people. We had not forgotten, we could not forget, the noble services they had rendered our country in the days of its infancy. The magnificent echoes of the Marseillaise had not died out of the memory of our hearts. The splendid promises of 1848 had hardly faded quite away upon the political horizon. It was hard for us to believe that of a Past so chequered indeed, yet so brilliant and so inspiring, nothing, absolutely nothing, was left. We could not choose but weep over the fallen freedom of the most civilized and the most chivalric of nations.

"Men were we, and must grieve when even the shade
Of that which was great had passed away."

Yet what else could we have expected after all? For the French with all their civilization knew little of law! They were forever oscillating between the extremes of military repression and of brutal license, between the "days of September" and the 18th of Brumaire; it was but natural then that upon the fearful barricades of June the massacres of December should follow. We might have predicted it all when we heard of armed mobs marching upon the Hotel de Ville to insist on a change in the Constitution. How could a Republic be firmly established in a country in which the first principles of Republican Liberty were so little understood?

No city of France, no city of Europe indeed, could compare with Paris, in regard to the general intelligence of its population. There, the press had for years been more free; there, public instruction had for years been more thoroughly organized than in any other capital of the Continent. Political questions had been discussed in the journals, in the colleges, in the public assemblies of Paris, with an earnestness, a brilliancy, an impassioned eloquence, a profound interest which could not be too highly rated. And yet in Paris factions could be organized, within the very bosom of the republican party itself, for the overthrow of obnoxious institutions, and for the modification of objectionable laws by force. The "final argument of kings" could there be advocated as the fitting first appeal of freemen. What wonder then that France should fall from her proud height? What wonder that her liberties should vanish away so suddenly at the voice of the usurper's cannon?

Thus we explained to France the origin of her misfortunes, while we condoled with her over their severity. We, free and fortunate Anglo-Americans, trained in the practice of liberty, could not quite suppress a thrill of natural self-satisfaction when we contrasted our state with that of our ancient allies over the sea. To us freedom was native; we were to its manner born. Frenchmen framing a Constitution appeared to us (we couldn't help it) somewhat as Germans boxing might to the "champion of England." They were meddling with matters they did not understand, and one couldn't be surprised that no good came of it.

But if our premises were right—if the ready resort to violence for the determination of political questions be indeed an indication of national unfitness for freedom, and a sure prognostic of the impending fall of free institutions, what are we to say for ourselves just at this juncture of our national history?

Two years ago it became a matter of great political interest whether the inhabitants of an American Territory, as yet unorganized, should decide for or against the incorporation of the institution of Slavery into their systems of social order. When they were assembling according to the forms of law to decide this point, a horde of their fellow-citizens from a neighboring State rushed in with fire and sword to drive from the polls all persons who proposed to vote in a sense unfavorable to the views of the intrusive army. The invaders triumphed—and the Territory was organized and brought within the area of the American Republic by force, and force alone. Put Normandy for Kansas, and Picardy for Missouri, and what should we have said of the significance of such a fact? Substitute for the names of ATCHISON and STRINGFELLOW those of BARBES and BLANQUI, and what comments should we have heard upon the impossibility of real Republicanism outside of the "Anglo-Saxon" race!

The violent conquest of Kansas became matter of Congressional investigation. In the course of the discussions to which it gave rise, pistols and bludgeons were used in the place of arguments and votes, and the country was convulsed by the tidings that such scenes were enacting in the Halls of Congress as have never disgraced any deliberative body of Frenchmen since the bayonets of the first BONAPARTE drove the Directory from their seats. Put the bludgeon of BROOKS into the hand of RANDEL, and the venerable DE BROGLIE into the seat of SUMNER, and how would our "Anglo-Saxondom" have rung from the Atlantic to the Gulf with eloquent denunciation of the untamable Gallic temper, as reckless now as in the days of old PAPIRIUS of the ivory staff and of the Senatorial beard!

If these instances of lawless brutality stood out in conspicuous isolation upon our recent annals, they would still be patents upon which no thinking man could look unmoved. But, so far is this from being the case, that we are actually growing familiar with the anarchy, which in all other times, and in all other countries, has been the sure herald of despotism. Outrages which, if they occurred in Germany or France, would be chronicled as the deleful precursors of revolution, are itemized in our journals as "riots," and forthwith dismissed from our thoughts with the "mysterious disappearances," "disgraceful transactions" and "awful conflagrations" of the week.

The insolent attempt of a petty official of a Federal Court to override the legal authority of a great State, only affords an opportunity for silly and stupid declamation against those makers of all mischief, the "Abolitionists." And the repetition in the streets of Washington, by a mob of so-called "Americans," of the proceedings which have made the name of "Border-Ruffian" historical, will not, in all probability, excite much more attention than the mysterious question of the identity of a murdered woman at Newburg, who seems to have been the female Dromio of half her sex.

Yet it will be difficult to find, in the reddest history of Red Republican France, a more sanguinary page than has just been inscribed by the Baltimore "Know-Nothings" among the records of American liberty. An organized body of men, convinced that the municipal elections of a neighboring city are likely to terminate in a way unsatisfactory to themselves, proceed to arm themselves, take the railway train, transfer themselves to the scene of the elections, and forthwith begin a furious assault upon the voters at the polls. Under the shadow of the Capitol itself, and in the streets of a city which bears the name of the impartial founder of the American Republic, these men emulate the ferocity of the poissards without their picturesqueness, and rival the inhumanity of the Septembrizens, without their excuse of ancient wrongs and inspired frenzy.

Of course this madness can only result for the moment in the utter discomfiture and condign punishment of the scoundrels who have brought this fresh disgrace upon our national character. Even Mr. PIERCE would have recognized an imperative distinction between the license of mob invasion in Kansas and the license of mob invasion in Washington. And Mr. BUCHANAN, from whom we continue to hope for justice in the graver case, is not likely to pass over the lighter one without specific action.

But the significance of the outbreak is too coherent with the meaning of many a previous incident in our recent history not to make us pause with some anxiety before it. Let our readers project this atrocious villainy upon the distant plane of France, and ponder a little what such things indicate of the Future, when they show their ugly shape along the nearer horizon of our native land.

Gen. Walker Once More.

In his speech the other night, Gen. HENNINGSEN expressed an anxiety to place his conviction upon record that WILLIAM WALKER was one of the most remarkable men of the age in which he lived. No one could expect that HENNINGSEN would mention the name of his late superior except to eulogize his genius. We shall not find fault with Gen. HENNINGSEN for maintaining that WALKER is the greatest statesman or the greatest military leader of the day, but he goes rather too far when he intimates that the American public is incapable of forming a correct opinion on the subject. The General, alluding to those who have disparaged WALKER'S military merits, says that, "if they were WASHINGTONS or NAPOLEONS they are not in possession of facts enough to enable them to judge correctly in the premises." General HENNINGSEN forgets how diligently WALKER, through his agents, circulated his own version of every incident connected with the history of this Nicaraguan war. Every circumstance that told in his favor was exaggerated and published from one end of the Union to the other. He was a demi-god, according to these accounts, and the Regenerator of Central America. The columns of his special organ, El Nicaraguense, teemed with fulsome details of his victories—real or supposed. According to this authority, he never lost a battle, and his course, as head of the Republic, was marked throughout by the most masterly displays of Statesmanship. The same story was repeated over and over again by agents interested in the filibuster cause. The story was repeated when WALKER and the remnant of his army had only to choose between starvation and Costa Rican bayonets. It was false from first to last—false in every particular. For now, after the bubble has burst, where do we find any traces of this great government of WILLIAM WALKER, except in some few towns and villages plundered and destroyed, and in the bones of three thousand American citizens rotting beneath the blazing sun of the Tropics! These are facts, and they are quite sufficient for the American people to form their own judgment of the wisdom or the folly of WALKER'S acts. They have seen him at the outset successful beyond his most sanguine hopes, and they have watched his policy from that time to the day when he was driven from the country he has so terribly misgoverned. They know that, with all his advantages, he has utterly failed in the high mission with which he was intrusted, and entailing, as that failure has done, incalculable misery and suffering upon tens of thousands, it is enough to condemn him.

We cannot imagine it possible for any sane man placed in WALKER'S position to commit more unpardonable blunders than those which have marked the career of our Nicaraguan hero. A man of Destiny, as in his egotism he loved to be called, his chief destiny seems to have been to entail upon himself and his deluded followers the odium and ridicule of the world. The pompous decrees with which he inaugurated his reign in Nicaragua stand upon the record as a bitter satire on his professions and his acts. He cannot plead a lack of opportunity in extenuation of his failure, though such a plea under any circumstances would be inadmissible. Fortune eminently favored him. He was invited to Nicaragua, and on his arrival there he was received with open arms by a large and influential party. By a startling coup de main and at the head of only fifty followers he obtained possession of Granada with scarcely the loss of a man. Peace was almost immediately established; the Serviles—his opponents—disappeared from the political arena; RIVAS was elected President, and WALKER himself, as Commander-in-Chief, was the virtual head of the Republic. By no effort of his own, Fortune favored every step that he took. The Press of the United States supported him; recruits from the Atlantic and Pacific flocked in shoals to his standard, and everything combined to strengthen his position and consolidate his power. Such were his opportunities, but mark how he used them.

By his quarrel with President RIVAS, WALKER plunged the country once more into civil war, and made bitter enemies of the party which had invited his aid. By the introduction of Slavery he showed how wide asunder were the objects of his Government and the wishes of the people. By usurping a Dictatorship, and trampling under foot the republican institutions of the country, he not only lost the support of every native Nicaraguan, but the sympathy of a large portion of the American public, who were disposed to regard his enterprise with favor. By revoking the Transit Company's charter, and confiscating its property, he excited the animosity of a powerful and implacable foe. He insulted the United States Government by sending PARKER H. FRENCH to Washington. He quarreled with GOICOURIA when he knew that GOICOURIA had it in his power to do him an irreparable injury. He insanely declared war against Costa Rica, and raised the whole of Central America in arms against him, and, to crown the blind infatuation of his career, he played the tyrant over the men who were freely shedding their life's blood in his cause. He shot them down like dogs if they murmured—in fight after fight, when all hopes of ultimate victory were lost, and his reinforcements were stopped, he wantonly sacrificed them, and dragged them from the hospital to dash them in frantic desperation against the enemy's fortifications. In the whole of his career, from the time he first entered Nicaragua until the day he was driven from Rivas, WALKER has given no evidence of possessing the most ordinary judgment. It may be said in his favor that his courage was equal to the dangers and difficulties, and his endurance to the hardships which his own folly had created. But courage is a quality which is the birthright of every Anglo-American, and we shall have degenerated indeed when its possession is considered so rare a virtue as to shield a man from the penalty due to his follies and his crimes.

In spite of the reported enthusiasm at New-Orleans—the passing excitement of a moment—we do not believe that, even among filibusters, WALKER can ever regain the confidence he has lost. His utter incapacity both as a statesman and as a military leader has been proved. He will never again find men to believe his word or rely on his integrity. If the devotion of his soldiers had been repaid with common kindness and solicitude for their welfare—if they had received any recompense for their hard-earned services—if one of the many promises held out to them had been fulfilled, Gen. WALKER might again find, among our loose population, a number sufficiently reckless to be tempted or bribed into his service. But he can have no such hope. There is a tale still to be told when the two hundred and odd men left in Rivas have returned to their homes. It is a tale of misery, disease, poverty, starvation, of hopes betrayed and humanity outraged, of murder under the guise of Discipline, and of Tyranny from which every American must shrink. We have already received instalments of these horrors, but the worst is still to be revealed. For his acts in Nicaragua WALKER stands beyond the reach of law, but he is still amenable to the tribunal of public opinion. We shall be much mistaken if from that public opinion he ever again receives comfort or support. False to Republican freedom, under the cloak of advancing which he obtained the sympathies of his countrymen; false to the Democratic party of Nicaragua, whose cause he has betrayed; false to his deluded followers, who, in thousands, left their free homes to perish by famine, by fever and by the sword, in order to advance his selfish ambition. WALKER can only expect one verdict from an American public. Nor will he receive any sympathy from those who may be disposed to sneer at morality and hold lightly the high crimes and misdemeanors with which he stands charged. Even filibusters will refuse to follow a man who, with the loftiest pretensions, has shown an utter incapacity to carry out any one of the many projects upon which he has embarked.

Costa Rican and Nicaraguan Difficulties.

We publish this morning a letter which defines very minutely the position of Commodore VANDERBILT in relation to Costa Rica. The connection of Mr. VANDERBILT with the great lines of ocean steamers between Europe, California and New-York, makes him, in more senses than one, a public character, and his conduct and intentions a fair subject of inquiry and comment. Public opinion, and the positive assertions of many persons who have professed an intimate acquaintance with the affairs of Costa Rica, have assigned to him a prominent position as the aid and ally of that Republic and of Nicaragua, in their efforts to throw off the yoke of filibuster despotism. The fact that Mr. GARRISON, formerly the agent of the Accessory Transit Company in California, has been the recognized purchaser and manager, in conjunction with Mr. MORGAN, of the Nicaragua filibuster steamship line, was broken up, and the popular and well-grounded belief that large sums of money have been expended by him, or under his direction, to sustain the armed immigrant invasion of Central America, has given a decided color of probability to the charges against his opponent and rival in business, the "Commodore." If that gentleman has had the prudence to refrain from all interference in the war, as a representative of the Accessory Transit Company, there is hardly a doubt that the rights of that Company, if it has rights, will take precedence of any claims which may be set up by the grantees of the Walker-Rivas Government, who have been engaged in making war upon the Central Americans.

The intended visit of General WALKER to Washington is probably with a view to enforce the negotiation of the Walker-Rivas grant of the Transit Line, held by Messrs. GARRISON and MORGAN, against any grant which may hereafter be made by the united Republics of Central America. The Walker government, after abrogating the old charter of the Accessory Transit Company, seized all their steamers and other property in Nicaragua, and transferred them to Messrs. RANDOLPH, GARRISON and MORGAN, who agreed to transport filibusters and munitions of war in part payment for the grant. WALKER must satisfy the Administration that this confiscation and grant made under his direction, were both just and necessary, and in strict accordance with the terms of the Accessory Company's charter. After establishing these points he must prove that the subsequent abrogation of his own grant by the same President RIVAS, was in violation of law and right, and that the Government of Nicaragua had no power to annul it. After this he must prove that Costa Rica and Nicaragua are not at present the rightful possessors of the boats and other property which they took from the filibusters (Messrs. WALKER, GARRISON and MORGAN) while they were being used to convey troops and munitions of war to carry on aggressive operations against all the Central American States.

After these points are granted and established, he must next get leave from the Administration to make private war upon Costa Rica and Nicaragua for the recovery of these boats and the reopening of the Transit line by filibusters at the point of the bayonet. That the present Administration will feel disposed to engage in war with Central America, for the restoration of the Transit Line and the steamers to Messrs. GARRISON and MORGAN and WALKER, there is no reason to believe, more especially as Costa Rica and Nicaragua are making arrangements to reopen the Transit with American capital and under the immediate protection of our own Government. Costa Rica and Nicaragua stand ready, and will soon offer to make a special treaty with the Government of the United States for the protection of the Transit, and will guarantee all well-established rights and charters made to citizens of the United States; but this treaty must rest upon an equitable basis, and will provide equally for the rights of all the three nations upon the basis of non-intervention and suppression of piracy in every form. Great Britain would undoubtedly favor such a treaty, and would willingly become a party to it; but the national jealousy of our people will make it prudent for her to remain as much as possible in the background, and claim only for her own subjects the same rights that are accorded to citizens of the United States. Efforts will be made by the leaders of filibusterism to persuade the Administration that a large and influential party in Nicaragua desire their return, and wish to have the Government of WALKER reëstablished. That a disaffected faction does exist in Nicaragua there is not the least doubt. This party is composed of persons who latterly united their fortunes with those of WALKER, and are consequently regarded as tories and traitors by their own countrymen. They are generally persons who have a large admixture of negro blood, some of them West Indians and other foreigners, who settled and acquired property in Central America.

The New-York Custom-House.

The Philadelphia Evening Journal continues to distress itself and its readers about frauds which it imagines are committed by Custom-House officials at this port, in a manner which must be marvelously distressing at this season of the year. The text, chapter and verse of its latest denunciation is, we regret to say—Whisky. This may account both for the extreme intemperance of the attack of our cotemporary, and also for the confusion of his ideas upon the subject he is discoursing about. The premises, as we understand the Journal, are that some merchant in Scotland had recently invoiced his whisky to New-York, 9d. sterling a gallon lower than to Philadelphia. Whether this was because of a change in price in the Scottish market; or because one sort of whisky was of inferior quality to the other; or that the consigner imagined the pockets of his Philadelphia friends to be deeper than those of his agents in New-York, we do not profess to know; but the conclusion is inevitable, viz., that the merchants of Philadelphia are immaculately honest, while those of New-York are, one and all, double-dyed in the wool perjurers and smugglers!

We would once more respectfully request our friends in Philadelphia, before they again give vent to bile in this direction, to be prepared with real, and not imaginary facts, with which to sustain their outpourings. It is all very well for an anonymous correspondent, under an irresponsible signature, to tell what he thinks he knows; but, until the when, where and how, are explicitly pointed out—(why should they be concealed?)—the Journal cannot expect to see accusations credited, or met otherwise than by a flat denial, which are so flimsily vouched for. The allegation that merchandises forwarded to New-York are sometimes invoiced abroad at their net cost to manufacturers, may be true or false, as it happens. What then? The consigner, before sending them to this country, is in that case compelled to burden his soul with the heavy crime of perjury, as he is compelled to swear that the prices of the goods are put down, not at the net cost, but at the market value at the time of shipment. Even then the chances are ten to one that the fraud is detected and the goods seized. We have had occasion to say before that there is no port in the country where the appraisers are stricter and more upright than they are here. Smuggling may take place any where in spite of every precaution, but the means used to prevent it by the Collector and his employees are of the most stringent and imperative character. So far from the passage of goods through the Custom-House being unusually facilitated here, as the Journal alleges, it is unfortunately the case that the late Secretary of the Treasury burdened this port with restrictions which cause an even unnecessary and inconvenient delay to the importer before his property can be delivered into his hands.

One statement which has been made by our irascibly jealous friends in the city of charity and universal good will, we beg leave most unambiguously and emphatically to contradict. It is that merchants are permitted to employ brokers or "entry clerks" (!) to pay their goods and swear to the entries. Only when a merchant is absent from the country, are his agents who remain behind permitted to receive his importations in the character of consignees; but, even then, the latter are compelled to give bonds to produce the future oath of the owner of the goods, so that this is always ultimately obtained. The rigmarole of the Journal upon this point, is all drawn from very delusive sources. A little examination in a healthier and less feverish state of mind, will convince that paper that we are not quite so black as we have been represented; that the same laws which apply to Philadelphia, are in full force here: and, if they are sometimes encroached upon, no greater favor can be shown us than to point out exactly when and where it has been done. We have never heard that Collector REDFIELD has deserved to be assailed, either on the score of personal or political malfeasance or neglect. He is every day at his desk, and performs his duties with untiring energy and assiduity. The Deputies who surround him, and large numbers of the most responsible clerks, are not novices, but old and tried officials, who, for long years, have deserved and received the applause of our merchants and of the Treasury Department at Washington. The newly-appointed Mr. SCHELL is a high-minded man, whose integrity has never been doubted. After the 1st of July he will have entered upon the duties of his office, and we can safely promise that, either now or hereafter, under the rule that is, or that which will be, all specific charges will be thankfully listened to, and every proved abuse be remedied. Until, however, something stronger than bilious surmise turns up, we counsel our neighbors to prosper as they may, in spite of the freezing up of the Delaware in Winter, and to hold their peace. If time should hang heavy on their hands, the contrivance of a decent device, instead of the wretched one with which they have adorned the new penny, may prove a source of recreation.

Personal.

Mr. H. F. GARDNER has accepted the proposition made by the Boston Courier, to pay $500 to any spiritual medium who will communicate a single word imparted to the spirits, who will read a single word in English, written inside a book or sheet of paper; who will tilt a piano without touching it, or cause a chair to move a foot.

Hon. ROBERT RANTOUL paid a visit to the Massachusetts Legislature last week, and received the congratulations of many friends. The venerable gentleman was twenty four times elected to represent the people in the State Legislature, in both branches, and is the oldest living member of the Legislature. He is in his seventy-ninth year.

Among the noted Clergymen in attendance upon the Anniversaries in Boston, were Rev. DUDLEY A. TYNG, of Philadelphia; Rev. Drs. GEORGE B. CHEEVER, HENRY W. BELLOWS, and E. H. CHAPIN, of New-York; Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER and Rev. Dr. BETHUNE, of Brooklyn.

Col. DUEYEA, of the National Guard has lost, in the suit brought against the Guard by Mrs. CASTLE, for damages for the death of her child and injuries to herself, occasioned by a stray shot during a parade at Kingston in 1855. The Jury gave Mrs. CASTLE $1,500.

There is still another mysterious disappearance up the river—a young lady named TUTTLE, who has been missing from her home in Ashland, Greene County, for a fortnight. On Saturday, fifty men were in search of her.

Mr. GEORGE PEABODY has returned to Massachusetts from his Southern and Western tour. He will return to Europe, probably about the middle of August.

J. M. STEVENSON, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in New-Albany, Ind., has accepted the Secretaryship of the American Tract Society.

Dr. BIEGLER, the Buffalo culprit, has been put on duty in the Auburn Prison Hospital. It is said that he paid his lawyers $2,400.

OLE BULL is meeting with much success in his tour east of Boston.

The Sandy Hill Herald relates that a gentleman residing in the town of Granville, Washington County, died recently, and willed his wife a handsome sum—stipulating in his will that in case she again married the sum was to be doubled!

Mrs. EMERSON, the strong-minded woman, who came near being lynched, in South Carolina, has appeared in Virginia, where she is not lynched.

Obituary.

JOSEPH BRENAN, one of the Editors of the New-Orleans Daily Times, died last week, at the age of 29. He was formerly connected with the newspaper press in this City, and afterwards with the New-Orleans Delta. Mr. BRENAN was born in the north of Ireland, in 1828, educated in Cork, and joining in the ultra-republican movement headed by JOHN MITCHEL in 1848, brought so much ability to it as to recommend him to the watchfulness of the Government. He was compelled to flee, and at the close of 1849 arrived in New-York.

Mr. Marshall's Benefit.

The complimentary benefit to Mr. MARSHALL, of the Broadway Theatre, takes place to-night at the Academy of Music, and the merits of the occasion certainly call for a generous response. The programme offered is one of rare excellence. A dramatic performance by first-rate artists, an entire performance of the opera of "Trovatore," by MAX MARETZEK'S unrivalled troupe, with GAZZANIGA, PHILLIPS, BRIGNOLI, ANDREWS, &c., in the leading rôles; and a vaudeville performance by the best members of the French Vaudeville Company, of New-Orleans. These are the inducements which Mr. MARSHALL holds out, in addition to his other claims, which we are certain will not be forgotten on this occasion.

ARREST OF A FUGITIVE CHARGED WITH MURDER.—A young man named JOHN MCLEAN was arrested in Courtlandt-street yesterday by Officer ROSE of the Third-Ward. MCLEAN, it appears, is charged with the murder of HENRY NORTON in Webster, Mass., some time since. It is said that he was not long since tried on the same charge and acquitted, whereupon he left the State. But other facts having been since brought to light, the matter was brought up in a new phase, and MCLEAN again indicted. The accused was locked up to await a requisition from the Governor of Massachusetts.

Interesting to Lawyers and their Clients.

The Circuit Court Calendar will be taken up in Brooklyn to-day immediately after the impanelling of the Grand Jury, in the Governor's Room, City Hall, by Judge BIRDSEYE.

Judge SMITH, of the Seventh Judicial District, will hold a Special Term in the County Court Room. On Thursday there will be held Circuit Court in Session, when 40 causes will be called. Judge BIRDSEYE seems determined to clear the Calendar this Term.

Marine Matters.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Thursday, April 23.

We have to inform you that the bark Milford is progressing in her discharging, and from what we can observe a good part of her cargo is damaged. She has the appearance of being much strained. The ship Antonetta sailed for the Chincha Islands yesterday. The ship Hound is all ready for sea, but is detained for want of men to complete her crew. The ship Sea Ranger, from Boston for Valparaiso, arrived here in distress. Four days out from Boston, and when on the southern edge of the Gulf Stream she encountered very heavy weather and sprung her fore and main-mast, bowsprit, lost fore and maintop-gallant masts and jibboom, lost five topsails, jib and flying jib; the cargo also shifted during the gale, but the hull of the ship is no way damaged.

By letter to Elwood Walter, Esq.

ST. THOMAS, Monday, May 11.

The brigantine Australia, of Wiscasset, Captain BABCOCK, from Rio Grande, bound to Falmouth, with a cargo of hides and horns, arrived here yesterday, with loss of sails, &c., and in want of provisions; had been out 70 days, and experienced very heavy weather. Will be repaired in the course of eight or ten days.

Obstruction in Broad-street.

We are a great people and we do very many queer acts—we widen streets where there is n't any very pressing necessity, and we no sooner get them widened than we do our best endeavors to obstruct them in every possible and preposterous manner.

Front, Water and Pearl streets, the paradise of groceries and dirt, we had long ago given up as utterly impassable by pedestrians whose lives were not fully insured, but Broad-street we still had hopes for, until of late. Some five or six "big dealers" have now located there, and constructed wharves, positively wharves, in front of their stores, whereunto they incessantly moor horses and carts, which they load with various merchandise, so that the humble footman must either fall into the Scylla of being "squashed" by a rolling hogshead, or be drowned in the slimy marsh of Charybdis outside the gutter.

At present I should advise any man who has a wife and family, and whose life is not insured, desiring to reach the Battery from the Custom House, to take a Wall street stage, a Brooklyn ferry boat, arriving in the "City of Churches," to navigate to Atlantic street and thence return by South Ferry to the haven whither he would be.

This is the safest plan for any one who objects as much to a post mortem by Coroner GOSLEE as does

Respectfully yours,

A TIMID INDIVIDUAL.

QUARANTINE MATTERS

A VISIT TO SEGUINE'S POINT.

Staten Island Sentiment—What the Oystermen Object to—How a Few are Designed, and What All Dread—A Panic, and Large Tracts for Sale—The New Boundary Line.

The police force of twenty-five men were ordered to accompany the workmen to Seguine's Point last evening. Possibly the orders were obeyed, though the men showed some reluctance on account of the incomplete arrangements of the Commissary's department. They evidently do not relish carrying each one his own bed and blankets, tin pot and cooking utensils—for cook they must, and "take their turn about" at that, if they get anything to eat in the enemy's country. And then they will have to spend some time in putting up a shanty, where all will bunk in together. Convenient tents, or marquees, would be much more comfortable, our Metropolitan policeman say.

A VISIT TO STATEN ISLAND.

The Quarantine Commissioners, backed by the authority of the State, have determined to put the temporary hospital at Seguine's Point. The people of that portion of Staten Island which comes to a point on the east side of Prince's Bay, and (from the old farm which once claimed it among its possessions is called Seguine's) backed by nobody knows how many people, and the authority of flaming firebrands, have determined that their coast shall not be the site of a fever hospital, either temporary or permanent. This question was settled some two months ago, but wouldn't stay settled over 48 hours. And to day, though both parties are equally determined, it is as much a question as ever, whether Seguine's Point will or will not be the site of a fever hospital. Hearing that there had been more burning at the hands of incendiaries, that a bridge on the road, leading to the Point, had been broken down to prevent access to it, and, moreover, that the Commissioners were preparing to land the materials for the construction of the shanties, under the guard of a strong Police force—we, that is to say, a reporter of the Times, on Monday, went down to scour the Island, and in the course of a couple of days and a night, to discover how Staten Island sentiment bore upon the enterprise. Part of our task was very handsomely accomplished. The scouring was done by a heavy rain that poured down from the clouds, as if what little they contained were suddenly set at liberty. I flooded the roads, swelled the little ditches into rivers, made lakes of the ponds, mud of all the soil, and a nasty day generally of Monday. Nor was Staten Island sentiment any less abundant than the rain. That we might not miss Seguine's Point, as the current scandal says that our honored Governor did, only from the windows of a tight carriage, we surrounded the Island, taking the boat through the Kill Van Kull, and the Sound, to Rossville, and thence by open carriage through Tottenville, and many winding roads to the Point.

We were surprised to see what a population was packed away on this southwestern corner of the Island. Instead of a country unpossessed and uninhabited, as one might judge from reading the accounts that have been published concerning this quarter, the roads seemed to be long continued villages. The people are mostly oystermen, and well to do at that. Their houses are small, comfortable cottages, lacking nothing in tastefulness, lacking no rural charm. Porticos, pillars, stoops, almost every cottage boasted one or more. Vines clambered up the pillars and wreathed over the balustrades. Roses and honeysuckles, the latter in full bloom, though for roses it was rather early, made them look like the houses that we read of in the weekly paper stories. Each cottage had its garden. Sometimes a lot of pasture ground beside, with a small barn. It was surprising to see how thick the signs were—"this property for sale." As sure as we came upon a house a little more pretentious than the rest, with more green sward about it and ornamented outhouses, we were sure to see that sign up. Indeed, it was as common all through the oyster villages as "all persons are forbid to trespass on these premises" is in the vicinity of Clifton. The prices held for such little homesteads is remarkably low, compared with the prices they have been held at heretofore: the whole town seemed to be panic struck. They look upon their homes that have been so happy as doomed to yellow fever bar ceferrin, and if there is anybody fool enough to pay their price they want to pull up stakes and be off.

We reached Seguine's Point by turning from the main road and traveling southwestwardly something like a mile.

SEGUINE'S POINT.

Seguine's Point lies about half way between Ward's Point, which is the southwesternmost point of the Island, and the Great Kills. The sheet of water which divides Staten Island on this side from New-Jersey is known as Raritan Bay. Prince's Bay, made famous by its oysters, is nothing but a cove, lying between Seguine's Point and Ward's Point. Directly opposite Seguine's Point, to the south, is Keyport. The shore from Seguine's Point to Great Kills forms the base line of several large and beautiful farms, which reach from the shore to the main road. From Great Kills northeastward, almost to Port Richmond, there is more than a mile's breadth of marsh and low land. There are a few farm houses scattered along it. There are some cedar groves, but mere of it is covered with marshes, rendering it unfit for population. Great Kills Point has been suggested by some as a proper place for the temporary fever hospital. It is nearer to the City than Seguine's Point, but probably would have been much less objectionable to the Staten Island people as a hospital site, because, except to the farmers, its location there would be a nuisance to nobody. There are no oysters planted as far to the eastward as this, and the whole vicinity is a comparatively uninhabited track. The humanity, however, of putting fever patients upon such a little mosquito bar, but a few feet above the level of the ocean on the one side, and miles of marsh on the other, would better not be dilated on. When Seguine's Point was bought by the State under the Quarantine act, the only buildings that came into their possession were the farm-house and out-house belonging to the Wolfe farm. These, it will be remembered, were consumed by fire some three weeks since. One who is in authority, said jocosely the other day as he looked at the ice-house and part of an old barn that was still standing, that the Commissioners needn't be in such haste to put up their shanties—they could use the ice-house for the present. It was a strange coincidence that that very night the old barn and ice house caught fire from heaven or somewhere else, and nothing now is left of them but the cellar of the ice-house and a couple of singed patches of ground. On the same occasion it was remarked by the same gentleman, that if the Commissioners intended to do anything this season they had better have the teams out and get to carting the stuff for shanties. Now all the roads that lead to the shore from the main road for a long way about are the private property of the owners of the farms. That night, by another curious coincidence, the bridge that forms a part of the road through the Wolfe farm to the shore was torn up and the private roads of disaffected neighbors were the only ones left for the easy carting over.

Looking north from this point, one doesn't see anything of the thickly settled village. In the distance is a village or two, the six gabled one of MAX MARETZEK'S establishment above the rest. He would conclude that the farms which are bounded by the Bay run back indefinitely, and very naturally suppose, that if the farmers for half a mile on each side had no complaint to make, it would scarcely be decent for any of the rest of the world to object to whatever end the world, or the State, might choose to make of the Point. But a glance at the Bay itself would discover the error of this conclusion. The whole face of it is studded with oyster stakes, which by their ranges mark out the plots or beds of oysters. Many schooners and sloops lie at anchor here, and the shore is sprinkled with small boats in which the oystermen take up the bivalves. Of course there was nothing of this going on in a rainy day, but the small boats on the beach and riding at anchor showed that a big business at it is done in the season.

We were happy in finding plenty of people about willing to post us on the state of affairs. One who bore in his face the evidences that he was one of the earliest works of God—an honest man—sat down to talk it over with us. We remarked that on our ride around the Island, we had passed seven Churches, showing a population we were not prepared for; "Yes," said he, "and there is a Churchyard to each of them—not very large at present, but likely to be filled, we really fear, at this rate."

AN OYSTERMAN'S SENTIMENT.

The oysterman bit off another piece of tobacco, and remarked: "It don't seem to me that it's hardly anything for you Yorkers to do; and I don't believe you'd do it if you knew the mischief you are making. If you put the buoys down where they say you're going to—if you anchor all your infected vessels off the Point, how do you s'pose we're going to escape Yellow Jack? One of my neighbors brought down Dr. HARRIS' report the other day. We sat down in the store yesterday, and looked it over. Now, according to that, the most dangerous thing in the world is to be working in the water anywhere near your infected ships."

"You do not imagine," we asked, "that the water is so obscured, do you?"

"No, not that, but there are the beds and the stuff thrown over drifting past us all the time. There's scarcely a day with us in the Summer but what the wind draws in from the ocean, giving us a southwesterly breeze. Now, that drift is everything from your anchorage grouped right down upon us. The tide runs in very strong past Seguine's Point, and when it turns, it never can carry out the stuff that floats in. But our men have got to be in the water or on it all day. If there is any truth in Dr. HARRIS' report, every soul of us will have the fever before the first ship has been anchored a week there. This stuff thrown overboard from the ships will drift up through the Kill, and I don't see how anybody on the Staten Island or the Jersey side will be free."

"Well," said we, "that sounds bad, and it would be bad for you, but you haven't so many people about here as there are about the present Quarantine; and they have never suffered much there."

"True," said he; "but you remember that the present Quarantine is on the very upper part of Staten Island, and the wind drawing right across the Point has a sweep of several miles before it strikes Jersey. Here, within three miles, and exactly leeward of Seguine's Point, are some four thousand people. A little beyond that line, there's Amboy, not so much of a city as York is, it is true, but it was a city before York was; and if there is anything in catching fever, they wouldn't have it long there before you would catch it in York.

"Bur, that ain't all; our families live a mile from the Point, say; but we are here on the Point, and in the cove, and exposed to everything that comes drifting up from the ships. Of course we go to our homes and infect them; and you mustn't think that because we are twelve or fifteen miles from York, that there is no going between our place and yours. Sloops as we are able to work our boys must be running up in their schooners every day, with their oysters."

This was a new point to us, and we confessed it.

"Yes, I'll venture," said he, "you couldn't find anywhere, out of four thousand people who live out of the City, so many whose business drives them to town as often. Our boys must come right from the water where the infected bedding is all around them, and sail their boats right up to Washington Market, where everybody in town must come once a day at least. If I'm taken sick, my boy, who is nursing me, must go right into the thickest of you folks the same day, or else our business is spoiled. The fact is, you've got to put all the oystermen under Quarantine the day you throw the first bedding over from an infected ship, or, you might just as well take the bedding right to town at once. If one of the rich men who lives in a villa up towards Clifton gets the fever, he will stay at home, and his family will shut themselves in, and there is no danger to the neighbors. But lay an oysterman on his back with yellow fever, and the whole body of us have got to be by, which could run us, or carry the fever right up to town. I is the foolishest thing Quarantine Commissioners could possibly do.

"But," said he, "supposing, what would be very strange, according to Dr. HARRIS' book—supposing there wasn't a man in Prince's Bay who catches the fever,—what do you suppose our oysters are worth to us on days after your newspapers have notified the City that Dr. THOMPSON has sent an infected ship down to the anchorage?"

"Why, what is the estimated value of the oysters planted here now?" we asked.

"Oh," said he, "there's no telling; I don't doubt there's half a million dollars worth of oysters planted in Prince's Bay, and up the Kills, to-day. You understand," said he, "that all the oysters you get through the Summer, from Prince's Bay, are really Virginia oysters. Up the Sound, they have native oysters, but they are not of much account. The most that we have are brought from Maryland and Virginia in the Spring, and planted here when they are small. In our water, which is rather fresher than their native water, they got larger fast. In the Summer, or even in the Spring, we begin to take up those that we planted a year ago, to carry into market. The native oyster begins to spawn by the first of May, but all spawn later, if they have been disturbed; and so by always picking our beds, we can always give you an article in good condition any time o year."

We asked if he took them directly to the City from the beds here?

"No; we only plant, of course in the black mud. Now, if you take on oyster right out of the mud, he looks muddy and gritty and you don't like him. So when we take them from the mud we drop them into the mouths of our little crocks—just where your infected bedding will be sure to lodge,—and let them lie for two or three days, by which time they have got washed of the mud and grit. [The oysterman did not say what we suspect is true, that lying there in perfectly fresh water, the oyster is not only washed of his mud, but of some of his vitality, and so comes to market not only clean, but plump and fat to the eye, but really bloated, from his brief exposure to water that he cannot live many days in.] "Now," said he, "I don't pretend to know whether the yellow fever poison scattered through the water would poison the oyster—I don't believe it would. But just suppose that your newspapers should say, some day next July, after telling that Alderman Stuffy had died of cholera morbus, that the Alderman ate, about a month before he died, Princes Bay oysters on the half shell; what do you suppose our business is worth then? Why, two year ago, just such a case happened. A man was said to have eaten some oysters a week or two before he died, and there was a panic right off. You had chemists examining the oysters, and Coroners sitting on them, and doctors denouncing them, and the newspapers pitching into them. You could not give away the best oysters ever raised. And it would be just so now. The first time you happened to say 'oysters' about a man who swilled himself to death after they have raised the yellow flag on the anchorage ground, there would be another panic; and the $2,000 worth I have got buried between them stakes wouldn't be worth a pair of old breeches to me. Do you wonder," said he, "that the oystermen are down on your new Quarantine?"

THE INFECTED ANCHORAGE.

The anchorage ground which is to be marked by buoys, and on which the infected fleet is to ride, is not directly in front of Seguine's Point, but some two miles to the eastward, its western limit being nearly opposite the Great Kills Point. Its southern line, of course, will be exactly on the boundary between New-Jersey and Staten Island. Now New-York has exclusive jurisdiction for Quarantine purpose over the whole of Staten Island Sound on the west of the Island—over all the waters, indeed, between Staten Island and New-Jersey, until we reach Perth Amboy. But from the longitude of Prince's Bay eastward the line of each State's jurisdiction is the line midway between the shores throughout the whole of Raritan and the Lower Bay, and New-Jersey claims that this line is to be measured half way from a line drawn from Point Comfort to the northern end of Sandy Hook. If New York grants this it carries the boundary line so far north that in the whole of the anchorage ground that the buoys are to mark out, there will not be room for more than three first-class ships to ride at anchor at one time.

WHAT A PILOT PROPHESIES.

"No, Sir," said a sharp pilot with whom we talked the matter over; "three ships might anchor there together, but no more. There isn't water enough on the York side, and if they go an inch over the Jersey line, Jersey is sworn to seize them." We suggested that Jersey must be anxious to catch the yellow fever, if she committed the folly of seizing a shipload of it while lying at anchor in the Bay.

"Very good," said he, "but under the lee of Sandy Hook she could make a much better disposition of an infected ship than to let her lie with the infection drifting with every breeze over her most populous towns"—showing that in his opinion, on an emergency, Jersey would herself make of Sandy Hook the very post place which she refused to let us make of it for her. "Not," said the pilot, "that there is not water enough in the whole of this anchorage for more than three ships, but that is all the room there is where the anchorage is good. Get down Mr. BLUNT'S chart, made years ago, before there was any muss about Quarantine, and see within the anchorage lines how little of it is marked soft black, or blue mud," and one of them it must be for an anchor to hold in a stiff southeasterly blow. Off to the north-east there is water enough, but the bottom is hard sand. The anchor would drag over it like a sled on a snow bank. Let Dr. THOMPSON send down twenty vessels from the boarding station, to anchor here, and if the wind comes out stiff once, unless they get over the Jersey line, you may calculate that seventeen of them will be beached. Mind that, Sir, and keep your marine reporters around!"

We asked how the wind was generally through the Summer in this part of the Bay.

"Blowing right on shore from the south-east," said he, "carrying the infection right up to Bolton and Tottensville and Rossville and Perth Amboy."

"And the tide?" we asked.

"It sets ie like a mill tail past Seguine's Point. By the way," said he, "you can make any kind of a dock hold there but a solid one. Put up anything else and it will wash away, the first blow. But put up a solid one, and every man on the south side of Staten Island will tell you what will come of it; it will set the tide up, like a hundred Irishmen with their spades, just below the wharf—and in less than two months the whole of that point where the big candle factory stands will be out off it to an island, or washed away. Let any farmer ask the Legislature for permission to put out a wharf, and you will see his next neighbor up to Albany by the next boat to stop him; for he knows, if he don't, the sea will carry off the whole front of his farm."

"But about the drift from the infected vessels—won't that run out to sea on the retreating tide?"

"No," said he: "the flood tide will drive it up into those arms of the sea, Raritan River and the Kills. While the ebb will fetch it down into the cove of Keyport, Prince's Bay and the Great Kills."

"Then, how much worse," we said, "it must have been on the present Quarantine ground."

"Not a bit of it," said he. "The flood would carry some up to Gowanus, but the ebb sweeps down there from the North River so much stronger that almost everything was carried right out to sea. They had ten chances to escape such stuff along the Narrows where we'll have one, but you see what mischief the little that lodged there did them and to your City."

THE BOUNDARY BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND NEW-JERSEY.

Our friend had not heard the latest news, to wit: that the boundary line between New-Jersey and New-York has been fixed—established; and that is no straight line at all, but a zig zag, or series of straight lines, which are defined by the Commissioners in the following manner: A line drawn north and south between Prince's Bay light-house and Matagan Point of New Jersey gives a base line, the precise point half way between the two shores being the point from which the dividing line proceeds eastward: the outside coast boundaries are determined by drawing straight lines from one headland to the other, which, on the New-Jersey side, runs as follows: From Matagan Point due east to the mouth of a creek, leaving most of Keyport Bay to the south; from Konaskunk Point to the middle of the bend midway between it and Point Comfort; and thence in a straight line to the latter point; from Point Comfort about southeast along the shore of the Highlands of Navesink by a line which would pass out to sea a little to the northward of the old Shrewsbury Inlet. Upon the Staten Island shore lines are drawn in the same manner from the light house to Seguine's Point, and thence along the shore from one headland to the other to a point near New Creek, from which a line run due east would strike the southern shore of Cooey Island. This last line describes the southern boundary of the exclusive jurisdiction of New York, and a zigzag line run equi-distant between these shore boundaries, east, a little northerly, is the boundary line between Staten Island, New-Jersey, and of Raritan Bay to the open sea—Sandy Hook, being construed upon the chart as an island, is not measured from as a headland of New-Jersey; such a mode of determining the jurisdiction in question would give to New-Jersey the monopoly of all the deepest water in the bay. This improved construction will give us an infinitely better anchorage-ground than the Staten Islandors had calculated on.

Coming up the bay from our cruise yesterday, we saw the much talked-of buoys lying on the old Quarantine dock; each was a spar some 45 feet long, one-half painted black, the other Quarantine-yellow. For each an immense rock lies by it to be used as its anchor, with a hole drilled through it, to which it will be fastened by a chain. It will be interesting to watch these yellow-tipped buoys, and note just where they are anchored. We hope they will not prove a casus belli to our next neighbor on the west.

SOME FAVOR THE NEW PROJECT.

Staten Islanders are distinctly divided into three sets of people. First, the oystermen living along the main roads and doing business, of course, in the bays and rivers. Second, the farmers occupying lands that stretch from the main road to the coast. Third, the people who do business in New-York, and live in villas within a few miles ride of the metropolis. The oystermen, as one man, are down upon the new Quarantine arrangements, insisting that it is the destruction of their business and the peril of their lives. The villagers are scarcely more affected by the new arrangements than by the old, as Seguine's Point is not, indeed, so near them as Tompkinsville. It is only with the hope that the centre of infection may be removed entirely from their Island, that they agitate for or against Seguine's Point. The farmers on the south side, of course, object as a general thing to having their water fronts changed from wholesome bathing-places into depôts for infected bedding, or beaches for infected vessels to be wrecked on. There are not wanting one or two however, in the immediate vicinity of Seguine's Point, who are resigned to the new order of things. They believe that the argumente of the Commissioners, that their farms, which they have only valued at $100 the acre, when cut into City lots, will fetch fabulous prices. That instead of rye and grass at a slow sale and a scant market, they can raise vegetables and fruit for an abundant market, at and about the new hospital. Quarantine, they see, made a village at Tompkinsville, and why shouldn't it to the south and eastward of Lemon Creek? Feeling thus about it, they say that the State has made up its mind, and having authority, men are fools who fight against it; and although the wind does not blow the way they wished it, they are willing to take the tide which leads on to fortune.

ARE THE OYSTERMEN SQUATTERS?

There was a story told, and we have published it once or twice, about the conflicting interests of the squatters and the farmers along the south shore. It was said that the oystermen were substantially squatters upon lands under water that the farmers own. It was said that Mr. WOLFE, of whom the State bought, had a sloop—a cat boatful—of oysters dropped into the water in front of his house; but when he went to take them up the oystermen pitched into his man SAM, and told him he was trespassing upon their rights. The neighbors say—the oystermen—that they had never heard of it; and yet it was not very unlikely. The farmers say that their southern boundary is not low water-mark, but the bank; that under an old patent somebody claims, and still collects a nominal rent for all the lands under water lying hereabout; therefore that Mr. WOLFE'S title was no better than "Porgie Joe's;" that the stakes marked out every man's oyster-plot, within which no other man had a right to plant. Moreover, that from courtesy, if a farmer offered to pay for oysters taken from the front of his farm, no oysterman yet was ever so hard up as to take the money, while he never failed to let the oysters go with perfect freedom.

But to determine the boundary of this State farm on the South, we have hunted up the old deeds which describe the property. One of these deeds bears date the 27th day of August, in the fourteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, GEORGE the Third, (1774,) by the grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. Between GEORGE GARRISON, of the County of Richmond and Colony of New-York, farmer, and MARY his wife of the one part, and HENRY BUTLER, of the aforesaid county and colony, farmer, of the other part; witness, &c. This deed describes the property as part of a tract, farm or plantation that was granted by patent to LEONARD LEWIS by BENJAMIN FLETCHER, then Governor of New-York, the 17th day of June Anno Domini, 1697. In describing this farm (of 132 acres, more or less,) the bay is mentioned as the southern boundary, no allusion whatever being made to any right to the adjoining lands under water. Conveyances of the same property were made in 1818, 1819, 1822, 1829 and 1838.

The oystermen of Princes' Bay have been accustomed to sell and convey from one to the other quit claims to patches under water for planting oysters, which deeds have been generally acknowledged before a Justice, but there is no record in the County Clerk's Office of any of these deeds.

WHO BURNED THE BUILDINGS AT SEGUINE'S POINT?

We asked the question a good many times, but we didn't find an answer. The farmers said it must have been the boys, and wondered who would get the Governor's $3,500 reward. The oystermen couldn't really tell whether the Keyporters came over and did it or not. They had understood that the DAILY TIMES' proprietors had offered $5,000 reward. They hoped the TIMES would have to pay it, and they really hoped some Jerseyman would hang for the arson. They were law-keepers themselves, they believed in law.

We asked if they thought the shantiee would ever be built?

They hardly thought they would. There was something in the air that incapacitated a shanty to stand there. They thought if they were put up, say to day, that to-night they would vanish into a thick blue smoke, and very soon after into thin air.

"But," we asked, "what if there is a large police force around?"

Their impression was that they would stand longer then,—perhaps until the State got tired of paying the bills of policemen detailed for the purpose of bolstering them up. The old barn used to be a distillery where the Schiedam Schnapps were—stored after importation. There was something schnappy in the air ever since. They didn't believe even an ice-house would stand.

Of course there is a good deal of scandal talked on the Island, but more on the north than the south side. Indeed, about Rossville the people talked a good deal louder, and more as citizens would talk, than the Lemon Creek and Blooming View people. At the first place, which is farthest off, they said they did'nt care who heard them, the thing was an outrage anyhow. The swearing men said it was an outrage, with a strong expletive before it. Others simply said it was an infamous outrage, and whoever chose to sit still and bear it, they should'nt. The south-side people thought it was hard, and argued the case, but nobody anywhere threatened anything. We asked how they would treat the Commissioners if they came down. The north side people said they would like to see them try it. The south-side people said they would like to give them a piece of their mind.

For instance, we asked, "How would you treat Mayor HALL?" "Well, Sir, we should ask him why they didn't take Coney Island?—why they didn't go at New Jersey as a man always does when he asks a favor, instead of getting the New-York papers to bully New-Jersey, until any fool might have known that they couldn't get Sandy Hook?"

"Well," we said, "Mayor HALL would explain these matters. What next?"

"Well, if we got him cornered we should give him a chance to eat as many on the half shell as he could stand, and give him the best bed for the night. In the morning he should have a roast and an opportunity to say before our wife and daughters why it is that the cottages of Staten Island are any more entitled to be blown upon from the infected district than the marshes are that lie north of Coney Island."

Nobody thought that Gov. KING was to be blamed for selecting Seguine's Point, the story being current, that the Lieutenant-Governor and Comptroller of the State were taken down to view the premises in a close carriage, and by such an out-of-the-way, roundabout, woody path, that they were entirely justified to believing it was ten miles at least from anywhere else, and scarcely seen before except by the United States surveyors and the clam boatmen from somewhere down in Jersey.

SCANDAL AND SO FORTH.

Very respectable people, farmers, oystermen and villa-men, didn't hesitate very distinctly to assert that in their belief, the Commissioners were all the more hot for Seguine's Point, because some said they all owned property on Long Island, which a Quarantine on Coney Island would depreciate; and others said because some one of them had a private speculation in view, which would be forwarded by the purchase of WOLFE'S farm. The first story, we are satisfied, is utterly untrue; the high character and standing of the Commissioners, in any less exciting times, would have quenched it at the start. As to the other, they directly affirm that while the Commissioners were pretending to labor with all zeal to persuade New-Jersey into the surrender of Sandy Hook, one of them was at the same hour urging his broker to be sure to lay hands on WOLFE'S farm. The documents prove that this, too, is a fiction.

The date of the Petition of the Commissioners to the Legislature of New-Jersey is March 10. On the 12th of March the Committee of the Legislature, to whom the matter had been referred, reported that they had conferred with the New-York Commissioners, who had disclaimed any jurisdiction on the part of New York over Sandy Hook, and asked for the appointment of a like Commission, with like powers, to treat with them. Four signed this report, and one dissented. On the 18th of March Messrs. HALL and BOWNE returned from New-Jersey, and reported unfavorably of the action of New-Jersey, leaving Mr. BENSON behind, but with no hope of producing a change in the action of the Legislature. On the 19th of March Messrs. HALL and BOWNE went to Albany, and reported to Governor KING that Sandy Hook could not be had, and asked what step they should take next. On the 27th of March the agreement with THOS. R. LUSH for the purchase of the Wolfe farm for $23,000 was signed, and on the 1st of May the deed of the property was conveyed to the Commissioners, and the money paid

IF THE COMMISSIONERS SHOULD KNOCK UNDER.

"But if not at Seguine's Point, where shall the temporary Quarantine be placed? and where shall the anchorage be if not where the Commissioners are expecting to establish it?" The question developed scores of skeptics. They didn't believe that Coney Island had been flatly refused yet. They hadn't the slightest idea but that New-Jersey, if approached rationally, and in a compromising spirit, would give up Sandy Hook for it. If Jersey should prove suicidal in her continued refusal, BLUNT'S chart marked out exactly the spot for it on the West Bank, which lies midway between Coney Island and the Great Kills. The chart leys down one point on the Bank as "dry at very low tide." For your permanent hospital, said they, here is the place. It will cost something to make land and build the hospitals, but not so much as one season of malignant yellow fever would, running all down the Jersey coast and frightening trade away from your City. For temporary hospitals ships are very cheap now, and a few old hulks that would cost almost nothing, being anchored below the West Bank, and west of the channel, would furnish hospital room enough. Instead of an anchorage at which only three large vessels can ride together at once, and over which half the coal fleet and all the oyster fleet must pass to get to the City, and the infected vessels back to the Southwest Spit, where there is ground enough and room enough, and nobody for miles away to leeward to be poisoned. It isn't half so far out of the way as the present anchorage, and is an infinitely better place for it. So it is, but unfortunately it is in New-Jersey waters, and might as well be in the West Indies for any such use that we are permitted to make of it.

A SUGGESTION.

"Say, you, Mr. Reporter," cried a conservative oysterman, as we were leaving. "I wish your papers would just hint to the Health Officer, if nothing will turn the Quarantine Commissioners from anchoring where they mean to—I wish you would just hint to the Health Officer, that the infected bedding ought never to be thrown overboard from ships anybow. He'd ought to have an iron float, built with immense grates fixed in it, and fires burning, to be towed down by the tug that takes an infected vessel to her anchorage. Let every old rag, every piece of beddlng, everything that generally is thrown overboard when they come to purify be burnt up instead. We'll risk the ashes and the smoke; say that to the Health Officer, will you?"

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Ingraham.

CARELESSNESS IN THE USE OF CROTON WATER.

The Russell and Erwin Manufacturing Company vs. Hargreaves & Smith.—This action was brought to recover $1,200 for damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff from the negligence of the defendant or his employes in letting the Croton water run in their premises. It appears from the pleadings that the plaintiffs hired a building, and relet the second floor to the defendant, keeping the first floor themselves; that on or about the 4th day of November, 1854, one of the clerks of the defendant went to the wash-basin to wash his hands, just as he turned the faucet he was called away, and left without pulling the plug at the bottom of the basin or turning off the water. Next morning the plaintiff, on opening his store, discovered that the water had leaked through the floor and damaged his goods to the extent complained of.

The defence set up—first, that the plaintiff was bound to have the waste pipes so arranged that such an accident could not occur; second, that if anybody is liable it is the owner of the building, and that under the circumstances they should have judgment.

The cause is still on.

ROGERS & RAYMOND,
(LATE ROGERS & CO.)
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL CLOTHING WAREHOUSE,
CORNER OF FULTON AND NASSAU STS.,
Opposite the Herald office.

The new Clothing firm of ROGERS & RAYMOND, which supersedes that of ROGERS & CO., takes the field at the commencement of the Summer season, with an ample and fashionable stock, a large business connexion, ample capital, a thorough knowledge of the trade, and a determination to manufacture first-class Clothing, and to sell at prices which shall command the custom of the closest buyers. Both members of the firm are practical manufacturing clothiers, have had extensive experience of the best markets and seasons for purchasing goods, and are prepared to conduct their business on a system which will enable them to manufacture cheaper, and consequently to sell cheaper than ordinary houses. The well-known premises of the firm, are among the largest in the trade, and their assortment of and furnishing goods for the summer, will be found to comprise an almost endless variety in style, sizes, materials and colors. Goods of the best description will be cut in the by competent artists, and the prices in that department will range much below the usual merchant tailor rates. No effort will be spared by the undersigned to give unqualified satisfaction to purchasers.

GENTLEMEN'S AND BOY'S CLOTHING

P. L. ROGERS,
AARON RAYMOND.

TO THE RETAIL STRAW HATTERS.—WE ARE now prepared to offer, of our own manufacture, the variegated Black and White Swiss Sennette whole straw hat, feeling confident that they will be the leading style of hat for this Summer, no other straw hat presenting so many advantages to the wearer. They are not only light flexible and uncommonly durable, but being of a mottled appearance precludes the possibility of their showing the dust and dirt, which obviates the objection so often made by the wearers of straw hats. We would also beg leave to say, our stock of men's, boys', and children's hats is complete in every branch. A. LELAND & CO.,

TRAVELS AND DISCOVERIES IN NORTH AND CENTRAL AFRICA.

Being a Journal of an Expedition undertaken under the auspices of H. B. M.'s Government, in the years 1849 to 1855. By HENRY BARTH, Ph. D.
In 3 large vols., 8vo.
Handsomely printed, and illustrated with 11 entirely new Maps, 36 finely-tinted Engravings, and 100 very neat Woodcuts.

Extract from Preface

The principal merit which I claim for myself in this respect is that of having noted the whole configuration of the country; and my chief object has been to represent the tribes and nations with whom I came in contact in their historical and ethnographical relation to the rest of mankind, as well as their physical relation to that tract of country in which they live. If in this respect I have succeeded in placing before the eyes of the public a new and animated picture, and connected these apparently savage and degraded tribes more intimately with the history of more favored on a higher level of civilization, I shall be amply recompensed for the toils and dangers I have gone through.

NEW-YORK CITY.

THE GERMAN SPRING FESTIVAL.

The Sangerbund at Yorkville—Chief Matsell and Mayor Wood Dine with Them, and Mayor Wood makes a Speech—Six Thousand People Present—Immense Quantities of Lager-Bier Consumed.

The great Spring Festivel of the Germens, which was postponed on Monday, on account of the heavy rain-storm, took place yesterday. The Turners, who manfully braved the unfavorable weather on Monday, did not participate. They possibly had holiday enough, with the drenching they got on that occasion. But the Sängerbunds of this City, and of Brooklyn, Hoboken and Williamsburgh, numbering 500 men, met early in the morning at Metropolitan Hall, Hester street, and with their friends, fell into marching order, and paraded Bowery to Chatnam street, thence through the Park, where they were received by the Mayor, up Broadway to Broome street, at the foot of which they embarked on board the steamboats Washington, Splendid and Union, and were conveyed to CONRAD'S Garden, Yorkville, the spot chosen for the festivities of the occasion. As they marched through the streets of the City, previous to embarkation, they made a very fine show,—the magnificence of their banners, as they flaunted in the bright sunlight of the morning, causing general remark. Some of these banners were indeed among the most splendid things of the kind we have ever seen, and we shall take further occasion to allude to them.

There were eighteen companies, or Sängerbunds engaged in "welcoming the Spring" professionally—that is, singing for the delectation of the thousands of their own countrymen and country-women, and of the hundreds of other nations, who gladly paid each a quarter of a dollar for admission to the Festplatz. These companies were thus denominated:—Colonia Euphonia, Freier Männerchor, Germania, Harmonia Harmonia of Hoboken, Harogari Männerchor, Liedertrana of Brooklyn, Lorelei Männerchor, Mozart-Verein, Orpheus, Rheinischer Sängerbund, Sängerrunde, Sängerbund of Williamsburg, Schillerbund, Social Reform Gesang Verein, Teutonia Männerchor, and Uhland Bund.

The extensive grounds, located at the foot of Nineteeth-street, East River, reaching from near the Second-avenue to the river's bank, immediately opposite Astoria, heavily and continuously as the rain had fallen during the previous day and through the greater part of the night, were by no means so uninviting as might be supposed. At least the ladies, to the number of a thousand, probably, did not find the grass too damp for comfort; nor did at least four thousand men, who blessed themselves, when they had a chance, with the ladies' society, or else reclined sub viridi fronde and drank lager-bier in single or bachelor blessedness. Very early the festplatz was gay with all the colors of the rainbow, and a good many tints beside. The lager-bier had been rolling in since dawn. Immense stands, erected on the previous day, confronted the visitor at all points, and barrels of lager that were almost young vats in size, perched on stools behind those stands, told only too plainly of the universal German thirst that can scarcely be quenched or sated. Fast as they arrived, most of the ladies, in parties of sixes and tens, selected their tree, tied their bonnets to the branches and festooned their shawls about them, and then, not afraid to be gazed at with their tresses set afloat, and their limbs in carelese abandon, they produced their baskets and enjoyed the good fare which their foresight had plentifully provided. But many gathered around the stand which had been erected for the Sängerbunds and their leader, where five hundred male voices at one time, made oven the opposite shore of Astoria send back an echo of melody. The leader was JULIUS UEGER, and the programme of the pieces sung by the united Bunds or played by Hirschmann's Band, was as follows:

Overture von Kästner, performed by Hirschmann's band.

Sturm von Lichner, by the Sängerbund.

Kronung's Marsch, von Arx, played by Hirschmann's Band,

Banquetlied von Stunz, by the Sängerbund.

Fahnenlied preisgedicht, (or prize poem,) von Serge, set to music, and directed by CARL BERGMANN.

But before this Fahnenlied, the President of the day, Mr. FREDERICK STEFFENS, delivered a speech in German, inaugurating a magnificent new banner, ten feet by fifteen in dimensions, and formed of the richest silk. A few words about this banner will not be out of place. The Sängerbunds of New-York have, until recently, existed as separate organizations. They are now united under the denomination of Der Allegemeiner Sängerbund, and this flag was made to commemorate that event. The cost of it was $700. At first glance, it merely seems like the stars and stripes, the American flag, and nothing more. But a nearer inspection brings to view an eagle beautifully embroidered in the costliest floss silk. With outstretched wings he holds in his beak a shield in red, black and gold, the three prohibited colors in Germany, which only Emperors, Kings, Dukes and similar magnificent mortals may wear. For the liberty to wear these, their old national colore by the bye, the Germans by this device claim the protection of the American flag, or in this country they rather mean to say, they are at liberty to work out their own individuality and were no longer under the rule of despotism.

Mr. STEFFENS, in presenting this flag to the Sängerbund, bade them remember that they were now in a New Fatherland, and that they had achieved the liberty for which they had so long striven in the Old World. They had—many of them in the Old Fatherland, taken oaths over other banners, the intent of which was only to crush liberty, and to gratify Emperore and Kings, but here, said the Speaker, we again swear over a new banner which we, this day at this our festival, consecrate to Liberty and Human Progress. By this, our action, and by all our actions, let us show to our friends, the Americans, that the Liberty which they have invited us to share, is instructive to us, and that we know how to appreciate it.

Mr. ACKER, on the part of the Sängerbund, responded in a brief but appropriate speech.

The Bund then left the stand in order and marched into that part of the Garden where the less intellectual sports were going on, each Company preceded by its respective banner. These banners, we have already said, were magnificent. One of them especially, that belonging to the Schillerbund, was made of rich crimson silk, with a heavy gold fringe, and embroidered with wreaths of flowers in brilliant green and gold. The design was an eagle holding from his beak a harp. On one side was the inscription:

Der Schillerbund wird seine Fahne wahren,
So lang der Bund aus einem Mann besteht,
Er wird mit Lust sich um sein Banner scharren,
So oft es roth in freien Lüften weht.

Which means that the Schillerbund will ever preserve their flag while one member of their body survives, and for that banner they will etrive, with delight, as long as its red folds wave in the free air.

The banners, having been tastefully and safely lodged in the trees, Hirschmann's band took their places in the rear of a suspicious-looking table which, rumor said, was to be honored by the presence of Mayor Woon, Chief-of Police MATSELL, Justice CONNOLLY, and sundry officials besides. Meanwhile, the singers hurried off to the lager-bier stands, having first purchased tickets, inscribed "Good for one glass of beer, 6 cents"—for at the festplatz those who serve the beer take no money, having no time to examine bills or to give change. About this time there could not have been less than from four to five thousand persons present. Eating and drinking were prodigiously popular. The sun shone very hotly down, and lager-bier was vociferously demended. The ladies asked for it and obtained it. The children coveted and received it. The policemen, of whom there were a large number present, conveyed frequent full glasses to their lips, and invariably set them down empty. It was the sun that caused all this drinking—nothing but the sun.

At length a carriage rolled into the ground, and from it alighted the Chief of Police and other gentle men known about his office. The Secretary of the Bund, Mr. BOSSMAN, took them in charge, and towed them to the suspicious-looking table, which by this time had assumed the appearance of a banquet-table Plates of cold turkey, chicken, veal, beef, tongue, &c., &c., and bottles of Champagne, Hock, Rbenish and Hungarian gave it an inviting aspect. Knives and forks went to work. The Chief and his friends had had a long ride. Empty bottles rapidly disappeared to be replaced by new ones. At last, Mr. J. O. HUNT proposed Mr. MATSELL'e health, to which the Chief modestly responded. He thanked Mr. HUNT for the compliment. He should shortly go to the Far West, where it would be a pleasure to bring before him in recollection the happy faces he saw there that day. He admired that feature of character which the Germans, more than any other nation, possessed, that of bringing their wives and children with them, to be partakers of their happiness, on all festive occasions. And what was happiness? Why, it was better than California. Gold, said Mr. MATSELL, is not happiness. It is only the representative of it.

Mr. MATSELL sat down, and afterwards the band played "God save the Queen."

And now all was commotion, for the President announced that his Honor, the Mayor, had arrived. It was even so, and in a few minutes his Honor took his place at the table, where a fresh supply of the good things of life were set before him. He partook of them sparingly, and then the Secretary proposed the Mayor's health. He said the Germans so loved his Honor that they would all shed their blood for him. Nine cheers were given for the Mayor, and then his Honor mounted a stool and prepared to speak. But the singers in the vicinity, gathered in social circles under the trees, were making too much noise. The President ordered them to cease, but they kept on. Upon which, Justice CONNOLLY said they were singing a song composed in honor of the Mayor, and they were bound to sing it out. Quiet being at length restored, the Mayor said:

Mr. PRESIDENT AND FELLOW-CITIZENS: I beg to return you my thanks for the very complimentary manner in which you have been pleased to receive me on this festive occasion. I need not assure you that I recognize among my German fellow-citizens those who are not only the most true to the institutions of this country, but are among the most law abiding, obedient and well-disposed citizens; and that ever since I have had the honor to hold the position of Mayor of this great City, no class of citizens, as a body, have been found more faithful in obedience to the laws, or who have contributed more to the peace and prosperity of New-York. [Three cheers and a tiger.] I have found them at all times, on all occasions, fully identified with the interests, institutions and welfare of their adopted country. I can only say, proceeded His Honor, that as long as I occupy this position in which partiality and favoritism have placed me, I shall always maintain order and law, upbold morality, and strive for the good of our institutions and the welfare of the community over which I preside. To all here present I can only say that you are, as you know, in

"The Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave,"

—that you live in a country where every man has equal political and religious rights,—where the Constitution guarantees to every citizen, whatever his religions or political doctrines, that here, under the canopy of Heaven, he may follow whatever creed or whatever path he pleases. Let me, then, call upon you to appreciate the glorious country of which you have become citizens, always striving to maintain its laws, and to defend its homes and firesides.

It gives me, His Honor continued, much pleasure to be here to-day. I assure you that this is the first moment, after months of arduous labor in the duties of my office, that I have been able to snatch sufficient recreation even to see smiling faces. It gives me pleasure to see, on this occasion, so many happy countenances, indications of the honest hearts beneath them. To you all I will say that on all occasions I will cherish my adopted fellow-citizens as those nearest to my heart.

The welkin, as writers of romance say, rang with plaudits when His Honor had concluded. And then the masters of the feast and leaders of the Bunds gathered round him. He was offered a horn by some person,—one of those enormous elk horns, mounted with silver, into which the Germans pour about half a barrel of beer, and sling round their bodies when they go a traveling. His Honor took it amid shouts of "Take care, take care." It was necessary to take care, truly, for those horns are treacherous to those who understand them not, and you will get the contents in your bosom if you turn them the wrong way in drinking. His Honor having, perhaps, taken a horn before, was very careful, and merely sipped the lager with his lips. It was then handed to the Chief of Police, who was also careful and did not spill any. But when the Mayor's friend, Mr. BROWNELL, took the horn, he turned it the wrong way and deluged himself and the table.

They then handed the Mayor a huge silver flagon, beautifully embossed, containing several quarts of lager. Again he sipped. They then gave to Mr. MATSELL a highly-polished horn, out of which he drank, without spilling.

Then a Bund of singers gathered around the table, and sung a Swiss song very admirably. They said it was in honor of the Mayor. His Honor was then led away by the President to take a look at the grounds.

During all this time the fun had been growing "fast and furious" in every part of the Garden. When we left the ground there were from five to six thousand people busily drinking lager-bier.

THE POLICE QUESTION.

Dismissals by the New Board for Insubordination—A Force for the Protection of Quarantine.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners dismissed, yesterday morning, for insubordination, Captains LEITE (Seventh Ward,) ACKERMAN, (Ninth Ward,) KISSNER, (Fourteenth Ward,) and NORRIS, (Tenth Ward.) The clerk was directed to serve notices upon each of the action of the Board.

The Commissioners then resolved to send forthwith a special Police force of twenty five men for the protection of Quarantine. This force was at once selected from the hundreds of applicants who were present, and placed under command of Capt. WALLING, who was instructed to depart without delay for Seguine's Point.

Nothing else of public interest was transacted by the Board.

FRANCIS TWOMEY, Captain of the Nineteenth Ward Police, sent, yesterday, the following letter to Deputy CARPENTER:

NINETEENTH WARD STATION HOUSE,
NEW-YORK, June 1, 1857.

To Mr. Dan. Carpenter, Ex Captain Fifth District, &c.

DEAR SIR: I have just received a document from the office of the so called "Metropolitan Police Commissioners," informing me that a charge of insubordination has been preferred against me by yourself, for disobedience of certain orders, issued, or purporting to have been issued by the said so called Police Commissioners. As the charge and specifications are signed by you, I take the liberty of addressing this note to you, with a request that you will read it, or cause it to be read, to the said Commissioners.

"I do not now, never did, nor never will recognize the jurisdiction of any or all of said Commissioners, or their satellites, over my action as Captain of Police of this District. I received my appointment from the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge, City officers, elected as Commissioners of the Municipal Police of this City, and to none other, at present, will I yield the slightest obedience, in any matter connected with the police force under my command. The Station-house and its appurtenances are entrusted to my charge; and as the custodian of the City property, I could not, without the grossest violation of that trust so reposed in me by the City, through its regularly elected representatives, (composed, at the time of my appointment, of gentlemen of different political opinions,) transfer into the hands of a partisan Commission, appointed by a power foreign to the City, dead to its interests, indifferent to its wants, and, as I believe, in violation of the letter and spirit of the constitution of the State, and as I know, in contravention of the chartered rights of this City. No honorable man, or Board of Commissioners, were upon a tender voluntarily made to him or them, would encourage such a proceeding, much less endeavor to force me into the commission of such a crime.

Furthermore, were no such obstacle in the way, the idea of accepting office under, or in any way connecting myself with, or appearing for trial before, a Police Commission, composed, in part, of men as well known to the present municipal police, as old offenders, as who have themselves been tried not only before the bar of justice but the bar of public opinion, for offences, upon the enormity of which the inhabitants of this City have already, on more than one occasion, passed their vernict, is so repugnant to my feelings, that I shudder at the possibility of such a calamity befalling me.

These are my honest sentiments, and while repudiating any intention to wilfully detract from the reputation of any person or persons now holding, or who may have held, conspicuous places in the estimation of their fellow citizens, yet forbearance sometimes ceases to be a virtue, as in the present instance, and in order that I may be pestered with no more such document, or documents of any kind, emanating from the so-called Commissioners, and fearful of calling personally at the office, No. 88 Waite street, lest my motives for such visit might be misrepresented, my reputation damaged, or my standing in the Democratic Party compromised—events which I would not have occur for a dozen positions such as I now hold—I respectfully ask that you will discontinue the practice of sending for my perusal any more papers or documents, official or others; and I take this opportunity of informing you that any such papers, orders, &c., will not receive the slightest attention from me.

Respectfully your obedient servant,
FRANCIS J. TWOMEY,
Captain Nineteenth District Police.

P. S.—Enclosed you will find the documents and papers that you have favored me with from time to time. They are of no utility to me, and may be of service to you, as evidence against me on trial. You are entirely welcome to them. F. J. T.

The following correspondence between Messrs Woon and DRAPER was had yesterday.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW YORK, Tuesday, June 2, 1857.

SIMEON DRAPER, Esq.—Dear Sir: The City Comptroller in whom the law vests the sole authority to draw warrants upon the City Treasury proposes now to pay the salaries of the Police to the 30th ult., provided the so called Board of Metropolitan Police Commissioners of which you are President will assent to such payment. Being very desirous for the payment of these persons who are really suffering for the want of their just dues, I am not disposed to permit any harmless condition of this kind to be made the reason for longer delay in the liquidation of their demands. The Municipal Police Commissioners wish me to say that they think it better to comply with the novel and eccentric stipulations of the Comptroller than to keep the Police longer out of the pay pittance upon which their families rely for subsistence. Let me respectfully ask therefore, that you lay this subject before your associates without delay, that by their consent no further obstacle may prevent the proposed payment at once. Very respectfully yours,

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.
NEW-YORK, June 2, 1857.

Hon. Fernando Wood, Mayor, &c.:

SIR: Your letter of this date has just been received. You have doubtless seen the morning papers and the communication from the Comptroller published in them, and must, therefore, be aware that the necessary steps have already been taken for the payment of the salary of the Police force of this City, as without your intervention or suggestion what was required in their behalf, to be done, has already been done. There seems to be no occasion to lay your letter before the Board of which I am President.

Your obedient servant,
S. DRAPER.

The Comptroller will be ready to pay the Police on Monday next, paying each man separately.

The old Police Commissioners have taken no public action of late, but yesterday, nearly all the officers in the Department were served with notes from WILSON SMALL, of the Mayor's Office. The purport of these notes was not made known to outsiders, but a person who ought to know, said they "merely called attention to attend the General Convention."

A VERY SERIOUS QUESTION.

Can old and long standing secondary syphilis ever be cured? Must those who have been imprudent in their youth, forever pay the penalty of their folly, and transmit it from generation to generation? Is there no thorough, complete and perfect remedy? Answer—There is but one that may implicitly be depended upon. There are others that may or may not cure. Some alteratives are resorted to in the belief that the change they will produce may in time eradicate the malady. But, to insure a certain, unmistakable, effective eradication of the elements itself, of the disease itself, the only thing is ANDERS' LIQUID IODINE, or PURE IODINE WATER. It never fails. It makes you as good as ever. It restores you to perfect health and removes every taint whatever from the system. It is sold at $1 a bottle, by ANDERS & FOSNICK, No. 3 Second-avenue and No. 862 Broadway; C. H. RING, No. 192 Broadway; BARNES & PARK, Nos 304 Broadway; Mrs. HAYES, Brooklyn; and all druggists.

A SERIOUS QUESTION ASKED AND ANSWERED.—Mr. EDITOR: Why is Barnum's Museum patronized in preference to a play-house? ANSWER—Because it has equally choice, novel and entertaining performances, and all so divested of impropriety as to render them wholly unobjectionable to the most fastidious. For instance: the new drama of "Fraud and its Victims," is given there this afternoon and evening.

TUESDAY, June 2—P. M.

The day was a quiet one in Money affairs. A fair amount of business was done in Foreign bills at 109⅝@¾ on London for the Boston steamer. The amount of Bullion sent forward this afternoon by express is reported at $800,000. The Domestic Exchange brokers are easy in means and rather inactive in business. The Discount Brokers report a good demand for strictly prime paper at ⅜@1 ₱ cent. over the Bank rete. The Stock people continue to find money easier than the transfer of Stocks. The latter came hard to-day, particularly in New-York and Erie, New-York Central and Reading. The jobbers have oversold heavily and at low prices, while the public, attracted by the fall, have been gradually and quietly withdrawing the stocks from the control of Wall-street. We are aware that we report this fact in direct conflict with the mendacious operetion of the Herald, which has made itself a party to the recent wholesale gambling onslaught upon stock valnes, bnt the experience of yeterday and to-day at the transfer desks of the New-York and Erie and Philedelphia and Reading offices, (and other instances might be named,) will more than justify our report.

The excitement at the Stock Exchange, to-day, ran quite high, and although the sellers at the early Board prepondereted, and the chief broker of the well-known combination of Bears, who have kept the Street in a ferment for several months past, dispensed his favors right and left, in lots of 500 to 1,000 shares at the lowest prices, his constituents, (most of them being present) deemed most effective to break down the market, the turn before 2 o'clock, when the transfers of the day came to be made, wes very decided, the difference in a single hour being from 2 to 3 ₱ cent. in New-York and Erie; 1 ₱ cent. in Reading, and before the close of the day 2¾@3 ₱ cent. in Southern Michigan. So close drawn has the Erie certificetes on the Street become, that several deliveries were not made at all, being left over by consent, and, in one instance, the stock was bought in by the President of the Stock Exchange, at the Second Board, under the rnle. There is no corner in the case, except such as the operations of these parties have involuntarily made upon themselves. Yesterday the cash prem. was 39 ₱ cent. This forenoon they undertook to deliver as low as 34@35 ₱ cent., and were unable to do so, and the stock was firm at 36¾@37 at the close of business. Out of 110,000 shares, constituting the capital of the Company, the effective, movable supply on the Street is reduced to 6,000 shares. The principal fluctuations of the day, from the closing prices of yesterday, were:

In Erie	37½	@36	@37
New-York Central	86¼	@85¾	@85¾
Reading	81	@80	@81
Southern Michigan	67½	@65¾	@67
Cleveland and Toledo	65½	@64	@64½
Pacific Mail	71	@72	@73

The general account closed firm, several new and strong buyers appearing at the Second Board for Southern Michigan. The Company have taken a suite of new offices over the Bank of Commerce in Nessan-street, and in regard to the practical management of the line in Michigan we hear thet Mr. CHARLES MINOT, formerly of the New-York and Erie Road, is spoken of for General Superintendent or Agent at Chicago and Toledo.

The Sub-Treasury disbursed to-day the large sum of $309,714 against only $63,210 received; reducing the balance to $12,779,565. On inquiries to the probable course of receipts and disbursements for the month of June, we are quite satisfied that the balance will be brought down to about ten millions by the close of the month, after which the drafts upon the large appropriations for the fiscal year will be made nearly equal to the enhanced customs upon the goods now warehoused for the operation of the new tariff.

The foreign news telegraphed from Halifax this afternoon attracted very little attention. The changes in the Funds and the Cotton Market are not important, while the improvement in Breadstuffs denotes a better market as the Summer season advences. Sugars were again firm.

A considerable number of our prominent Wall-street people have availed of the invitation of the Ohio and Mississippi Company and the pleasant weather to make an excursion of a fortnight to the West, first attending the opening ceremonies of the Great Cincinnati and St. Louis line, recently completed by the enterprising Company just named. The last party leave town this afternoon.

We omitted to mention at the proper time that the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne end Chicago Company have opened an office in this City, over the Bank of the State of New-York, No. 37 Williamstreet. The line is one of the most important and extensive in the West, embracing the several divisions between the cities of Pittsburg and Chicago, built under the names of the Ohio and Pennsylvenia, Ohio end Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Companies. The original loans, as well as the work and shares of the three concerns, have recently been consolidated under one general primary mortgege for ten millions of dollars, which after providing for all the seperate loans, amounting to about $6,600,000, will fully cover the debt incurred in finishing the Chicago section under the present organizetion.

The principal coinage at the United States Mint in Philedelphia during the past month was 3,800,000 cents, of the new stamp. The California Gold received here dnring the month was either in bars or coin from the San Francisco Branch, or in Dust, which was run into bars at the New-York Assay Office.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Cumberland Coal and Iron Company was held yesterday. The following-named gentlemen were elected. Those in italics are new and in place of out-of-town Directors:

President—ANDREW MEHAFFEY. Directors—A. M. Sherman, M. N. Falls, Joseph Torrey, Wm. Pettet, F. Bloodgood, C. Baker, A. McConichie, W. M. Benjamin, D. M. Hughes. William Cotheal, John Riley, E. W. Hinman.

The exports of the leading articles of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods, for the week, were $1,139,714, against $2,206,677, the week ending June 6, last year,

From Wright's Weekly Circular.

The total receipts at the ports amount to 2,840,000 bales against 3,360,000 to the corresponding period last year, showing a deficit of 520,000 bales. Next week this deficit will be increased to 536,000. We have had, for several weeks at the South, very full rivers; all the upper streams have been navigable, affording opportunities for any remaining cotton to be brought to the ports, and yet the receipts continue to fall off until they are reduced, as advised by telegraph, to a total of 10,000 bales a week. I consider this fully proves the assertions maintained in this circular during the entire season, that the receipts indnced by tempting prices, and free navigation, were being hurried to market more rapidly than in any former year.

The probable actual receipts at the ports during the remainder of the season will not exceed 60,000 bales, and if I add 30,000 for corrections, difference in interior stocks, &c., the figures for crop would be a total of 2,940,000 bales. At any rate, it seems almost certain that the total will not vary much from 2,950,000, from which, for practical use, must be dedneted 15,000 bales burnt, already counted in receipts, and a considerable amount lest at sea.

In retation to the growing crop we continne to receive gloomy accounts; it is everywhere fully four weeks later than an average, and very strong letters are daily received from the South as to the impossibility of making an average crop. No doubt can possibly exist that the start for the new crop has been bad, and that an early or a monster crop is entirely out of the question; but to give any estimate in figures of what may be grown is mere guesswork, so much must, necessarily, depend upon the character of the weather during the Summer and Autumn, and the period of frost.

On the Way to Kansas—Speeches of Senator Wilson and E. O. Perrin.

[OUR SPECIAL KANSAS CORRESPONDENCE.]

OFF QUINDARO, KANSAS TERRITORY,
SUNDAY NIGHT, May 24, 1857.

Kansas, so far as I have seen it, is an agreeable disappointment. Instead of weeping valleys, shrieking hills, incarnadined plains and sanguineous town-lots, I have been able to find nothing but a very wild though very promising country, a people absorbed soul and body in speculation and trade, with a marked penchant for bad whisky, a terrible dearth of the comforts of civilized life, and a very contemptuous disregard for exciting politics.

On Friday last at 2 o'clock P. M., we left St. Louis for Jefferson City on the Missouri, which we reached shortly after 8 o'clock in the evening. There we stepped on board the New Lucy, and have not had an opportunity of stepping off ever since. The Lucy took about 300 passengers with her, of whom a dozen or so were ladies.

It is superfluous, I suppose, to describe the mode of living on board a Missouri steamboat. Suffice it to say that the accommodations are characterized by a Fejeean simplicity. The passengers are naturally divided into two great classes—first: those who get beds; and second, those who don't. The latter preponderate immensely. The passenger berths number seventy-six precisely, for I counted them myself. People who have not got berths are accommodated in this way: Each person, when bedtime approaches, is supplied with a coverlet and a small mattress, stuffed with wood shavings. The mattresses are placed side by side on the floor of the saloon, on the tables, under the tables, and in every spot where there is room, until finally they get packed together as close as herrings in a barrel. Then the lion and the lamb lie down together. Border Ruffians and angelic Abolitionists got mixed up in the most promiscuous and friendly manner, and join in a harmonious snore, which is kept up with unabated vigor till morning, "when," in the words of the immortal epic, "daylight does appear." This rudis et indigestaque moles—this rough and undigested heap—reminds one very forcibly of what we used to read about the mode of stowing away negroes in the African slavers, save (and this is an important exception) that it is not accompanied by any of the horrors of the middle passage. The Latin quotation describes the thing exactly.

Some of the passengers, animated, perhaps, by those praiseworthy sentiments which induced Mrs. Spriggins to keep her gin in a teapot—to wit, motives of delicacy—refrain from going to sleep at all, and spend most of the night at cards.

Now as to the fare. This is a topic on which I prefer saying as little as possible. The only thing good about it is the water, and that would be infinitely better if it were clean. But the wonder is how our caterers manage to have anything at all, good or bad. It is but simple justice to them to say that what they do have they distribute with the utmost generosity and impartiality. The servants are orderly and attentive, though it must be confessed they have an innocent way of hauling you mashed potatoes, for instance, when you call for fried eggs, and of bringing your meat on somebody else's plate. These are trifles, however, hardly worth mentioning.

A man with a taste for the picturesque could forget any ordinary annoyance in looking at this beautiful river, which exhibits an ever-changing panorama of the noblest scenery. Here the eye is strained in penetrating the long and apparently endless vista of green trees clothing either bank of the river, and lost in the far distance in a blue haze, as if melting into the sky; further onward a sudden opening in the woods reveals the rolling prairie land that stretches away into the interior for countless miles. Here the river expands into a broad and shining lake; the next bend discloses a high bluff or wooded promontory crowned by a thriving village or solitary farm-house. The towns, however, occur at somewhat distant intervals—say a hundred miles or so.

Among the passengers on board the New Lucy, have been Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER, new Governor of Kansas, and Senator WILSON, of Massachusetts. They were introduced, for the first time, on board the boat. As you never can get a dozen Americans together without having a speech, the passengers, either of their own accord or at the instigation of somebody laboring under an attack of the cacoethes loquendi, insisted on having addresses from the Governor and the Senator.

The Governor was not to be so easily caught, however. He was twice waited on by a committee of passengers for the purpose of obtaining his consent to have a sort of pow-wow with General WILSON, but declined anticipating the views which, he said, would be speedily presented in his inaugural address over his own signature. It was then arranged that Mr E. O. PERRIN, who was also on board, should take up the cudgels against the Senator, and preparations were made accordingly. Last evening, after tea, the saloon was cleared, the passengers were invited in, a chairman and secretaries were appointed, and Mr. WILSON was called on for his promised speech.

SPEECH OF SENATOR WILSON.

The honorable gentleman arose and said that a paper had been placed in his hands, signed by gentlemen of all parties and sections of the Union, asking him to address the passengers on board of this noble steamer. This request had been seconded by gentlemen whose pressing solicitations he could not well resist. His sentiments and opinions were known to gentlemen who had pressed upon him this very kind invitation; and as they had asked him to speak, he should frankly say here on the Missouri River, here in the bosom of Missouri, what he had said at home, in the councils of legislation, everywhere, that he was for liberty—equal, universal and impartial liberty, for all men of every clime, color and race. He loved liberty with an inextinguishable love; he loathed Slavery with all his soul. He would give the same freedom he asked for himself—for the wife of his bosom and the child of his love, to the humblest man that treads the soil of the Republic. He would apply to Kansas, to all the Territories of the Union, the glorious principle embodied by the Fathers in the ordinances of 1787. He would prohibit Slavery or abolish Slavery wherever it existed under the exclusive authority of the National Government. These were his sentiments and opinions; sentiments and opinions his heart loved and his judgment approved, and here before gentlemen of the South, here on the deck of this noble steamer, here in the slaveholding State of Missouri, he frankly owned them. Slavery in the States he believed the creature of local law, for which the people of the States were, before God, alone responsible. He did not claim the right to abolish Slavery by the action of Congress in the States, and he assured gentlemen from the South that this was the position of the masses of the Northern people. While they did not claim the right to abolish Slavery in the States—while they looked to the people, who were alone responsible for Slavery in the States, to emancipate the bondmen—they would give their social influences, their prayers to Almighty God, for the final triumph of Liberty in America. He could assure gentlemen from the South that prayers ascended from tens of thousands of Christian firesides for the emancipation of their bondmen—from brave men and noble women whom they had perhaps been taught to regard as their enemies. He wished gentlemen from the South would oftener visit the firesides of the farmers and mechanics of the North. Under cold skies they would find as warm hearts as ever beat in human bosoms—hearts which embrace in their affections this whole broad land—the people of the whole country—master and slave. He would say to Southern men now before him that the hostility of the people of the North to Slavery came not from hearts filled with wrath and hatred, but from hearts which throbbed with genuine affection for the country, for its free institutions, and for all its children, no matter to what race they may claim kindred, or what blood may course through their veins. He hoped some time to visit the Southwest—to pass down the Father of Waters and along the Gulf of the Atlantic coast, to see the people and to study more closely their institutions. Gentlemen would not need to be assured that he should carry his principles with him, that while he should not obtrude them upon any one he should not shrink from giving them utterance as he had to right when they were called for. But one year ago this noble stream up which they were now floating was clouded by lawless violence against the emigrants of the North—of Massachusetts. Now he was freely giving utterance to the sentiments of those proscribed emigrants, and that too by the request of Southern gentlemen. Surely, reason is assuming again her empire over madness and fanaticism. One year ago the virgin sods of beautiful Kansas were reddened by fraternal blood, and her skies illumed by the lurid light of sacked and burning dwellings. It was to be hoped that these scenes of violence were forever ended, that the frauds upon the people would come to nought that the people would rule, and that Kansas would soon take her place in this sisterhood of free commonwealths. He had recently passed through the gaps of the Blue Ridge, crossed over the Alleghanies of the Old Dominion, stood by the grave of HENRY CLAY, on the glorious soil of beautiful Kentucky, traversed the rich prairies of Illinois, gazed upon the Mississippi, and was now wending his way up the Missouri to that land upon which the eyes of so many thousands rest with mingled hopes and fears. He certainly should return to his own New England home with larger views of the present power and future greatness of his country; great as the country now is, he felt that its future was to be grand and glorious. Labor, free, intelligent, educated labor, is hereafter to subdue these vast fields, to develop these mighty resources God had bestowed upon them, and to beautify and adorn these regions that lie in the heart of the Republic. Not what is—great though it be—fills the mind, but the future looms up before us, filling the soul with dreams of the power and glory of the country. The all-hail hereafter fills the mind of the patriot. He feels, as he traverses these broad lands, and floats upon these mighty streams, that the future shall witness the expansion and development of America—that wagon roads and railroads will connect these central regions, which are hereafter to sway the policy of the nation, with the distant shores of the Pacific. Whether these roads pass over the mountains, under northern or southern latitudes, he welcomed them. A distinguished son of his own State had recently described in glowing language the manifest destiny of America, and chided his native State for resisting the onward march of the advancing legions which are to plant the starry banner of the Republic over new acquisitions. Before our advancing hosts he predicted that races of men would perish. It may, in the providence of God, be so, but the lover of liberty, of justice and humanity will not labor any the less to make the future advancement of the Republic in harmony with the laws of the living God; so that history shall bear down to coming ages the record of the justice and honor of the American people. They had met for a moment, and soon would part to meet not again, perhaps, in this world. He should soon return to his New-England home, and he could assure his fellow-passengers that he should do so with a heart filled with kind remembrances of their acts of kindness. He indulged the hope that many of those who assembled to night would meet again in the journey of life, and he could assure them all that he should be happy to meet them in his own section of the Union.

Mr. WILSON resumed his seat amid much applause.

MR. PERRIN REPLIES.

Hon. E. O. PERRIN, of Tennessee, then rose to reply. He said:

MR. PRESIDENT AND LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I could not refuse to respond to your kind call upon me to night. Had I been so disposed, I should certainly have abandoned the intention after listening to the conservative speech made by the honorable Senator from Massachusetts, General WILSON.

I congratulate the people of Kansas that a gentleman standing so high in the Republican ranks, now about visiting their distracted Territory, should entertain the views he has just given us. I trust he may inspire the leaders of the Free-State Party with the same spirit of forbearance, and urge upon them some of the same views he professes to entertain himself.

While I differ widely with the honorable gentleman, in many respects, yet I subscribe most heartily to much he has said. In fact nearly all of it was so much better than I had any reason to hope for from that particular quarter, that I might, in my surprise and enthusiasm, indorse a great portion of his speech.

But with due deference, I think, the gentleman steered clear of some very important questions connected most intimately with the pacification of "Bleeding Kansas," and will, therefore, force me to say a few words in reply.

Now, Mr. President, pursuing the usual custom let me define my position, for it is somewhat novel.

In the first place, I am not, as has been intimated, the private Secretary of Gov. WALKER. I am not his spokesman—nor is he responsible for any of my acts or sins of omission or commission.

I have the honor of accompanying him to the Territory as a "high private," without any official position whatever; this is my personal platform.

Politically I am not of the Democratic or Administration Party. In fact I hardly know where I am or what has become of my party. In the late disastrous campaign I fought the Republican hosts under the banner of MILLARD FILLMORE. Up to that time I had been an Old-Line Henry Clay Whig, and when that Party went down to the tomb of the Capulets I stood up on the platform of the National American Organization, and when they went down I went down with them. I don't know whether the party has fairly come up yet, but individually I rose to the surface, swam ashore "on my own hook," and have spent most of my time since hunting my party or maintaining a masterly state of inactivity, waiting, like Mr. Micawber, "for something to turn up." I go to Kansas, therefore, cut loose, to a great extent, from all and every political party. I have a right, therefore, to select any platform I see proper and stand or fall upon it.

And further, if ancestry, birth, education, residence or association has anything to do in controlling or fixing a man's predilections, it will be very difficult in that particular to give me a "local habitation and a name."

My father and mother were both slaveholders, and their ancestry before them for generations. Too one born and reared upon the eastern shore of old Maryland, the other opening her infant eyes upon the garden spot of Old Kentucky—sporting in her childhood beneath the spreading shade of the trees of Ashland. She was reared, wooed and won, within sight of the consecrated spot where HENRY of the West—that noblest Roman of them all—now sleeps his last sleep. Again, if the mere accident of birth is anything, I can claim as much advantage as the Hon. Senator from Massachusetts, for I too was born just north of Mason and Dixon's line. It was very close to the line, I admit, and if there is any advantage in it I made a very narrow escape. But a man is so very young when he is first born, that I don't think he ought to be held responsible for the event at all—certainly not for the locality. With all of the gentleman's boasted advantage of a birth upon the soil of Freedom, I can safely say, after spending a large portion of my life in a State cursed, as he supposes, by domestic Slavery, that if I had to be born again I should have no earthly objection to risking my luck "upon the other side of Jordan," and come into this breathing world at the ancestral homestead of either parent.

But as to Kansas, poor, bleeding, shrieking Kansas, what shall I say of her? What shall I say for her? Stripped of all the paraphernalia of political humbuggery, I consider the whole question as a very simple one. The question is, shall Kansas be a Slave or a Free State? Perhaps the more important question just now is, in what manner shall that vexed problem be settled? To my mind it presents no difficulty. The bona fide settlers of Kansas alone have the right to settle that question, and settle it just when and how they please. No Administration—no people from any other State—have the least right to dictate terms or instructions for the people of Kansas. They certainly have the power, and I believe they have the will to determine that important question. I am satisfied the Administration at Washington does not desire to dictate any terms to the people of Kansas. I know Gov. WALKER is determined that the actual settlers shall determine the domestic institutions of the country with none to molest or make them afraid. I know he will never lend the influence of his position, his reputation, or his councils, to any other than a full, fair, honest expression of the will of the people. If by bad blood or worse advice any considerable portion of the residents of the Territory have cut themselves off from the privilege of voting for delegates to form a constitution, I am satisfied Gov. WALKER will look clearly into that matter, and will never permit a minority of the people to dictate a constitution against the known wishes of the majority.

That Constitution, whether it sustains Slavery or rejects it, should never enter the halls of Congress until it is first submitted for ratification or rejection to the whole people of Kansas. And every actual settler should have an opportunity to cast his vote for or against that all-important instrument. I believe it is the intention of the Administration to have that done, and I stand by them in that good intention. My still, small voice is for them and at their service to accomplish that desirable end. The Administration could not do less—the people ought not to ask more. I must be permitted to say that I think many of the leaders and agitators of the Republican party in the States do not desire this question on any terms whatever. I do not believe they would rejoice one moment if Kansas should come into the Union to morrow as a free State. That the great mass of that party feel and think differently, I very well know, but the leaders, who work for self, want the question kept open for the campaign of 1860.

I believe most religiously that there are many in the States who would in their hearts rejoice if the Administration would lend itself to secure through the Convention a Pro-Slavery Constitution. If they would aid in thrusting that Constitution upon a Democratic Congress, let it pass there—Kansas come into the Union as a Slave State—then cry out foul play—open afresh the healing wounds of bleeding Kansas—make her bleed freely till 1860—run a candidate upon that issue alone, and, if elected, as he doubtless would be, call a convention of the people of Kansas and strike out the Slavery clause at once, and sail on to their hearts' content for four years at least.

I trust the same spirit does not animate the leaders of the Free-State Party in Kansas. I still hope for better things there. I know they differ with their brethren of the States in some important particulars. I trust they do in this. In the Territory they say all they want is a fair vote, for they alone have the right to settle this question of Slavery. In the States the leaders of the Republican Party say, No, Sirs. Congress is the only power having authority to settle the question.

There is a wide distinction and a wide difference.

Again, we find the leaders of the Republican Party in the States denouncing the Judges of the Supreme Court for deciding that negroes, whether bond or free, are not citizens under our Constitution. I presume the Free-State men of Kansas do not join their brethren in the States in that crusade against the highest judicial tribunal of the country. For, when they framed their celebrated Topeka Constitution, they virtually decided the same thing, that free negroes are not citizens of Kansas. Thus the Republicans in Congress tacked on DUNN'S amendment, and extended the Fugitive Slave law over the Territory, giving the master or owner of a slave the power to come there and reclaim him; thus, whether bond or free, he should not live in their Territory. They were about to create a little "Oasis" where no black man should ever roam, or "come between the wind and their nobility." Differing as they do in these important particulars, I hope to find them differing also in their disposition to settle this perplexing question. Let the people of Kansas have just what institution they please. I am sure I shall not attempt to dictate any form of government for them. If my voice is lifted at all, it will be to call upon my party, if I have any influence with them, to come out like men and vote. If you cannot do so at the first election, rally for the next, and never give sleep to your eyelids until this people, and the whole people, have had their say in this important matter. Do this, and I will be satisfied with any result that may follow. "Thy will, and not mine, be done." I hope when this large assembly shall have distributed itself throughout Kansas they will, each and all, aid in this good work. Urge your friends who are there, and entitled to vote, to come out and do go. Do this, and believe me, the dark cloud which has lowered so long over Kansas will be banished. Peace and prosperity will again reign, and ere many moons a new-born State will take its place amid the stars of our Federal Constitution, and our ways shall once more be ways of pleasantness and our paths all be paths of peace.

Mr. PERRIN'S remarks were received with much favor. He was followed by several speakers and then the meeting adjourned.

A SERENADE.

At Liberty, a small village on the eastern bank of the river, and about 8 hours' sail from Kansas City, a band came on board to serenade the Governor. The hospitalities of the New Lucy were at once extended to them and they were thus induced to remain on board all night.

ARRIVAL AT QUINDARO.

When the boat reached Kansas City, which is built on a high bluff with a gently undulating table land behind, a large crowd came out to the wharf to welcome the new Executive, whom they loudly cheered. The boat then proceeded on its way and touched at Wyandotte, where the Governor met with a most enthusiastic reception. From Wyandotte we continued our course up the Missouri to Quindaro, beside which the vessel lies at this present writing. Among the citizens of Quindaro who have been presented to the Governor is Doctor ROBINSON, the Ex-Governor of the Topeka Convention. Here, likewise, the whole population (perhaps a couple of hundred) have turned out to do honor to the Governor. It is a mystery where all these people come from, as Quindaro seems to consist of about five houses, more or less, viz.: a printing office, a hotel, a store, and two or three dwelling-houses. They are like the fly in amber, therefore; there is nothing at all wonderful about the fly, the wonder is how the devil it got there.

At Quindaro Senator WILSON left us on a tour of three or four days through the Territory, and thence to Minnesota and Iowa.

Nothing would satisfy the people here but a speech from the Governor. The request was briefly complied with. He congratulated them on the evidences of peace and prosperity which he saw around him, and expressed his confident hope to be able to settle the political difficulties under which the Territory has been laboring, by a fair, free and full vote of a majority of the actual bona fide residents of the Territory. He said he would be happy in the course of a few days to send them his inaugural address over his own name in which his sentiments upon all subjects relating to the affairs of the Territory would be fully expressed.

The Governor was loudly cheered, and this must have been the more gratifying, inasmuch as Quindaro is, I believe, one of ROBINSON'S pet speculations, and intensely Anti-Slavery. I asked a man who came on board what was the price of lots there. "Oh," said he, and he turned up one side of his head in a careless way, "they are very cheap—from six to twelve hundred dollars a piece."

"And how much is a lot?"

"Twenty-five feet by one hundred and twenty-five," said he.

There is encouragement for a gentleman with small capital, and a taste for backwood's life.

Whilst writing, the boat has again started on its way up the river.

LEAVENWORTH, Monday Morning, 10 o'clock.

After lying over night at Parksville, the boat continued her voyage this morning, and we have just reached Leavenworth, where the Governor has been received with enthusiastic acclamation.

I cannot leave the boat without saying a friendly word for the officers of the New Lucy. Their intercourse with the passengers has been marked by the utmost kindness and attention, and an obvious desire to promote the general comfort. It is but fair to them to record the fact. P. H. C.

Reception at Leavenworth—Speech of Gen. Lane.

LEAVENWORTH, K. T., Monday, May 25, 1857.

At the close of my last dispatch I stated the bare fact of Governor WALKER'S arrival here. Let me resume my narrative, and state the subsequent occurrences in detail. Immediately on his arrival becoming known to the municipal authorities, a special meeting of the Council was held at the Mayor's office. Mr. JOHN A. HALDEMAN moved the following resolutions, which were adopted by acclamation:

Resolved, That this Council has heard with pleasure of the arrival in our city of Hon. ROBERT J. WALKER, the newly-appointed Governor of Kansas Territory.

Resolved, further, That the Mayor and Councilmen of the city proceed in a body to wait upon Governor WALKER and tender to him the hearty welcome of our citizens and the hospitalities of our town.

In accordance with these resolutions, the Mayor and Council visited the Governor at his room in the Planters' Hotel, and, after a highly gratifying interview, withdrew to give place to the crowds who were besieging the door. After an hour or two spent in shaking hands with his numerous friends, the Governor was permitted to retire, but the interval of rest was brought to a speedy termination by a call from JIM LANE and a troop of friends, who were as warm in welcoming the Governor as anybody who had preceded them. In answer to Col. LANE'S earnest solicitations, the Governor expressed his willingness to meet all the citizens of the town who wished, in the afternoon at half-past three.

Accordingly, at half past three the street in front of the hotel was crowded with people, who, after a few minutes' delay, began vociferating "WALKER! WALKER!"

The Governor declined making a speech, but invited them up to his room.

A tremendous rush was instantaneously made up stairs, and in a couple of minutes the apartment was crowded with one of the most motley assemblages it has ever fallen to my lot to witness. Here the hand-shaking was received with pristine vigor, Free-Soiler and Border Ruffian vying with each other in the warmth of their congratulations. Nothing short of an arm as strong as a pump handle could have withstood the half of it.

When the crowd had become so dense that the Governor, for self protection, was obliged to back into the nearest corner, he addressed a general welcome to all his visitors.

I am most happy, gentlemen, he said, to meet and greet you all as citizens of the Territory of Kansas. I did not come here for the purpose of making a political address. Such views as I entertain in regard to the measures connected with the administration of the Executive Department of the Territory of Kansas, will be communicated in a few days in an inaugural address which will be printed over my signature. In the meantime, gentlemen, it would certainly be most inexcusable in me to inaugurate my entrance into the Territory of Kansas as a political agitator, or a disturber of the peace, by renewing the quarrels which have heretofore unfortunately existed in this Territory. I have come here, gentlemen, for no such purpose, but as a peacemaker. And as the best way of beginning my career here, I will be pleased to shake you all by the hand and take a glass of wine with you.

These remarks were followed by loud applause, and emphatic cries of "Good, good," interspersed with an occasional oath, as an expletive to render the sense of the assemblage still more decided.

Two or three baskets of champagne were now brought forward, and disposed of with a celerity almost magical, whilst the hand-shaking was recommenced.

After a while Colonel LANE and his friends created a diversion which thinned the Governor's reception room considerably. Surrounded by a cordon of associates, he started up the hill for the Shawnee Hotel, where he said he was going to make a speech. An immense crowd followed in their wake, and took up their position opposite the hotel. The gallant Colonel divested himself of his hat, coat, neckerchief and pistol belt, (Mem.—Five out of every six men in Leavenworth wear pistols in their belts,) and, mounting a chair, addressed the crowd. As it would be physically impossible for me, however, to give you his speech, which was very long, in full, allow me to present you with a few excerpts from it.

"In these piping times of peace," he began, "I have visited Leavenworth to interchange the courtesies and kindness of social life. When last I visited Leavenworth, blood was flowing in your streets. Acts of violence were being perpetrated which, for ferocity, will go down to the latest generation as without a parallel. Business was suspended—property could not be sold. How changed the scene to-day! Now peace prevails—permanent peace. You each have a guarantee that peace is as permanent in Kansas as it is in Ohio, or in Iowa, or in any other State of this Union. Your town is prospering. Well, I am interested in several towns here. [Laughter.] Leavenworth is prospering as no town out of California has ever prospered. You are buoyant, happy. As to your property—why, I asked a man to day what he wanted for a lot over here; he told me he asked $1,500 for it, and I could have purchased it six months ago for $100. You have purchasers, I believe, for all of your business lots that you want to sell. Business over was more brisk at any place than in Leavenworth. It is so throughout Kansas. We are on the high road, in the lightning train, to become, within two or three years, the sixth or seventh State of this Union.

Now, I have said, peace prevails. It does, but the elements of discord are still in Kansas. To preserve peace, the peace that now prevails, we will have to use the brains, the prudence, the discretion that God has given us. That we will do so I doubt not. I have been in daily association with men of all parties in Kansas during the last six weeks, and I have not found one single man of any political party but said that peace most prevail. Each party desirous of peace, peace will prevail.

The elements of discord still exist, I say. There are in Kansas two political parties of compact, stern, unyielding men—men who value life less, far less than they do principle. * * * *

These two parties are traveling different roads. One of them is anxious that the institution of Slavery shall be established and continued in Kansas, the other is opposed to the establishment or existence of that institution.

Now, let me say one word here. A Kentuckian by birth, having been nursed by a negro slave, I feel that I have a right to discuss the question of Slavery if I choose, without being charged with any sinister motives or purposes. [A VOICE—Certainly.] Why is it that we cannot discuss the relations of master and slave without getting mad? What is there so exalted or sacred in those relations that our lips are to be closed upon that question, when upon all questions relating to the white man we have full liberty of discussion? * * I ask nothing more for the Free-State Party than I concede to the Pro Slavery Party, freedom of discussion, freedom of speech, freedom of action. An American citizen, born under the Stars and Stripes, I claim the right to discuss any and all questions. [Applause.] * * * I speak for myself and say that it is for the best interests of the Border States that Kansas be a free State. [Applause.] * * * Mark you, the man don't live who would go further to prevent any interference between master and slave in the States where that institution exists than would I. Why, great God, for years and years, and there are people here who know it, a Kentuckian could not come over to Indiana to recover his slave property without getting the assistance of AMOS LANE, or JIM LANE, his son. [Laughter.] And yet there are men who have branded me as an Abolitionist. An Abolitionist! [Laughter.] There is no man in the world further removed from Abolitionism than your humble speaker. Whilst he is opposed to Abolitionism on the one hand, he is just as firmly and as sternly fixed, fairly and honorably, in all efforts to secure Kansas to the free white men of this Union. [Applause.] * * I do not know that I have a personal enemy in Kanzas. And let me say to you that a man shows but little mind, and it is pretty good evidence that he has not a drop of gentle blood in his veins, who would carry his political prejudices into social or private relations. * * * The Pro-Slavery party of Kansas have determined to hold a Constitutional Convention. They have determined to elect delegates next month to a Convention to frame a Constitution. The programme originally was, as you know, to form a Constitution and upon it establish a State Government, and set that State Government in motion in or out of the Union. Well, that programme is changed. I don't know where it is got to exactly, but I am going to give it as far as I understand it. I have heard recently that the Convention was to meet and frame a Constitution leaving the question of Slavery open. That looked ingenious, because they have established Slavery in Kansas by the acts of their legislature, and it is, to all intense and purposes, a Slave Constitution. It requires a negative clause. You must state in your Constitution that Slavery shall and does not exist in Kansas, or you have a Slave Constitution. I have heard to-day that the wise ones posted from Washington City have determined to make a Free-State Constitution. [Cries of "Good."] If they do that I will thank them. And I will say another thing, and that is, that they have got brains and sagacity." [Laughter.]

Mr. LANE proceeded to say that, though he believed the Free State men to be to the Slave-State men in the Territory in the proportion of 20 to 1, yet they would not cast a solitary vote in the election of delegates or to ratify the Constitution, because the laws under which this Convention was to be organized were laws that had been imposed upon the Free-State Party against their wish and without their consent, by men who were not actual residents of the Territory. He urged with great warmth the policy of abstaining from voting at the election or in ratifying or rejecting the Constitution, and expressed his belief that when Congress saw the miserable minority by whom that Constitution had been made they would fling it aside and receive Kansas as a State on the Constitution framed at Topeka. The speaker was frequently interrupted by persons in the crowd.

Mr. PERRIN followed on the other side of the question, and he was succeeded by Judge JOHNSON, a Free-Soil appointee of the Federal Government. The meeting, at the close of the Judge's speech, dispersed in high good humor.

Considerable anxiety is manifested here to know the character of the Governor's inaugural. By those who have had opportunities of ascertaining its topics and their treatment, I am assured that it is a document of extraordinary ability.

I think I may safely state the general purport of it to be to this effect: It will open, doubtless, by an assertion of the motives which induced Mr. WALKER to accept the post of Governor of the Territory. In alluding to the scheme of pacification, I have no doubt it will urge strenuously upon the people the necessity of all voting in the election of delegates, and the declaration of the Governor's belief that Congress will unhesitatingly reject the Territorial application for admission as a State if the Constitution had not been ratified by the vote of a majority of all the actual bona fide residents of the Territory in December next. Otherwise, if the party claiming to be in a majority refuse to vote on the ratification of the Constitution, Congress will accept the vote of the majority of those actually prescribing themselves at the polls as the will of the absolute majority, and admit Kansas accordingly.

In reference to the future railroad system and the public lands of Kansas, the address will probably be marked by that liberal policy, sound judgment and admirable foresight which have heretofore characterized Mr. WALKER'S career, both in the Senate and Cabinet, in respect to the same great questions.

He will, probably, urge on the people the duty of instructing their delegates in framing the ordinance accompanying the Constitution to obtain from Congress a grant of four and a half millions of acres, as conferred on Minnesota, for railroad purposes, and recommend the adoption of measures for the extinguishment of Indian title, and the appropriation of four school sections, for educational objects, in the centre of every township, instead of two as heretofore. This latter recommendation, if carried into effect, would enable the State to organize a magnificent system of free schools, free academies, free Normal schools, and a free University.

The Governor will also suggest, probably, as a means of preventing the evil consequences which follow monopolizing purchases of the public lands by resident or non resident speculators, that for the next twenty years only the unoccupied lands be subjected to a State tax.

The necessity for the speedy admission as a State of the great Southwestern Indian Territory, which is so well adapted for the cultivation of cotton, may also be alluded to, and the address will, doubtless, conclude with a powerful appeal in behalf of the Constitution, the Union, and the great principle of self-government.

The address will be issued in a few days, and forwarded to you in full.

To-morrow morning the Governor, furnished with conveyances by General HARNEY, now at Fort Leavenworth, will proceed to Lecompton, his future head-quarters, where you will next hear from me.

Meeting of the Citizens of Lawrence and Gov. Walker.

Special Correspondence of the Quindaro Chindowan.

LAWRENCE, Wednesday, May 27, 1857.

The citizens of Lawrence called a meeting in the large room of the Unitarian Church last evening, to hear Senator WILSON, Rev. Mr. PIERPONT and Dr. S. G. HOWE, who had met in Lawrence as they were journeying westward. Gov. WALKER and his staff came to Lawrence the same day, and by invitation were present at the meeting. The Church was crowded. Judge CONWAY presided and first introduced Governor WALKER to the audience. The Governor spoke but few words. He referred the people of Kansas to his forthcoming inaugural for a statement of his policy as Governor of Kansas. He promised that every citizen of Kansas should be protected in the enjoyment of his rights, so far as he could secure such a result.

Senator WILSON followed in some general and appropriate remarks, giving his impressions of Kansas after the brief survey he had been able to make, and urging the people to prove worthy of the momentous trust committed to them, and not only make this vast Territory a Free State, but to place her in the column of active, efficient free States, when she should enter the Union and send her Senators and representatives to act for her in the councils of the nation. His remarks were received with great enthusiasm.

Rev. Mr. PIERPONT followed in a humorous and telling speech, in which he made a most capital hit against the usurping bogus Legislature of Kansas, by referring to the grand cause of the Revolution—the attempt of Parliament to tax our fathers without allowing to them the right of representation. As then, so now; no tax must be paid which is levied in disregard of this vital rule. The application made of this great fact of the Revolution brought down the house.

The Secretary of Gov. WALKER followed, in a speech designed to conciliate the Free-State settlers of the Territory. He advised the young men to go to for the Union first consummated in the garden between our first parents, and to bring each one his fair partner to help him fill up the measure of Kansas prosperity. This advice will doubtless be followed.

Dr HOWE was earnestly called for but did not speak, as he had left the house.

Gov. ROBINSON was next called out, and made one of his solid, sensible speeches, hitting the nail on the head, and driving it home to a sure place. He spoke kindly and hopefully of Gov. WALKER'S administration, but told him plainly the magnitude of the work to which he had that evening pledged himself. He illustrated, in the most graphic manner, the studied unfairness of the law under which the Convention is to be chosen in June, and the impossibility of inducing the Free-State men to vote when they are sure to be overborne by fraud. His remarks were received with great enthusiasm.

Rev. E. NUTE followed in a few earnest, well timed words, when the President of the evening, in response to the call of the meeting, addressed the people. He showed that nothing remained for the people of Kansas but to organize the Free-State Government, and put it into vital operation by peaceful voluntary action; that, standing on that ground, they could secure their rights and shew the country their overwhelming strength, and so gain admission to the Union, according to the earnest wish of the vast majority of the actual citizens of Kansas, as a vital Free State.

Mr. PHILLIPS made the closing speech of the evening.

Troubles of the Jobbers—Swindling in the Forwarding Trade.

The subject of complaint in the letter below is one which has long annoyed our jobbers, and perhaps, as much as any one other thing, tended at times to turn Western merchants to other marts than this for the purchase of goods. We have no reason to suspect, however, that the "shaving" is any worse on the Railroad lines that lead from New-York, than on those that run west from Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore. But be that as it may, the grievence is patent and the swindle outrageous.

By resolution of the Hardware-Dealers' Board of trade, a Committee of active gentlemen have been appointed to look up the matter and suggest methods of relief. The following circular has been addressed to the hardware trade generally, and to a few houses in other branches of business, by the Board:

[BY ORDER.]

HARDWARE-DEALERS' BOARD OF TRADE.

Mr. _____

With this please receive a Circular, issued by the Hardware-Dealers' Board of Trade, designed to elicit reliable information as to the promptness or otherwise, of the forwarders of goods from this City, with the view of insuring a more speedy delivery of goods than now, at the places on or at the terminus of their respective lines, especially those to be shipped for places west of the Lakes, by enabling us to recommend to purchasers of goods in this market, only those lines that are ascertained to be the most prompt, and thus to avoid the serious delays to which such purchasers are so commonly subjected, to the detriment of the jobbing trade of the City.

You will oblige the Board by sending this Circular to your customers, and preserving their replies, and by either transmitting the latter when received to the undersigned, or by collating the information yourself and sending to me the result.

Very respectfully yours,
J. DAVENPORT, Secretary, No. 10 Platt-street.

[CIRCULAR.]

BY RESOLUTION OF THE HARDWARE-DEALERS' BOARD OF TRADE.

NEW-YORK, ——, 185 .

Mr. _____

Annexed please find a certificate in blank, which please fill up, and forward to us by mail, with as little delay as practicable.

Your compliance with this request will enable us to impart information which will be useful to you and others in selecting the most reliable line and route for the safe and expeditious transportation of goods to your place.

Respectfully yours, _____

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Among the many difficulties which the jobbers in the City of New-York have to contend with is the difficulty, I might say almost impossibility, of having their goods transported to their places of destination in a reasonable length of time and at the advertised rates. They are constantly subject to overcharges both in weight and price. Bills of lading are signed, on the back of which is a printed list of articles to be taken as first, second, third and fourth class, and the price put down in the body of the receipt for the different classes of freight.

The agents, on pretence of not knowing the contents, even when they are plainly marked on the packages, and, in numerous cases under my own observation, when goods are shipped loose, (such as rope, fence-wire, shovels, scythes, &c.,) charge the freight at the price of the higher class, and put down the weight 10 to 20 per cent. more than it should be.

This is done with impunity, as the agents here well know that the sufferers cannot afford to remain in New-York to prosecute their just claims for overcharge, the amount not generally being sufficient in any one instance to repay them for their time and expense.

The objection is constantly made by Western merchants that for these reasons they prefer to purchase most of their heavy goods in Western cities, even at an advanced price.

The tardy manner in which goods are transported, the too frequent delays to which they are subject, the lines frequently taking four, five, and even six weeks to carry them to Chicago, is also cause of much complaint and of much injury to the trade of our City.

The jobbers of this City should no longer delay action in this matter, and, if possible, remedy the evil. I am very glad to learn that the Hardware Board of Trade are moving in the matter, and endeavoring to find out from their customers which lines are the most prompt in the delivery of goods consigned to them, and the most honorable in their dealings with their customers. I hope the grocers, dry goods and other dealers will also look into the matter, and I trust they will find among the numerous freighting lines some honorable exceptions.

As this is a matter that interests our whole business community, as well as the railroad and freighting lines themselves, I trust you will allow this communication an insertion in your influential journal.

ORDER COMING OUT OF ANARCHY.

THE POLICE COMMISSION.

New Station-Houses Established.

Large Acquisitions from the Fifth and Ninth Wards.

CAPTAINS TRIED, SPEECHES MADE, &c., &c.

The Fleet and Force Sail for Seguine's Point.

QUARANTINE PROSPECTS.

Judge Birdseye Charges for the Excise and Police Laws.

The new Police Commissioners have opened temporary Station houses in the Ninth and Fifth Wards, and promise to open stations in all the other Wards as soon as possible. The policemen in each Ward will be then formally notified to report themselves at the new Station-houses. Such as refuse, they say, will be peremptorily dismissed.

Pursuant to instructions from head-quarters Sergeant HUTCHINGS, of the Fifth Ward, (removed by the old Board for insubordination,) proceeded to the Fifth Ward Station-house at the Wednesday sun-down roll call. He was received warmly by his old associates, who were soon apprised of the object of his visit. Lieut. MARTIN was in command at the time, and he and Mr. HUTCHINGS had a friendly consultation. The rattle was sprung at 7½ o'clock, and, in answer to its call, several of the night platoon came forward. The Sergeant was absent, and one other member was reported as having a sore foot. The roll having been called, Mr. HUTCHINGS, who stood behind the railings, turned to the men and said:

"GENTLEMEN: As your commanding officer, I have to inform you that in accordance with instructions from the Deputy Superintendent, I shall, at 8 o'clock to-night, call the roll of the members of the Fifth Precinct at the Station-house, which is in the old Empire Bank, at the corner of Duane and Greenwich streets. As your commanding officer,

NEW SCHOOL ASSEMBLY AT CLEVELAND.

A Burlesque upon the South—Continuance of the Slavery Excitement.

From the Cleveland Plaindealer,

EIGHTH DAY....FRIDAY, May 29.

Rev. Mr. CORWINE, of California, addressed the Assembly in a jocose way, and concluded by offering the following resolutions as representing the extreme Southern view. He did not present them for action:

Resolved, That this Assembly express their devout thankfulness in view of the fact that the vexed question of Slavery has at length been settled to the satisfaction of all good men, justifying the entire system upon the soundest Biblical interpretation by the highest judicial tribunals, and by the voice of the people, which is the voice of God.

Resolved, That we deprecate the wide-spread Atheism prevailing in many of the Churches at the North, where, according to common fame, church members are still fellowshipped and held to be in good and regular standing who are so ignorant or so perverse as to avow their belief in the "glittering generalities" and "enlisted abstractions" of that infamous document known as the Declaration of American Independence.

Resolved, That with shame and confusion of face we confess the complicity of WITHERSPOON and his compatriots, the Fathers of the American Presbyterian Church, with the atheistic principles avowed in that accursed document; and since the iniquities of the fathers are visited upon the children to the third and fourth generations, and there is no evidence that they ever repented of their sins, we hold it to be the duty of this Church now to repent in their behalf, and so may this most terrible of all heresies, Atheism, be purged from our midst.

Resolved, That while we regard all politics as belonging, not to the things which concern the Christian, but to the within the province of the Devil, since whatever is of him is not of grace, we beg pardon for encroaching upon his jurisdiction, so far as to express our unqualified approval of the doctrine of the Supreme Court that the negro is not a man, and that the black man has no rights that a white man ought to respect. Recognizing the said Court as the highest judicial authority known to this Church for the interpretation of the Constitution, we gladly accept their decision with all its consequences, logical and practical, be the same more or less. And we solemnly enjoin all our fanatical brethren who have hitherto desecrated the sacred desk by appeals for the liberation and elevation of the blacks, that they desist from further insane efforts to educate, to emancipate, to colonize, or to evangelize them.

Resolved, That our mission as ministers and elders of the Church of Christ, is a mission to men and not to chattels, whether brutes or things, and hence it becomes a desecration of sacred rights to administer them to mere sable burlesques upon humanity.

Resolved, That we glory in the spirit of that chivalric Presbytery which thundered down the gauntlet, assumes the position and responsibility of the dead, assails its compliarity with chattel slavery and defies the General Assembly to proceed to discipline them—in other words, come into Court, boldly confess their criminality, and beg leave to be hanged without the benefit of clergy.

Resolved, That we hail with gratitude the rising star of Empire in Utah, and rejoice in the establishment of a patriarchal institution kindred to that which is secured by the blessing pronounced upon Ham, and defended upon precisely the same principles.

The Assembly adjourned until 7½ o'clock.

From the Leader.

THE SLAVERY DEBATE.

Speeches in defence of Slavery were made by ORLANDO HASTINGS, of Rochester, New-York, and by Rev. ASCHER C. DICKERSON, of Kentucky.

Mr. DICKERSON insisted that the Assembly should ignore the subject as having no authority to act thereon. If a majority of the Assembly usurp that authority, it will only compel the churches of a section to withdraw from the benefits of the compact. When I became a minister, the organ of the church entered into a solemn agreement to preserve to me those rights contained in the Constitution. When I entered upon the ministry, I was implicated in the institution of slavery. I was not then told it would impair my usefulness or happiness as a minister, or endanger my connection with the church. Until it is shown that this organic law gives you such authority, I urge that you have no right to take such a course that will deprive me of my inalienable rights. Tell me not that this General Assembly has expressed its opinions on slaveholding. That very thing was a usurpation of power not granted by the Constitution and totally unauthorized. If you wish to modify the organic law of that compact, do it in the right way. Send an overture to your Presbyteries that slave-holding is unlawful and unscriptural. That will settle the question. But as to the present action it would be wrong, and if the Assembly presses it, the whole proceeding will be in the nature of an ex post facto law.

BROKEN TRADE OF NO CONSEQUENCE.

This was Mr. DICKERSON'S constitutional argument. He then proceeded to examine the teachings of the Scriptures on slaveholding, taking strong Southern ground. Lastly, he reviewed the results of the agitation of this question: 1, on the negro race; 2, on the fraternal correspondence with cognate churches; 3, on the personal relations of the ministry; 4, on the public respect for the Bible and the Gospel of Christ. He enlarged on these points to some length. He asked just before closing, why did not the preachers of the Gospel of the North preach to the negro race in the South.

VOICE—Can't preach the whole Gospel there for fear of our heads.

Mr. DICKERSON—Well, Sir, no heads have ever been lost there. But the brother ought to remember that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church. [Laughter.]

Mr. D. then proceeded to rate soundly the cowardly spirit that would not preach the Gospel through fear of bodily harm.

Rev. Mr. SEELYE, of Albany, N. Y., speaking upon the motion to postpone the report of the Committee on Bills and Overtures, said, in reply to Mr. DICKERSON, of Kentucky, that he was glad to be able to say that his respect for his Southern brethren had been greatly increased during the session of the General Assembly. They have been frank and manly in defining their position upon this question—nor can they be accused of a lack of courtesy in conducting it. He was glad that there was no great degree of excitement manifested on either side, and all seemed disposed to look at the subject coolly and dispassionately. He was glad to see such a Christian spirit.

He thought that Brother DICKERSON had made the strongest argument that could be made on his side of the question, and in it the position taken by the South had been most ably presented. But they were called upon to argue the question upon both sides, and present reasons on both sides. He proposed briefly to review the positions taken by Mr. DICKERSON.

1. That this General Assembly has no right to deal with the subject of Slavery according to the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church.

2. The sacred Scriptures gave no warrant thus to deal with Slavery.

3. That the agitation of the Slavery question in the North renders it improper for the Assembly to deal with it, even if they had a right so to do.

MR. ROSS AND MAN-STEALING.

Dr. ROSS had endeavored to make it appear that slaveholding was not man stealing, but had failed to do so in his letter on man-stealing. He did not know as that was what Dr. ROSS called the letter. (Dr. ROSS—"You are perfectly right.") Mr. SEELYE never had been able to understand how the passage of stolen property through any number of hands could give a just and valid title. If a man should steal a horse, and should sell him to another man, and that man should sell again till any number of sales had been effected, the title never could be made good. If the original title was bad, no amount of transfer, based upon that title, could make it good. The same rule would hold with a man as with a horse. If a man bought a horse which he knew to have been originally stolen, he would be considered as culpable as if he had committed the theft himself. The same rule would also apply to a man. The guilt of man-stealing was clearly incurred in holding slaves.

Dr. ROSS—Has the gentleman read my letter?

Mr. SEELYE—I have—the whole of it, carefully.

Dr. ROSS—Will the gentleman answer to the points made in that letter?"

Mr. SEELYE would answer to all the points of principle—he did not care to take up mere assertion, and reply with counter assertion.

Here Dr. ROSS again interrupted the speaker, and was called to order.

Mr. SEELYE rested his argument upon two points:

1. That the slaves in the South were undeniably stolen from Africa, and that consequently the original kidnappers had no right or title to them as property whatsoever.

2. That the original title being bad- no amount of sale, transfer or lapse of time could possibly make that title good—the property was still stolen property.

NOT POLITICAL—BUT CHRISTIAN.

The brother had said that this was a political matter, and not proper for the consideration of the church. He had no confidence in any power outside of the Almighty. Nothing but the power of God through this church, would ever break down the power of avarice and selfishness—nothing except the precepts of Christ would ever loosen the grasp of the tyrant upon his victim. The cry of the slave went up to the throne of God, and from God, and not from political parties, must come the answer to his petition. If that cry was rendered more piercing because of the agitation at the North, it was no reason why that agitation should be discontinued. With that cry was blended the earnest supplications, all the more earnest on account of this agitation, of the thousands whose sympathy had been aroused and increased by the discussion of the subject. He felt that this agitation would yet prove to be blessed for the North, and for the South, and blessed for the church.

"WIRING IN, AND WIRING OUT."

Rev. T. H. CLELAND, of Ky., said he perfectly agreed with the brother last up as to the ende desirable—the principal difference was as to the means best calculated to secure those ends. Their purposes were similar, but they differed as to the means of carrying them out. The brother had a great deal of sympathy for the slave, standing, as he did, a great way off; but they (the Southern preachers) went to them, preached to them, and knew their circumstances and necessities better. His brother had no more ardent desire for their final emancipation than himself. He was opposed to the report of the Committee because it proposed to pursue the same line of policy which had been pursued for a long time with the most disastrous results. It resembled the attempt of a politician to form a platform that both sides could stand upon. It did not satisfy the South nor the North. It was Janus faced, looking two ways, and reminded him of the lines of Hudibras:

> "He wired in, and wired out,
> And let the people still in doubt,
> Whether the snake that made the track
> Was going south, or coming back."

STILL ANOTHER SUBSTITUTE.

Professor H. B. ALLEN, of Cincinnati, requested leave to read the following paper as a substitute for the report of the Committee, and in place of the one offered by Mr. CUTLER. He did not bring it before the house for action then, but wished to read it, that they might have it to think of between then and Monday, which was granted:

The General Assembly, in view of the memorials before them and of the present relations of the Church to the subject of Slavery, feel called upon to make the following exposition of principle and duty.

We consider the holding and treating of human beings as property, according to the spirit and design of the Slave laws in the Southern States of our country, as clearly involving the sin of oppression.

The elements and ordinary developments of this sin are such as the following:

1. The withholding from man, without unavoidable necessity, of the natural right personal liberty.

2. The neglect of appropriate efforts to deliver the slave as speedily as practicable from the fearful liabilities to which he is exposed while still held in bondage.

3. The exaction of services without end just or adequate compensation.

4. The buying or selling of slaves for gain.

5. The separation of families and the practical abrogation of the marriage relation.

6. The exercise of cruelty towards slaves in the infliction of punishment, and the laying on of grievous burdens.

7. Neglect of the spiritual interests of the slave, and especially of that careful instruction in the Word of God, to which he is entitled.

Any one of these facts involves, in our judgment, a breach of the great requirement, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." We do not, indeed, pronounce a sentence of indiscriminate condemnation upon all our brethren who are unfortunately connected with the system of Slavery. We tenderly sympathize with all those who deplore the evil, and are honestly doing all in their power for the present well-being of their slaves, and for their complete emancipation. We would aid and not embarrass such brethren. And yet, in the language of the General Assembly of 1818, we would "earnestly warn them against unduly extending the plea of necessity; against making it a cover for the love and practice of Slavery, or a pretence for not using efforts that are lawful and practicable to extinguish this evil."

The Presbyterian Church in these United States has ever maintained the views which are here expressed on this subject, from her very infancy down to the present time, as clearly appears from her testimonies in 1787, 1818, 1846, 1849, and 1850. And it is with deep grief that we now discover that a portion of the Church at the South has so far departed from the established doctrine of the Church in relation to Slavery as to maintain that "it is an ordinance of God," and that the system of Slavery existing in these United States is scriptural and right. Against this new and alarming doctrine we feel constrained to hear our solemn testimony. It is a new thing in the whole spirit and tenor of the Gospel of love and good will, as well as abhorrent to the conscience of the Christian world. We can have no sympathy or fellowship with it; and we exhort all our people to eschew it as a serious and pernicious error.

We are especially pained by the fact that the Presbytery of Lexington, South, have given official notice to us that a number of ministers and ruling elders, as well as many church members in their connection, hold slaves "from principle" and "of choice," "believing it to be acordieg to the Bible right," and have, without any qualifying explanation, assumed the responsibility of sustaining such ministers, elders and church members in their position. We deem it our duty, in the exercise of our constitutional authority, "to bear testimony against error in doctrine or immorality in practice in any Church, Presbytery or Synod," to disapprove and earnestly condemn the position which has been thus assumed by the Presbytery of Lexington, South, as one which is utterly opposed to the established convictions of the Presbyterian Church, and must operate to mar its peace and seriously hinder its prosperity, as well as bring reproach on our holy religion; and we do hereby call on that Presbytery to review and correct their position. Such doctrines and practice cannot be permenently tolerated in the Presbyterian Church. May they speedily melt away under the illuminating and mellowing influence of the Gospel and grace of God our Saviour.

In conclusion, the Assembly call the attention of the Publication Committee to this subject, and recommend the publication, in a convenient form, of the entire testimony of the Presbyterian Church touching this subject, at the earliest practicable period.

The Assembly then adjourned.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Ingraham

Russell & Erwin, Manufacturing Company, vs. Hargreaves & Smith.—In this cause (the facts of which were stated yesterday) the Jury brought in a verdict for plaintiffs for $1,010.

SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

Ann M. Sharp vs. Augustus N. Sharp.—Referred to Charles E. Sheer, Esq.

John C. Donnell vs. Bernard Clark.—Motion for the appointment of a receiver granted.

Albert L. Catlin vs. John W. Latson et al.—Motion to open default granted on payment of costs and disbursements.

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

Interesting Statements Concerning Mrs. Cunningham's Marriage—Curious and Contradictory Affidavits—More Evidence Bearing upon this Strange Mystery.

This investigation was resumed yesterday morning before the Surrogate—A. W. BRADFORD, Esq. Mrs. Cunningham was present.

Mr. Edwards said that he desired to move for a commission.

The Surrogate desired to postpone that motion until the witnesses who have come from abroad to give their testimony, were examined.

Judge Dean said that before any papers were read, he would like to see if they were copies of those which had been served upon them. He perceived that they were, and objected to the motion on the ground that the clerk omitted to give his official designation, as provided by the statute. He referred to the case of Root vs. Burkerks, 3 Cainea 128:

"It was ruled in this cause, that the jurats of affidavits taken before judges of the Common Pleas, or Commissioners, must be signed by them, with the addition of their official descriptions—Judges of the Common Pleas to style themselves such and Commissioners to specify that they are so."

He next quoted 1st Burrill's Practice:

"The official designation must be added if not taken before a Judge of the Court."

Also, 2 R. S. 284, sec. 49, is a statute regulation as to the persons who may take, "and when certified by any such officer to have been taken before him, may be read," &c. And 1st Denio, 283: "This paper was not an affidavit; it lacked vitality. It was indispensable that it should appear to have been duly made and taken before a competent officer."

The Surrogate said that he should pay no attention to the objection; but if he concluded to use the affidavits he would see that they were hereafter properly certified.

Mr. Edwards, in support of his application, then read the following affidavits:

AFFIDAVIT OF WILLIAM HYDE

Tioga County, ss:—William Hyde, of the Village of Owego, in said County, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he is the father of Whitehead C. Hyde, of California, and of Abram F. Hyde, of Owego.

That Whitehead C. Hyde has for some 10 or 12 years last past resided in the Republic of Mexico, and in the State of California; that for the last four years said W. C. Hyde has frequently written to some member of deponent's family, and that the most of the letters received from said W. C. Hyde deponent has seen and heard read; that for the last six months deponent's family have received letters from said W. C. Hyde as often as once a month; that said letters have been written to A. F. Hyde, Martha Hall, the daughter of deponent, and Joseph B. Upham, son in law of deponent, but mostly to A. F. Hyde.

Deponent further says, that in a letter received by said Abram F. Hyde from W. C. Hyde, more than one year ago, said W. C. Hyde spoke of having received a letter from an old female friend of his, Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham, and stated that she was boarding at No. 31 Bond-street, New-York, and requested A. F. Hyde to call upon her at that place; that in nearly every letter received from said W. C. Hyde since the letter above mentioned, said W. C. Hyde has spoken of Mrs Cunningham, and also frequently spoke of receiving letters from her; that in a letter received by said A. F. Hyde from said W. C. Hyde in the Fall of 1856, said W. C. Hyde stated that Mrs. Cunningham was soon intending to take a tour West, and would call upon deponent's family on her way West; that deponent is not acquainted with Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham, nor has he ever seen, nor is any member of deponent's family acquainted with her, nor has any member thereof except A. F. Hyde, who, as deponent is informed and believes, had once seen her at Locada Hyde's in Brooklyn,) ever seen said Emma A. Cunningham to deponent's knowledge.
